Antifascist Anarcho-Syndicalism Has Entered the Chat

Political commentary from an extreme leftist, antifascist, anarcho-syndicalist. Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles, NYC hold the line.

Antifascist anarcho-syndicalism is a political ideology that combines anarcho-syndicalism with anti-fascism, using worker-led trade unions as the vehicle for both direct action against fascism and the creation of a stateless, classless society.

It believes that fascist states are an extension of capitalism and the state and rejects all hierarchical authority, instead favoring worker self-management and direct action to achieve social revolution. Historical examples include Spanish anarchists who fought against Franco's fascist regime during the Spanish Civil War.

Core principles

- Anarcho-syndicalism: A revolutionary, anarchist form of trade unionism that seeks to replace capitalism and the state with a society based on workers' self-management.
- Anti-fascism: The active and direct opposition to fascism, viewed as an oppressive, late-stage form of capitalism and the state.
- Solidarity: The principle of collective action and mutual aid among workers and oppressed groups to counter power imbalances.
- Direct action: The use of methods like strikes, boycotts, and sabotage to achieve goals, rather than relying on political parties or parliamentary systems.
- Worker self-management: The belief that workers should control their own workplaces and that society should be run by decentralized, federated councils of delegates.

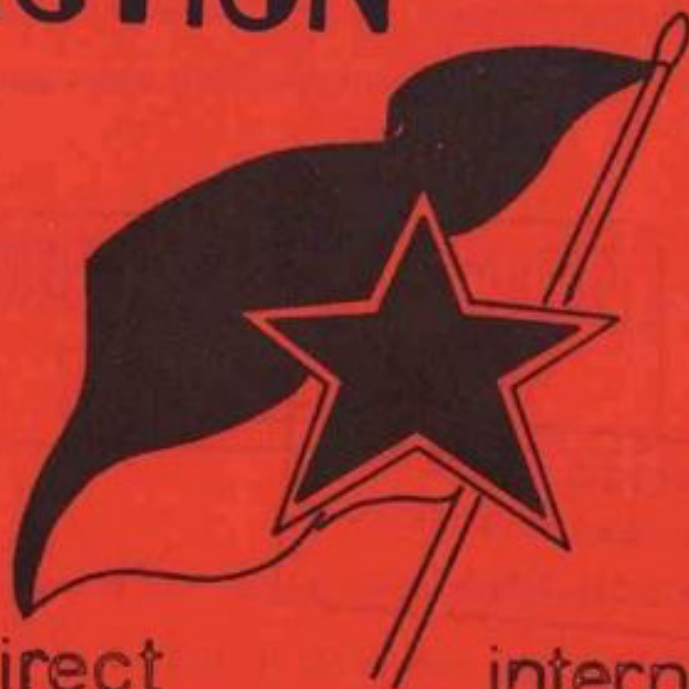

Historical context

- Spanish Civil War: Anarcho-syndicalist unions like the Spanish CNT played a significant role in fighting against Francisco Franco's fascist forces alongside other anti-fascist groups.
- Weimar Germany: Anarcho-syndicalists recognized early on that the rising fascism was tied to an authoritarian, late-stage capitalism and worked to oppose it.

The Great Gatsby and Mamdani's Wife

- A Summary of American Politics from 2015-2025

The news cycle has been spiraling overwhelmingly this year and going to college full-time while also working leaves little time for doom scrolling.

In the last days something caught my eye. I saw a book in the news that I wrote about to symbolize class warfare in high school and college. I also noticed for the first time a politician's wife who shares my fashion sense. The book is The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald and the wife is of the DSA New York mayoral candidate Zohran Kwame Mamdani.

I saw someone comment that: "42 million Americans lost food assistance today, but the Lobster Thermidor and champagne was flowing at Mar-a-Lago" tonight.

The Great Gatsby

Another person wrote that: "Trumpism is a DEI program for criminals and morons, and those taken in by the new widespread nostalgia for 1920-1930's robber barons are about to learn only 0.001% of the population enjoyed the benefits" therein.

The Great Gatsby

Interesting sentiments as those are major themes of The Great Gatsby and I guess one could say we now face a similar financial climate as the era that led to The Great Depression.

Raise Penalty on Drunkenness, Firearms; Receive Heating Bids for City

One of the final steps of the 1929 city paving program was cleared up last night at the city council meeting when an ordinance was passed to second reading providing for the issuance and sale of bonds to provide funds for improvement unit 83.

This was one of the largest improvement projects ever undertaken by the city and includes the macadamizing of streets in Mills first and second additions, and Barrow addition. Work on this unit is now going forward in order to have as much of it completed as possible before winter weather starts.

Check Attempts Fail

From the opening until the closing some attempted the trading the prices were below Saturday's last prices. For a brief interval around 1:30 support developed, but it was short lived. Bankers could not take all the stock offered. They abandoned the attempt, permitting prices to seek their own levels, which were only downward. The majority closed on the lows of the day.

I had not paid much attention to Mamdani or his campaign until I saw his wife. I do not live in NYC and I have always registered Green. I have no qualms with the DSA other than I would have preferred more action and less talk considering the media buzz that they generated with Bernie Sanders who I supported.

Performative politics can be effective but without actual reform and action it's useless. I suppose they gave it their best shot but all in all it was pretty disappointing considering that they had the opportunity to codify Roe vs Wade, erase College Loan Debt, establish Universal Basic Income, Universal Healthcare. DSA needed to keep campaign promises of a Democratic Socialist not get into useless verbal battles with MAGA. I lost interest in the DSA once I saw AOC continue to return fire with MAGA. Politically you want certain people to disagree even despise your politics, otherwise what is the point.

When I saw AOC responding to MAGA hatred I was disheartened. Who cares what they think, and why would you respond to someone vested in misunderstanding you? It was the arguing with a pig analogy; the pig loves it and you both get dirty. She was allowing herself to get dragged down to their level. It made no sense to me and eventually came off as a prop to keep her from actually keeping the campaign promises she ran on as a DSA candidate. I focused instead on Extinction Rebellion which was a growing movement I saw a future for. I had worked at Greenpeace International in Los Angeles and Greenpeace USA in San Francisco and continued to support their direct action efforts.

The actual Left have begged the Right to learn what all of those words mean. The Left have asked Democrats to correct the Right but they refused and use the ignorance to their advantage. Every Democratic Socialist elected including Mamdani (especially Mamdani) will tell you that no one hates the Left more than moderate Liberal Democrats.

It would surprise Republican (voters) not the leadership who are very aware. If MAGA were told that Democrats hate leftists more than they hate Republicans it would surprise them. Moderate liberals or progressives, or the self-titled neoliberals have more in common with the Right than they do the Left. When Antifa was at its peak, it was the Democrats who spent all of its time condemning Antifa and asking them to please not hurt the poor nazis. Andy Ngo gave more power to the Democratic Party than probably any other singular entity outside of the Republicans who use them as controlled opposition. The Democrats hate Antifa and they hate pro-Palestinian movements.

Working Class: Help Us Please

Democrats: No ❤️ 🏳️‍🌈 #blm

What if we told you it was the same party?

The Democrats hate socialism and any form of communism. Liberals do not support the DSA they consider them a threat and try to disenfranchise them every chance they get.

Not understanding how the DNC works or how the Electoral College works and that despite gerrymandering the DSA still hold on to its electorates is not something the Left can communicate to the Right who are vested in not hearing. This was a huge fumble on the Right's part but since they do not look at news outside of their political bubble and the Left always does oppo research it was unavoidable.

Under the cloak of being called Leftist (who they hate) the Democrats were able to do much damage. Obama was the quintessential progressive liberal; drone bombed Yemen, prosecuted more whistleblowers than any other president in history, did zero for the black community, said he came for the middle class (dog whistle for white people) wore suits smiled. The Left asked him to codify Roe vs Wade, and add another Supreme Court Justice. They also asked Biden at which time the DNC blamed the Left for not having enough justices after Trump won.

It is one sick humiliation ritual for the Democrats. Hilary stole Bernie's delegates votes at the DNC. Kettled the DSA delegates and threatened to have them arrested. She did not win the nomination legally, Bernie won. She was not the democratic candidate legally. The DNC later took his fundraising list and gave it to Hilary. The smear campaign on Green Party candidate Jill Stein was probably the DNC's biggest victory. Green Party has been their biggest rivalry and accused of stealing their votes and impeding democracy.

If the Democrats do not win any Independent party who stands in their way is a threat to be eliminated. They would rather side with the Right and Republicans than let a Leftist enemy succeed. The DNC use the Right to achieve this agenda and most Republican voters do not realize they are being used because they focus on race not class warfare.

11/15/16: "Bernie delegates stormed Media Row & DNC commanded that all Bernie Sanders delegates be locked down by the police"

DNC Are Mafia

This DNC delegate stealing is what Republicans accused Kamala Harris of but the DNC did actually ask the DSA delegates this election who said she could go f*ck herself but at least they asked. The DNC also ignored the Independents on the ballot which included a Green Party candidate as usual. Every candidate has to earn delegates to get on the ballot and every election the DNC rides roughshod and starts attacking third parties claiming only the DNC win or democracy will die.

On the sidelines we have the Right calling these liberals who are incompetent psychos the Left, Communist, Socialist, and radicals when the DNC are secretly impaling the actual leaders of those parties so that they stay hidden. It is basically a nightmare that we have managed to sidestep and overcome.

Biden was the closest president to a Trump like figure that the Democrats have ever had and I do not think that Republicans really understand that. Whatever qualities you think that Trump has that is how the DNC saw Biden. The Biden regime went after the Left with a vengeance and ultimately this is why Kamala could garner no support from Independents and why the DSA has made a sweep on the ballots and hopefully win the elections with Mamdani. Not knowing what the other side is up to gives Republicans time to focus on their own issues but on the other side of the aisle we know what Republicans are up to and we have the lived experience of Democrats.

Democrats forced Bernie to publicly endorse Biden. He refused the first time and the DNC threatened him a second time to bring his base into line and endorse Biden. Even after being told that Bernie endorsing Biden did not mean the DSA was endorsing Biden or eventually endorsing Kamala.

Whenever the propaganda machine talk about Democrats they call them “The Left” and the Democrats laugh under their breath. Every polarizing issue in the last 10 years has been about the Left vs the Right. And the radical liberal agenda which refers to the Democrats who may be to the left of Republicans but they are not the Left.

The Left are the people you see protesting and heckling Kamala Harris and Biden. Republicans probably have not noticed protestors being dragged out and even condemned by Democrats. Yes the Left are Antifa, and Portland fighting ICE nude on Bikes or dressed as furries. No the Left are not No Kings, that is controlled opposition and those are Democrats. Even the compromised DSA Squad in the White House like AOC condemned the leftist pro-Palestinian protestors for making a stir at the Kamala talks. That is the Left you see who keep getting arrested wherever the Democratic leadership is speaking. But the media has control of this narrative so most of the Right are blissfully unaware of this nuance. It is ironic but slightly humorous that the DNC can use this ignorance to their advantage.

COINTELPRO Have Come For The Right

Democrats have made sure this Jeans vs Genes controversy only runs in The Right Wing algorithm. It showed up once on the Socialist Dem side as a Mamdani’s Wife vs the Jeans lady and everyone said they are both beautiful in their own way and who cares anyways. Major fumble by the liberals who had not wanted the DSA to see that meme or interview in their algo. I had not seen this meme, ad or discussion once in the left or even Dems algo. Not sure how it got into the DSA algo. Since Mamdani’s wife is central the liberals are trying to get the Left’s name dragged into the jeans commercial which no one on the Left has known about or ever responded too because the Democrats problems are not our problems. Data Science for an algorithm driven age requires finding out who is the intended target of an inorganically created algorithm pattern.

That was always a manufactured rivalry. No one ever said anything on the left about that commercial. That was like No Kings —completely a Democrats event. Yet the Right report on it like look at the Left look at those radical socialist communist and like Get Out the Democrats eat it up. They are totally insane. Just watching them I literally laughed out loud. But the right doesn't know any better they honestly think the democrats are radicals. Not realizing they are just moderate liberals who are one vote away from being Republicans. The Democrats are trying to drag DSA into the Jeans vs Genes debate by saying now "Mamdani's wife looks better than the Jeans actress" —to which the Left promptly replied who the f*ck cares. It hasn't even been in the liberals newsfeed, so it looks like cointelpro has come for the Right since it is only in their newsfeed. The liberals will continue to pretend that the Left are involved somehow at least to the Rights knowledge. I didn't know who the actress was for the longest time.

I guess no algorithm I interacted with put her in my feeds. I still do not really know who she is or what she does. I do not have time for cable, TV, TikTok or any extra media. Right now it is work and school, music and I watch surfing. I go sailing, surfing, and fishing for fun. Is she a singer, an actress, a dancer, an author, TV, movie? I don't know because a Democrat liberal psyop is the most boring thing to watch Republicans fall for its sleep inducing. Whoever this one is the Dems have the Right race baited as always. Just like the Right leadership will tell the Right voters it is about race. Both parties share that quality. The objective reality is it is actually about class but that is not as engaging. I saw weeks ago or was it months, whenever the ad came out, that it was jeans vs genes and I already knew it was about class.

It reminded me of the old Jessica Simpson commercials that I used once for a Basel Film School media for the masses project. The two slides were: “Chicken of the Sea” and an Ice Breakers ad. Chicken of the Sea was from the 2003 MTV show The Newlyweds, where Jessica Simpson asks if the tuna she is eating is chicken or tuna because the brand is called Chicken of the Sea. Her affable husband Nick just smiles Oh Jessica you are a dumb blonde Country & Western singer but that is why I love you. Jessica Simpson: Chicken of The Sea Rewind In my presentation I demonstrate how this is a good question is it chicken or tuna. It is sold as “chicken of the sea” so which one is it? Because she is a working class blonde woman from the south and also very attractive the audience are conditioned to laugh and say this is a stupid question.

On a deeper level the media reinforces that because this person is southern, working class and not college educated the American audience is conditioned to believe that she cannot teach us anything. These slides work equally well in rural communities in Hawaii in rancher towns on the Big Island of Hawaii or cowboy towns on Molokai or Kauai so it is not race related.

Even in Hawaii where local people speak pidgin on all islands, if you advertise something as “chicken of the sea” do not be surprised if a more down to earth person wants to know if it is chicken or tuna? For white people in Hawaii they view this as simple minded but again Hawaiian people can hunt deer, wild pigs and also fish using traditional methods so if there is a crisis the white people cannot take care of themselves so a college education is rendered useless.

This is a class system where the educated classes view themselves as superior but in comparison to what? Relative to survival the hunter gatherer is the superior intellect. If you convince the sustenance farmer that you the banker or superior you have class warfare.

In this way the Jessica Simpson commercials are not unlike the Penny character from the show The Big Bang Theory.

The shows entire subtext is that in many ways a friendly, warm, supportive, high school educated, blond, female farmer and fisher, Penny from North Dakota, is more intelligent and resourceful and therefore a net positive to society than the nerdy, dark haired, one Indian, neurotic scientists from Caltech. Because she is not overburdened by book knowledge. The working class contribute more to society than the intelligent classes.

The next slide I show is for the ad Ice Breakers.

In this ad, Jessica Simpson with her sister Ashlee wants to know about this new gum called Liquid Ice. Jessica wants to know is it liquid or ice? Exhausted, the sister is queried intelligently. The subtext is about the periodic table alluding to Mercury being a metal that is liquid at room temperature, but it can become a solid at very low temperatures or a gas if heated. The audience is again conditioned to believe that an attractive blonde woman is too dumb to just accept the gum is called Liquid Ice and she is set-up to be the familiar punchline. Only by this time the “Chicken of The Sea” ad had already gone viral and Ice Breaker took advantage of it’s popularity to use Jessica to turn the tables on her audience and wink that she knows that Mercury is a liquid and a solid. This time the message is maybe a farmer can teach you something.

The Democrats, their audience, and MAGA which is who this GQ interview is specifically targeted for should know that anything that has to do with jeans is about class. The Great Gatsby is literally the subtext of this interview. Jeans had already been invented during the Gold Rush and Jay Gatsby would not have been caught dead in a pair of jeans. The DNC told

MAGA it was about race and will have them frothing over it for a good six months maybe longer. Whatever the Democrats and Republicans (the Uniparty) are trying to distract MAGA from it seems to be working.

Neutered MAGA

MAGA are neutralized as both parties strip them and their families of healthcare. Many of the psyops lately have Republican backing as well but I suppose eventually the next two generations will learn more about how the two parties work together. It will probably be too late as they have been conditioned to believe that the liberals want them dead even as the Republicans hold the gun to their head while the Democrats hand them bullets.

It is a classic liberal ploy almost as manipulative as making the Right believe that ineffectual Schumer, Pelosi, Fetterman, Sinema progressive moderate liberals are really Bernie, Mamdani radical left socialist communists types. When that is who they hunt and hate. The enemy of Democrats is not the Republicans, the enemy of Democrats is the Left. Since many of the Left do not shop at American Eagle lately (I still do because I have long legs and they are the only brand for long legs) and the Democrats know that the Left won't get involved with the AE scandal so it is perfect for them.

I was not receiving any Jeans vs Genes content because it was in the Hollywood stars algorithm that I have banned from all my socials and filtered out of every app I use. I grew up in Los Angeles and those are not the actual celebrities talking. Their agents and managers do all of the talking for them. In the Cancel Culture decade things have changed and we live in a Stasi era of East Germany.

American Eagle Ad Class War

Sydney Sweeney for American Eagle 2025

Under the guise of being called the Left, the Democrats set up their psyop — the “jeans vs genes” is the “working class born or upper class born” question. It is the question of the title character of The Great Gatsby. Gatsby’s original name was James Gatz, a penniless farmer’s son from North Dakota. He changed his name to Jay Gatsby at age 17 to create a new identity and pursue a life of wealth and status after meeting wealthy yachtsman Dan Cody.

When Trump had his Gatsby themed soiree at Mar-a-Lago it was considered tone deaf to use a Great Depression era unequal wealth distribution example when we are actually living through one. Palm Beach, Florida is not Manhattan and free buses is not Communism but I guess it doesn’t matter when class warfare cannot be seen in even a simple interview with an actress.

That is what the Democrats are trying to say to their MAGA audience with this Jay Gatsby actress whoever she is or represents to the Right. It is not about race it is about class during the Great Depression. The Democrats twisted contorted face is the same one they use on the Left and yes it is repulsive and makes you want to punch and kick it.

Since we have grown up with their face and the Democrats. The Left know they once just agreed with any Republican arresting any leftist in Portland, Manhattan, Davis, or Berkeley for being Antifa. Now for defying AIPAC. Once for hurting precious nazis. Now the Left are restrained at the moment from fighting AIPAC. The face in the interview is not shocking. The Right have maybe never had it used on them in an interview because that it is the face the Democrats reserve for the Left in their deprogramming sessions on how not to punch the Nazis. One must reason with them intellectually as you are dragged to be gassed. The liberal will be there getting gassed as well. Reason away comrade.

Jeans are working class, they were created in San Francisco during the 1849 California Gold Rush. Rich and middle class appropriated jeans in order to look cool. I do not watch propaganda with the sound on so I have not watched any of these jean interviews or commercials about the Democrats psyop. We had a final project assignment in Microeconomics last semester and I actually chose American Eagle as my marketing project since I have always had to wear AE because I have long legs. I did not research on what date the AE scandal began because I don't care what the liberals are up to with MAGA. It had never occurred to me that one of my favorite stores was involved in a cancel culture controversy.

Geospatial American Eagle Ads

On Maui there are only a few brand of jeans that we all really wear. American Eagle is one of the brands that you can wear. When I was younger and worked at Starbucks I was one of the girls that wore American Eagle. The girls were literally separated at Starbucks based on our jeans. So I own these jeans too. I just bought some of these same outfits. I did not know this was a big controversy when I went in to the store.

Sydney Sweeney for American Eagle 2025

Sydney Sweeney for American Eagle 2025

Sydney Sweeney for American Eagle 2025

The last time I shopped at AE was in July 2025. I own this exact jean jacket with wide leg pants she is wearing in the ad. I had no idea there was a scandal and did not really notice any of the posters in the store. The AE on Maui was empty except for a few people. I have dark skin and long frizzy hair. The sales people were silent but friendly. The two other women in the store did not make eye contact. I do not like to be bothered when I shop so I saw it as a win/win. I picked out my items and walked to the register. It all costs about $879, I had bought all the essentials because I usually only shop once per year. American Eagle is one of the stores I shop at once a year.

Sydney Sweeney American Eagles advertisement

From a geospatial perspective the American Eagle controversy did not appear to have an economic impact in Hawaii. We all wear American Eagle in Hawaii. Chinese, Filipino, white, black, Japanese, Tongan, Samoan, Hawaiian, Fijian, Portuguese, Puerto Rican, Micronesian, Democrat, Republican. I have always liked the softness of the cotton and how when you wash AE it does not shrink. Another reason is AE has a variety of sizes from very small to very large. They have longer lengths and shorter lengths to accommodate different heights. Queen Kaahumanu mall on Maui is never really full so the American Eagle there would never be very full. It would be hard to gauge if there was some sort of economic backlash or boycott. The liberals want to sow discord and division and have voters polarized. Republicans and Democrats are the same party who play off of each other for votes.

Hearing about this scandal made me wonder if anyone else had heard. I asked around and a few people said it was an "internet thing" not a real world issue. That was comforting to hear. The masses are starting to be able to differentiate when an outrage is manufactured or an actual issue that affects their objective reality.

Je surprisé! Not only do I own clothes that Mamdani's wife is wearing, the art school all black look. I own American Eagle and I just recently went and purchased more American Eagle jeans. AE is a store I have been shopping at since my Starbucks barista days.

Single Point of Failure

Hawaii is an unusual place racially, politically, socioeconomically. The gateway to the pacific and Asia. We are not as exposed to Internet phenomenons as frequently or as quickly as other states on the mainland. Sometimes the items we are told to boycott for political we just simply have to ignore. Hawaii is a blue state but we have a lot of independent voters. There are hunters and property owners who vote Republican.

We do not really discuss politics with each other. Voting is something you do privately. Trump has been a polarizing factor in families and communities. Farm and christian communities have been separated from family as a result of MAGA choices. I still have friends and coworkers who have different politics and we do not socialize as often. If I need them in an emergency they will be there for me and I know that they love me, we just do not agree politically.

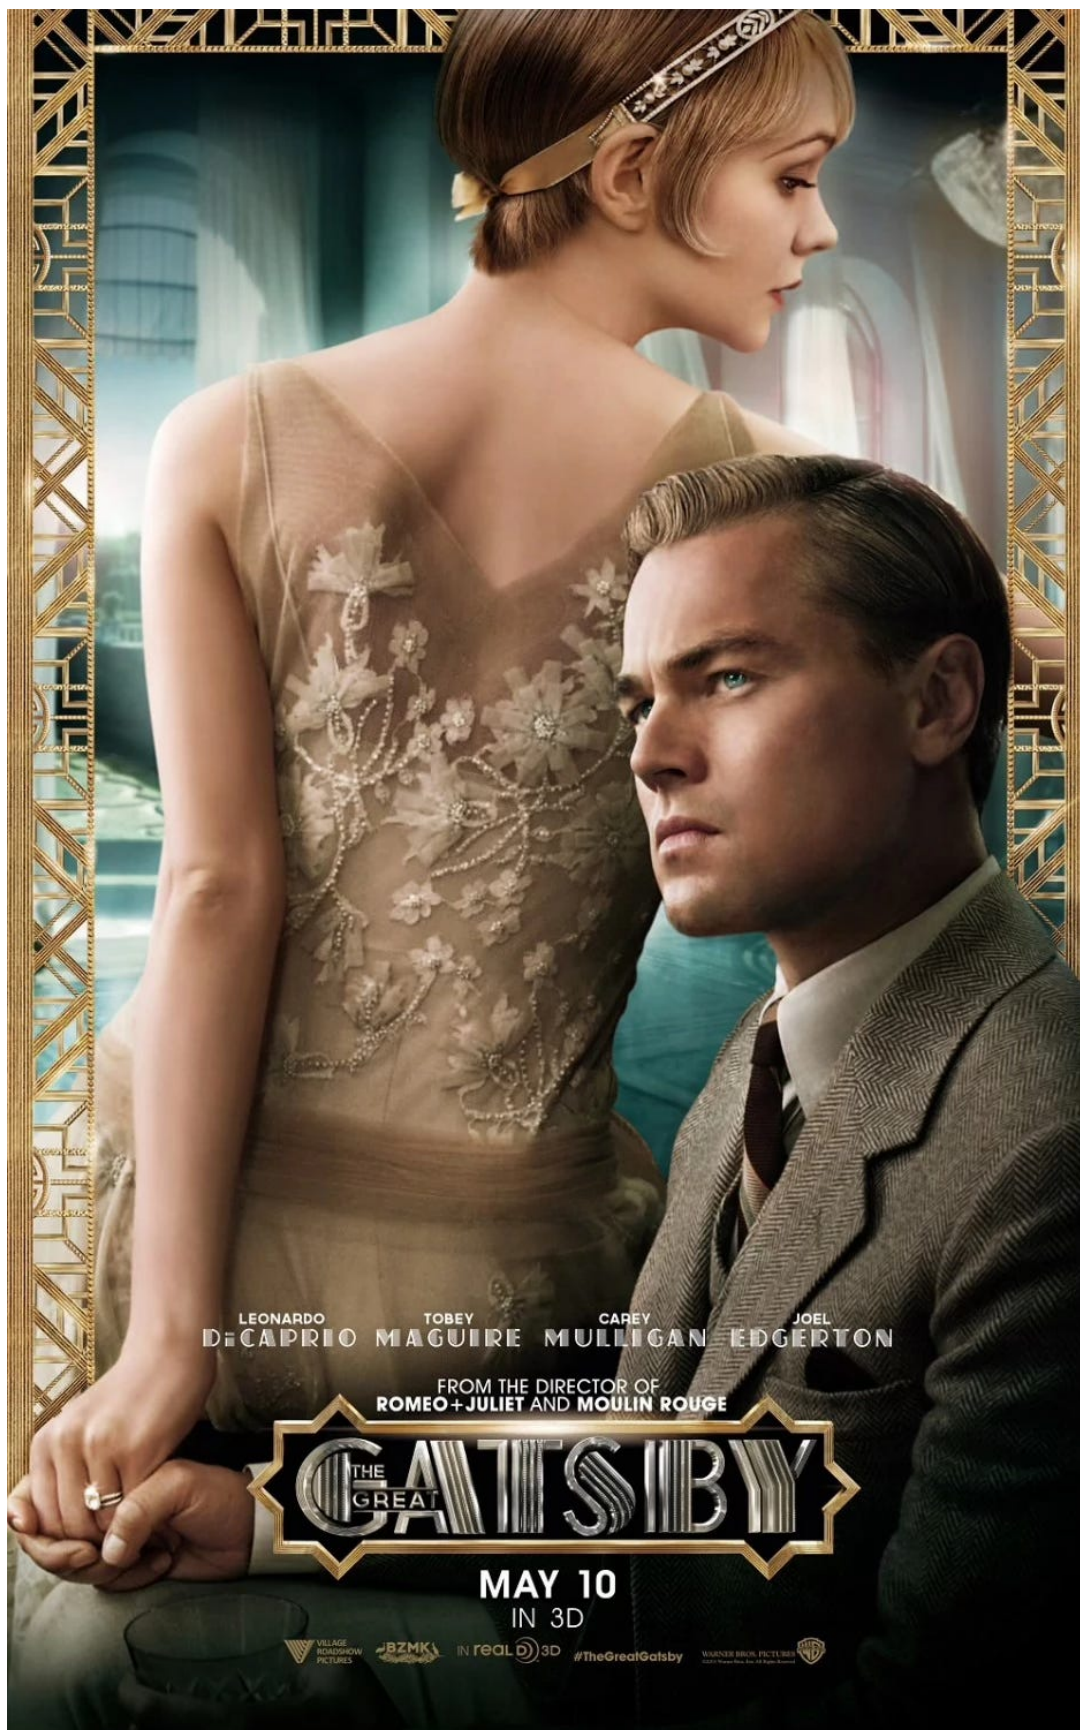

The message that liberals are trying to send with the timing of the Sydney Sweeney interview, and the releasing of the clothing of the wife of Mamdani's wife along with The Great Gatsby soiree footage: Is that a radical, exotic DSA politician, and a right wing fascist pretty faced actress being used as a prop for white nationalists are both enemies to the liberal Democrat party. Interesting juxtaposition of imagery that the DNC is going for here. But they are trying to send a message to the Left and the Right at the same time. Not sure why and how they were effective but I think they feel they have achieved their weird goal.

I think the single point of failure for the Democrats in the jeans psyops is that the DSA are not as far left as the DNC fantasize about them being. The DSA is just the only marketable party that the DNC has allowed on the ballot. The whole jeans interview meme warfare was only participated in by MAGA and liberals. The far left and DSA did not participate so why send the warning to bystanders? This points towards DNC hinting at getting Republican support in defeating extremist MAGA in their party and defeating DSA in the Democrats party. Funding from AIPAC for both sides goes without saying. AIPAC is the primary funder for destroying DSA candidates and far left parties for the DNC.

The Interview

The GQ interview is trying to deprogram a harmless commercial about a person saying "I have good genes that make me beautiful" into a class warfare session in which jeans symbolize the working class and genes which they told people symbolize whiteness but does not.

The genes they are talking about is working class, they are trying to tell this actress that she too is working class. Acting is a working class job in the American Dream. This actress is lead character Jay Gatsby and she has money and fame but it was given to her because she has good genes that made her beautiful not because she has talent.

That is why the freeze frame images of this ghouls face make such great memes. I do not think even the Left has had such hit pieces done on it like this actress. Although I am sure Hochul is about to hand Mamdani his liver on a platter. The actual Left like Hasan and others are always attacked by the Right for coming from money (Mamdani's & his wife) and having good genes but only pretending to be a Socialist when they actually are in the DSA. That is mostly what the DSA is comprised of so the Right kicking down on actual Socialists won't work.

The Democrats have taken a different approach with the Right and told them that genes and jeans is racial when it is actually an attack on class. Democrats attack the Left by telling them in that same annoying voice that, "you're college educated students from well off families and should not be out protesting because you're still the upper classes act like you have good genes" and do what the Democrats say; with that same grotesque twisted face. Same Democrats turn to the Right and tell a beautiful Daisy like actress that, "yes you have good genes to act because they made you pretty but you are still working class and perhaps middle class but you are not intelligent or educated so no one really cares what you think." It is the same playbook and one of the reasons why Democrats love when Republicans call them Socialists or Communists.

This actress is getting the F. Scott Fitzgerald treatment as a film. The Depression era film being a theme for Mar-a-Lago and the timing of this interview with the New York Mayoral race with Mamdani is the Democrats attempt to knock out the Left and the Right simultaneously. The actress is Jay Gatsby to the Democrats that is who she represents at Mar-a-Lago with Trump. That is how they have timed this interview. She should be wearing jeans and the good genes she has which are beauty which gave her the commercial are random and she should be grateful but she is not capable of political commentary. It is why rich people wear ripped up jeans and people who want to look rich wear ripped up jeans. Jeans are a class signifier.

Hollywood turns on Sydney Sweeney as she remains silent amid MAGA controversy

As Sydney Sweeney refuses to speak out on her ongoing MAGA and American Eagle advertisement controversy, many Hollywood stars have showcased their disapproval.

From The Irish Times: He then went on to showcase a clip from Roxane Gay, a professor and author who discusses the demographics of Republican voters in the U.S. While Sydney has not publicly spoken out her political stance or directly showed support of President Donald Trump, she is a registered Republican.

Under a newly posted Reddit thread, many users aligned with this take. Responding to this remark, one person wrote, “She 100 percent wants to be the postergirl for white conservative Facism.”

Shots have been fired and I have seen the first meme of the jeans actress interview. The Right have created a post on X of someone asking that the transgender people be treated fairly and the interviewed actress meme is used to say no. In typical fashion the liberals have attacked her and said she is letting herself be used for bigotry. She cannot control her image being used for memes. Other liberals are saying it is her fault because she should have said she is not racist during the interview. The interview was not designed for her not to say she was not racist. The interview was designed to browbeat her into submission and make an example of her like the working class Jay Gatsby.

Now that the liberals have established her non-existent bigotry. She did a jeans commercial and was interviewed about it for no earthly reason other than to create more of a controversy. Nothing this actress has said or done has made her a bigot. The memes being created by the Right using her image are bigoted but that is outside of her control. This is an unusual case of memetic warfare. The Democrats have purposefully created the meme for MAGA. Told them to use it and MAGA are now using it for their own political motives. At the center is an actress who has nothing to do with any political machine. The actress is being cancelled all the liberals have decried gleefully across entertainment social media where the battle has rightfully been confined. The good genes the actress and American Eagle was referring to was beauty. Liberals jumped on that and said she was alluding to white superiority. The liberals made the argument themselves. Does beauty mean being white with blonde hair and blue eyes? According to the liberals that is what the standard of beauty means.

Everything I learned about MAGA NAZIs and the Liberal NAZIs this week I learned against my will. I need to go cleanse my eyes with bleach and spend the next two weeks just surfing and not looking at any screens.

Just Say No To Drugs Algorithms

The Dems took the algorithms during Mamdani's campaign and meshed them so that the Right thought the Left cared about a random actress that isn't on the radar or in our feeds or as far as I could see even in the liberals feed. They are hyper fixated on Kathy Hochul at Mamdani's door to stop him. She is the wolf dressed like grandma right now smiling with sharp teeth. I won't be writing again for some time. This should be more than enough content for a while.

Speaking of people banned from my feeds. I want to take a moment and interject that Mr. Beast is probably the antichrist at this point. Making people eat 400 moldy sandwiches off of a floor covered in urine in a barn in Tallahassee to earn $100,000? He is the personification of evil and everything that is wrong with this commodification society we created. The Supreme Court needs to be impeached for the Shadow Dockets. Trumps extrajudicial EO's need to be overturned. The Democrats are complicit in all of the Republican's crimes and everyone should go to prison. The Right are trapped in some trauma fugue and probably won't be reachable for quite some time.

Rick and Morty (Season 8)

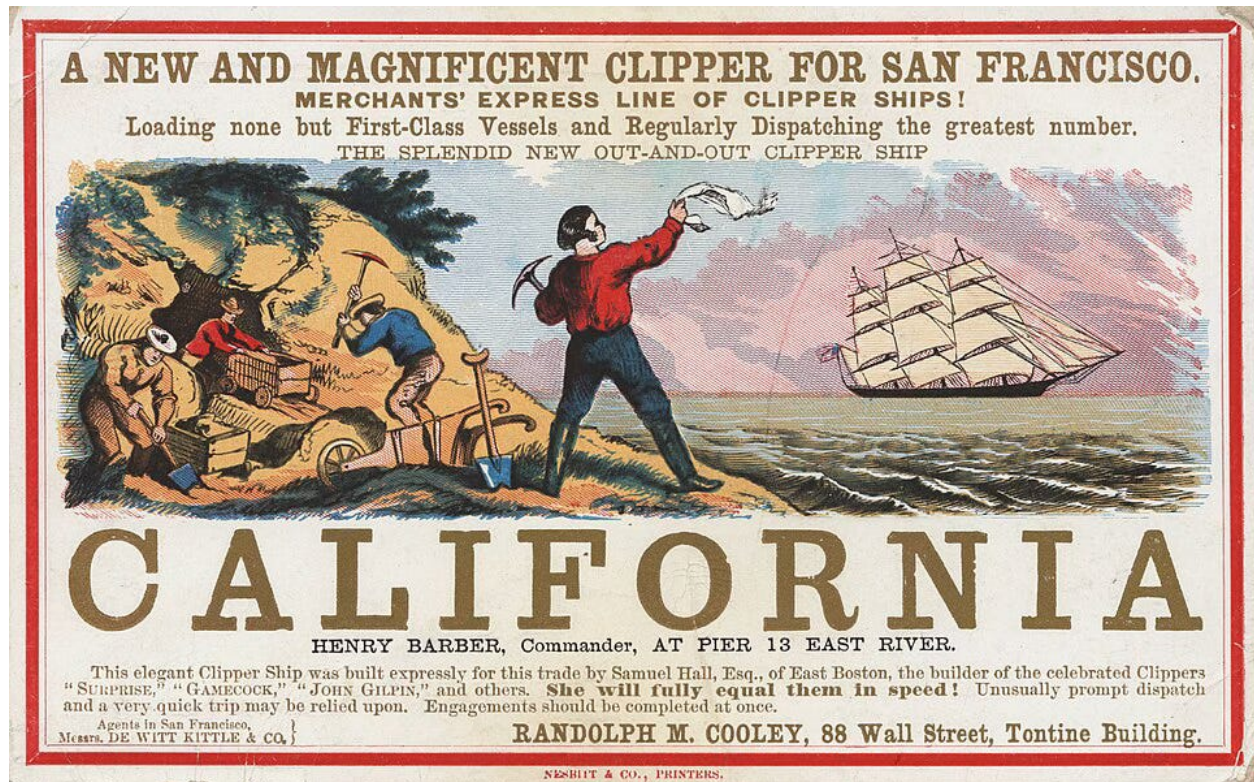

You ever ask yourself why they call it your FEED? Like a pig or a cow feed of a farm. Media is very calculated in this way. Mamdani's wife, The Great Gatsby, the Jeans vs Genes interview are all sent into the algorithm at the same time in a well planned fashion. What is hidden is how the race factor of each player only hides class warfare. Jay Gatsby was born poor, working class and changed his name once he became rich, he threw big parties with high society that laughed at him behind his back. He had an affair with an upper class married woman, Daisy. She took his car and killed someone. The town blamed him and he ended up dead in his swimming pool. The rich retreated behind their wealth and forgot about him.

Big Bang Theory

That is the question she is asking of her, you don't think you are making political commentary with a jeans commercial? You are the working class. That is the same problem Democrats have with the Left. The greatest movements of the Left both socialists and communist come from the working class and Democrats hate that so much that watching upper class students fund the working class and not the DNC drives them crazy. It is good to see that they have gotten so tired of the DSA that they are attacking

MAGA directly with Jeans vs Genes hit pieces. It is about time those cowards came forward. Cancel culture and the disavow game only works on those who the Democrat liberals have power over.

Jeans were invented during California Gold Rush in San Francisco

Vote John Jameson or James Johnson

I understand direct action, Portland is doing well and Manhattan is staying on track. Every other state is fighting ICE and that is really all that can be done on a street level at the moment. In terms of voting, I suppose it is better not to waste a vote until the people are fed up with empty promises and allow a third party to break the duopoly.

The DSA will have to fill the void. They're the lesser of three evils, the other two evils being the Liberal Democrats and the Republicans.

As the media begin to release photos of Mamdani's wife we were allowed to construct an image of the candidates "other half" — who is this person at home? The Democratic Socialist Mamdani's wife in photo's wears actual clothes that I too have owned and worn, similar hairstyles and jewelry with boots to match. I like her style, since it matches my own. This style of dress, mixing vintage pieces with a modern flair has often been called boho or bohemian. It is a style seen in Camden not the West End of London, or the East Village and not the Upper West Side of NY.

Rama Duwaji

It's a signal style, or a "tell" it says something about the person as a value signature. You may have one expensive item that is the signature, that you mix in with other vintage pieces. It was one of the lessons in Girlboss. When going to a deceased rich socialites home in San Francisco to pick up her clothes to resell you need to know the value of the clothes otherwise you can sell something for $500 that actually cost $5,000. This style says that they are artistic and come from money probably old money but they don't care what you think, they have their own style.

Rama Duwaji

Someone described it as “giving main character in a film that only plays in French Film Festivals” — they don’t want to be like other people in their class system. It is an interesting look into these two people that I literally just discovered a few days ago. Looking at him for just a few minutes and I can see that he is not like her, he does care. She is a trophy of sorts for him and she makes him happy how she is so different but she also embodies the ideas that he represents.

This election some people will vote for Mamdani, others may be given the option to vote for him because of his wife. In the United States this is seen more clearly in the cause that the First Lady chooses once she enters the White House. Nancy Reagan chose saying no to drugs, notorious for her pill addiction, very little comment was made but she did get tremendous support from celebrities. Laura Bush chose Reading Literacy. Bush was seen as not an intellectual giant, so she wanted to stress the importance of reading. Obama’s wife choose nutrition and exercise, she was seen as healthy and fit as was her husband so it made sense for them to focus on health.

Rama is an artist, who works in ceramics, and mixed media. She has a BFA in communication arts, and MFA in illustration from a School of Visual Arts. She has a similar educational background that I pursued for Greenpeace to produce environmental justice documentaries. I recognize this style of dress because it is basically de riguer for art school students. We call it our “black phase” because you just wear all black clothes to art galleries, to class, to photography shoots. She worked in social justice with a focus on women’s political issues and her art pieces have been published in several major magazines and the Tate Museum.

She is a major win for him and you can tell that he is not only in love with her but this is the type of woman to communicate to the world his ideas as a socialist. Yes, she is arm candy but this type of political arm candy is hard to come by. I know because I have escaped being the arm candy of many Pirate Party and Green Party men based on how I look, my educational background, and political fervor. It is always better to marry for love, when you are sick and you are tired, the arm candy concept fades and you will need someone who really loves you to nurse you back to health.

The Merchant Class

THE GREAT GATSBY

Daisy Buchanan and Jay Gatsby in The Great Gatsby (1925)

Classism is a concept that I wrote about frequently in high school, and now in college, mainly because I belong to a class of people called the merchant class which is a class few speak of in modern times yet we still exist. The merchant class is a social group of people who buy, sell, and trade goods for profit. They played a vital role in economic and cultural development, especially as trade routes expanded. The merchant class rose out of the death of feudalism, as caused by changes in the structure of labor.

Merchant Guilds in Medieval Europe.

According to Brown University, the Merchant Class in Medieval Merchant Culture by Boccaccio's era, was very rich, often intermarrying with impoverished members of the nobility. That is why it is so easy for women like us to be taken for arm candy by a man building a career, political or otherwise. We clean up well, we read the right books and have the right pedigree but we are edgy and dangerous and men like that, were not boring but we can be taken around rich people without fear of being embarrassed. Old money goes to an excellent college but doesn't have to really do well, their parents name will get them by.

They will be given a position in the family business but aren't expected to do much. We come from something better than old money, in the South Pacific it's called dead money. You wear the black pearls, anyone can have pink pearls, but black pearls are rare. Generations of treasure chests sunken with gold coins. We learn at a young age how to tell different coins from each other and have a coin collection. We develop a client base, and people bring coins to us and we can tell them how much the coins are worth and their history. We photograph the coins and catalog them. We buy and sell the coins and have an exchange, this is an art form that has been in our family for hundreds of years. This is just one example of a merchant family, this is called dead money, merchant class old world knowledge passed down through generations.

Culture Wars

Culture wars are not the NPC that people imagine. The culture wars have actually been the driving force holding together the inability of the class wars to be fought systematically by all races.

Let look at religious student organization TPUSA at UC Berkeley recently for their last stop on the TPUSA college campus tours.

UC Berkeley TPUSA College Campus Tour Protest 11/2025

Look at these animals. What is wrong with them? I am literally clutching my pearls through the screen. I need a manager to call. First of all when was the last time people protested on college campuses? Besides recently against ICE, last elections for Palestine, earlier this year for Palestine, throughout both of Trumps presidencies, BLM, OWS, 70's, 60's the Vietnam-era but besides those isolated incidents no one has ever protested on campuses in the United States. It is gauche and someone needs to call Karen to call the manager.

The DOJ has been called in to investigate why a state college campus is protesting TPUSA. It is quite the mystery. Not sure what action will be taken but my bet is it will be combination NAZI and Stasi like in its attack. Time to put the old fascist boot down. Cannot have students disagreeing with a religious based campus organization at a state public federal university. Freedom of religion is a constitutional right.

Separation of church and state is in the constitution and we all know the constitution was probably written on hemp paper. These students have probably been smoking the constitution.

Too much constitution going on in this country. Maybe that is why MAGA hates the constitution so much except for 2A. The rest of the constitution possibly written on smelly hemp paper needs to go especially the correct interpretation of 1A. Founding fathers were probably high. Let's do a background check and see if any of them went to UCB or can pass a drug test. First amendment rights go too far. Students have too much freedom to assemble, freedom of association, and they also have freedom of religion, let's not forget that last freedom is very important too.

Advertisement: Urban Legends

It is actually an Urban Legend that the Constitution was written on hemp paper. It was written on parchment which is animal skin. The old urban legend that the Declaration of Independence was written on hemp? Well, some urban legends are true, and some are false, but this is an urban legend that is pretty much true.

The truth derives from the fact that until 1883, 75% to 90% of all paper in the world was made from cannabis hemp fiber. The hemp plant is a very versatile plant, which could (and still does) make many different things. It is used in shampoos, fabrics, and medical drugs (medicinal marijuana and Marinol). It is also used to make rope and makes an alternative fuel. But paper is the material it was most widely used for.

The paper made out of hemp is of much greater quality than that made out of cotton, and it lasts longer. A few hundred years ago, Bibles, maps, paper money, stocks and bonds, and newspapers were all written on hemp paper. In those days, they couldn't make paper from trees like they do today.

- The famous writings written on hemp paper include:

The Gutenberg Bible (15th century).

The King James Bible (17th century).

Thomas Paine's pamphlets: The Rights of Man, Common Sense, and The Age of Reason.

The works of Mark Twain, Alexander Dumas, and Victor Hugo.

And Lewis Carroll's beloved Alice in Wonderland.

All these were written on hemp paper, as was just about everything else at the time.

The first draft of the Declaration of Independence was, indeed, written on Dutch hemp paper (June 28, 1776). The second draft was, too. This second draft was written on July 2, 1776. This was the draft agreed to and announced and released on the immortal date of July 4, 1776.

Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776

Then on July 19, 1776, Congress ordered the Declaration of Independence be copied and engrossed on parchment (a prepared animal skin). This was the famous document signed by the delegates on August 2, 1776. So, this “original” Declaration of Independence was engrossed on parchment (animal skin treated with lime).

This treated animal skin parchment stretches out and has a long-lasting quality. This is why the Declaration of Independence is in such good condition when we view it today. So, just to clarify completely: the original two drafts of the Declaration of Independence were written on hemp paper.

Lets get back to our regularly scheduled programming.....

College protests are absolutely unheard of and need to stop immediately. Unless you are trying to overturn a democratically elected presidency by storming the capital in an insurrection there is never any need to protest. College campuses are intellectual institutions of higher learning. It is completely inappropriate for these students to be here yelling and disagreeing with opinions that they do not agree with. I forgot what you call that when you disagree with the speech of others but I think it's free.

Historically TPUSA has had two rabid enemies. Groypers, a group of intel white nationalist who have sworn to kill their leader since day one and spent the beginning of their historical run heckling and attacking their leader (insert name here) and upon his death were considered the first suspects. The other enemy TPUSA assigned to themselves and that was well anybody who does not agree with them. I guess ideological dissidents are their sworn enemy. Instead of focusing on their actual enemy (that would be too logical) they outsource to their cultural enemies. People and institutions who hold different values. Here is where the culture war flourishes.

Whether it be the weird, haggardly, transgender obsessed LibsOf TikTok or the desperately, needy, sociopath Andy Ngo. The media philosophy here is; let me insert myself in a situation with a group of people I totally disagree with and hate. I will film myself and them, report them to the police, get them on kill lists with white nationalist and retire rich. What could possible go wrong? Nothing actually. It is exactly the scenario they want. It is the equivalent of feeding raw meat to their rabid supporters who will tell them they are doing God's Work (in this economy God has to freelance as a RW agitator) setting up the perfect scenario for self-actualized victimhood.

Those angry Antifa people were mean to us. No many how many times people play back our insufferably cruel alienating hateful dangerous terroristic words to us we can understand why people hate us. We had paying customers for our booked event and they got mad and attacked everyone. Why would they do that? What about or free speech? Hate speech is not free speech. Apparently wanting all transgenders dead is not hate speech. Polarization is key here, they need two very distinct camps for each person to join otherwise what are we doing here. I am blue and you are red, we stand for different things. We are enemies, we do not agree on anything. We hate each other.

That is why we came all the way to UC Berkeley and made sure it was the last stop on our campus tour. WE NEED YOU TO HATE US BERKELEY. So we can show the world how much you do not agree with our religious politics. You think our way of being is a danger to others.

We want to confirmation bias the shit out of our cult. Prove to them once and for all that you are dangerous (((terrorists))) who want to protect transgenders, Palestine, disabled, women, minorities, and other people you deem we attack. That will show you! Creating this type of scenario gives them the opportunity to claim their self-created victory.

Despite the ungodly thugs attacking us we still had a good time and everyone danced to YMCA (is anyone going to tell them what that song actually means? No? its more fun this way)

This is America that the politicians want, there is no bipartisanship (except for the laws that keep getting passed that hurt the entire country which are completely bipartisan) we are a country divided, right? Right? Liberals want us dead? It is dangerous to walk the street as a white person, right? The armed vans with unmarked plates and masked men with no ID?

Oh ignore ICE those aren't for white people. But, yeah as I was saying, you know it's a scary place right now for white people who completely dominate the agenda the police, the house, the senate, the executive branch, the National Guard. Just one misstep and any person of color will end up dead or deported but it's the white people who need to be afraid? How do you reason with that. You don't and you should not even have to. It has been the same song and dance for the last 10 years. MAGA claim to be silenced but still have the loudest voices. They claim to be scared yet it is others that are hurt.

They yell Fuck Your Feelings and cry like toddlers on national TV every time someone disagrees with their fascist policies in the slightest way. They shove bibles into peoples faces and tell them how to live their lives and all the laws they are going to pass to restrict all personal freedom, free speech, freedom of association, and free will.

TPUSA then turn around and complain about how they are the victims here. It's a lose/lose discussion because honestly at this point I think they are completely incapable of any self-reflection. Palov's dogs just kept waiting for the bell. UC Berkeley is one of those bells. You ring it and every RWNJ in the world is going to start salivating. They want blood, anybody blood, preferably Antifa's but one of their own's blood helps to increase their victimhood.

UC Berkeley protested TPUSA the same way as they have before. Nothing has changed about how UCB is protesting TPUSA. But this needs to be filmed and transmitted to the world as a political prop. This time it is different. Let's not waste this final opportunity for victimhood. Maybe stop forcing yourselves on UCB? They're just not that into you.

Nah, this is what they live for. Con Inc always do this for attention so they can cry muh free speech. It's intentional to get in the news feeds of their drama addicted cult. You always look to trigger UCB for optics. Since Trump was elected every hot button issue MAGA cult leader books an event at UCB.

It's obligatory press to keep their rabid base riled up and foaming at the mouth. McInnes, Shrekli, Proud Boys, etc every MAGA has to go to UCB for the fight. It is their WWE event of the season and the reason why they scheduled UCB for the last stop on the tour. Has UCB been waiting for them?

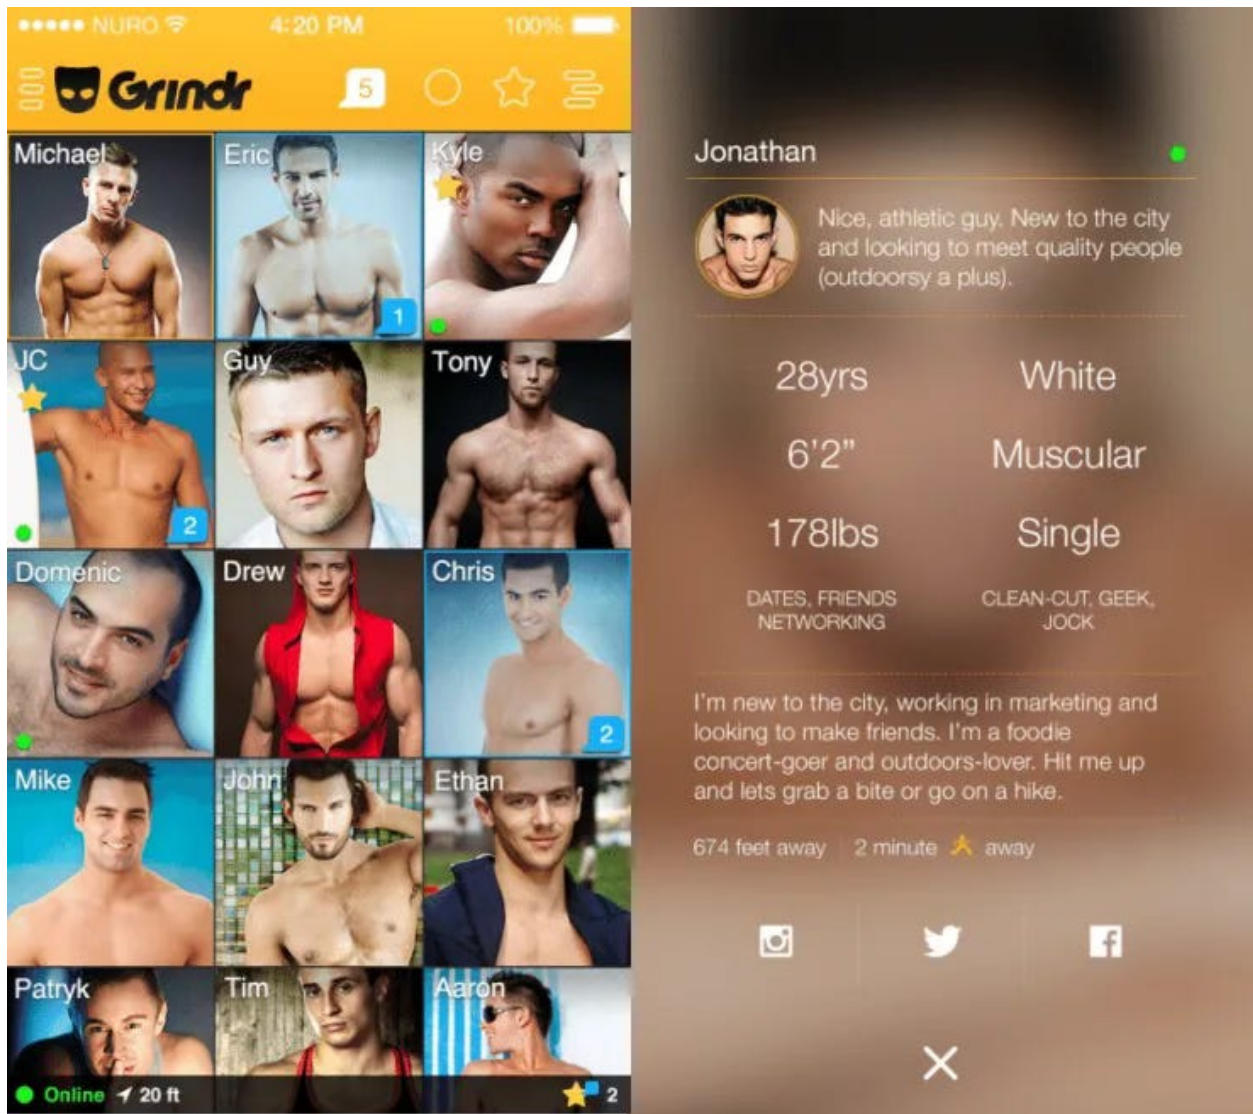

Of course, no one is naive here or stupid enough to believe that this is all entirely coincidental. Just because you are being used as a political prop does not mean you don't still have a job to do. If TPUSA did not want to use it as the drama filled end to the season finale they would have scheduled UCB as the first campus and moved on peacefully to the other campuses. There would have been no press in that.

It's the role of UCB to be used as a political prop. Conservatives see UCB as the symbol of everything that must be destroyed in the world. In reality it's one of the most profitable public research universities in the world generating billions of dollars annually. But every RWNJ publicist on a book tour schedules UCB for optics to generate buzz/sales. It's a played out methodology. Clashes at UCB headlines oh my now they have something new to cry victim about. It's endless victimhood for these people.

They are always being silenced yet have not stopped screaming for 10 years. Give us free speech and arrest everyone who doesn't agree with us.

Christians who follow neither God, the Bible nor Jesus's teachings. It's unreal levels of cognitive dissonance. Can Elon get Mars ready so they can all relocate and leave us here with peace on earth. The self-named f*ck your feelings crowd every day have new hurt feelings. Maybe they should stop forcing their politics and judgements on the world; you know that sin they accuse the other side of constantly. Culture wars escalate. It's manipulative and tiresome. The protestors were kept separate from the TPUSA guest. It was during their departure that words were exchanged. Berkeley Scanner

From the MAGA party that break Grindr every time they come to town. TPUSA ended their rally singing that famous LGBTQ anthem "YMCA" by the Village People with Rob Schneider. They looked happy.

If the helicopters had not been flying so low, I think TPUSA could have squeezed in “Macho Man” for an encore. If only they all could have held hands with Antifa and danced in the streets together. This world would be a better place.

Is UC Berkeley A Bad University?

UC Berkeley campus flyer to protest TPUSA: We stand with people of color, immigrants, LGBTQI+, the poor & all oppressed people. Sounds like a list from the bible. That is who Jesus said he came to save....the poor and all oppressed people. I am veering into Catholic Socialism here. It is the remnants of SVDP in me.

Do these students go to class when they are not being antifascist? They do go to class and they also earn the school millions of dollars in funds for research, Nobel Prizes, and start-up founders who generate billions of dollars.

Wait, those antifascist students are intelligent? Yes, UC Berkeley is one of the most competitive schools in the country. It is very difficult to get accepted and has a very steep curve for grades and test scores.

The classes are some of the most academically rigorous in the world. The students are very intelligent. Of all the schools in the UC system, UC Berkeley is the hardest to get into and the students come from around the world to attend. They are the best and the brightest of their class.

In October 2025, the University of California made history by winning five Nobel Prizes in a single week.

The Brainypedia

Setting a new world record for the most Nobel awards ever received by a university system in such a short span. According to the University of California's official news site, the awards were spread across three disciplines: medicine, physics, and chemistry, and involved faculty and alumni from UC Berkeley, UC San Diego, UC Santa Barbara, and UCLA.

The week began with Frederick Ramsdell, an alumnus of UC San Diego and UCLA, receiving the Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine for his discovery of regulatory T cells, which play a crucial role in preventing autoimmune diseases. According to Yahoo News and UC Berkeley's College of Letters & Science, this achievement brings the University of California's total Nobel count to 75, reinforcing its reputation as one of the world's leading public research institutions. The record-setting week also highlights the importance of long-term investment in scientific research and the power of collaboration across campuses and disciplines.

University of California Nobel Prizes Sweep 2025 makes me proud of all the UC campuses. My alma mater UC Santa Barbara. Proud of UCLA as my magnet school Los Angeles Center for Enriched Studies (LACES) is taught programmed into University of California A-G requirements. And proud of my older brother who works at UCLA in the IT department. Great job as always by UC Berkeley, and UC San Diego.

Since UC's are also in the perpetual hurt feels news feed this week. I can't stress enough how some students at UC Berkeley not agreeing with an overly sensitive reactionary subsection of society does not make them a bad school. In an intellectual society we would want open debate and free speech to flourish.

Historically across the globe students have had protests against ideology that they do not agree with. To constantly take this religious organization on campuses and shove them into students faces demanding that people accept and embrace them is a violation of free speech and freedom of religion.

Students have the right to assemble, and freedom of association as constitutional protections. UC is a diverse public research university institution who consistently contributes to society with results. Free speech is letting both sides have an opinion on an issue. Not just your side of the issue. Revisionist history works for one side but others remember a different version of this person that has been deified by the right wing masses. Perhaps it is wise to consider that your gods are not the gods of others and leave them in peace.

Polymarket Influence Campaigns

"She is wearing my clothes," is what I muttered over matcha with friends, "who" they said, "the wife of this guy," the quote on the picture says "affable gujarati muslim guy who speaks Arabic, Spanish, and Bengali who looks like he would have been cleaning up in the 16th century southeast asian spice trade." I showed them the picture, and they laughed. They both stared at me with love and pity, "you have to read the news more, that's Mamdani." They changed the subject to yoga. "Oh, okay" is all I could think of to say and stared at the cars passing by sipping on my matcha.

I had been so absorbed with school and had not followed the New York elections since I lived on Maui in Hawaii and we have local news. Everyone in the world was following the elections for some reason. I found that interesting so I did some brief research to see what information I could find. Both sides of the political spectrum have seemed to take a heated position. What was surprising is that neither side seemed to live in New York, nor would they be at all affected by the New York mayoral race.

It was a new concept in politics that the entire country and sometimes other countries had an opinion about places that had nothing to do with their own geographical locations, like the New York mayoral election. I would assume we can attribute this to Polymarket and other prediction (betting) sites that are gaining in popularity. Attention had been monetized and like many eras before ours betting was the last cry of a dying empire.

Polymarket is an American cryptocurrency-based prediction market, headquartered in Manhattan, New York City. Launched in 2020, it offers a platform where individuals can place bets on various future events, including economic indicators, weather patterns, awards, as well as political and legislative outcomes.

Since 2020 and the dawn of Polymarket I had noticed that the news cycle was even more accelerated than the 2015-2020 era of hyper sensationalism of political issues or polysci-porn I liked to call it. Images of Black Lives Matter and those killed by the police I always commented was "snuff porn for racist who were aroused by watching black people die." I disengaged from social media during the George Floyd era (as I had when Osama Bin Laden's dead body was passed around the internet) and focused on my career. I merely observed that constantly showing the death of George Floyd aroused both the white Democrats and the white Republicans in different ways for different reasons.

The Coastal Elite Democrats

I was working as a paralegal at a law firm in downtown Maui for a liberal jewish attorney who wanted everyone in the office to watch the George Floyd verdict. I declined and said the imagery was too disturbing and I had avoided watching any of it up until now. He met me in the hall and asked if I wanted him to call me in when the George Floyd verdict was announced? I was genuinely confused since I had just said I would not be watching. So I asked why he would do that and queried out of curiosity who George Floyd was. I asked if he was the man killed recently by police. He corrected me and said he was the “black” man killed by police. Ah, I replied more as an answer to his typical liberal Democrat Get Out moment and ended the conversation by returning back to my desk.

My work mate Rebecca a paralegal from Washington state where I also had some family looked at me and shook her head making a loopy sign with her finger to signify that he was crazy. I laughed and went back to work. Finally, the big moment had come, intrigued I joined everyone in his office to watch the verdict. Chauvin was found guilty and the attorneys and paralegals celebrated. I left the office since I had never followed the case and did not know the nuances. I had seen fleeting violent images and labeled it snuff porn for racists and liberals because that is what it is used for in my personal opinion.

Both Rebecca and I quit two weeks later. That moment in the hall which everyone had witnessed had been the determining factor in a series of other equally disturbing confrontations with the same attorney. It was his law firm so I just kept calling in dead until he stopped calling me. Rebecca went to another law firm closer to her home in Haiku. He was confused by both of our actions. He never understood either of us. With Rebecca he had a patronizing tone he used that she hated and had confronted him on several occasions to no avail. This tone Jewish men reserved for the WASP descendants of the white working class and blue collar workers. When I met her she said she was from Washington State I asked what part and she said the town. I named her cheese and we laughed. Most people think only of Seattle, Washington well yeah but the whole point Kurt Cobain was making is that the rest of Washington State is just farm land and vast open country.

A good way to make someone laugh in Washington is to buy the cheese that comes from their town. She and I bonded immediately and stayed close friends to this day. When I went on to sell insurance she called me and was the first policy that I sold. I also knew she was not “blue collar” or “working class” - the type of blonde hair milk maid farm girl that he fetishized her as was a million dollar farm and her parents were quite wealthy. He was a coastal elite, a liberal Jew born and raised in New York. A Democrat who felt it was okay to be racist towards Southeast Asians, Hawaiians and other Pacific Islanders on Maui. He treated Japanese as equals since he felt they had an advanced intellect. In other words he was a racist piece of crap.

Like most transplants he really did not know what to do with me. I was not allowed to have my own opinion or be an intellectual. He didn't understand why I surfed, skateboarded, wore Vans or listened to rock music. He just naturally assumed I knew zero about absolutely everything until the George Floyd case which he assumed I knew everything about. I am not familiar with the east coast and their class systems. But I usually avoid having anything to do with these people because I find it difficult to communicate with them.

White Savior Complex of Liberals

In his mind, he was to be me and Rebecca's great teacher and emancipator, our illuminator to the cultural side of the world. He was creepy, the typical boring liberal Democrat. I had come from another much more successful law firm a few blocks away to his firm and we had clashed when it came to filling out civil law court documents which is what he had specifically hired me for. Previously he had lost several high profile cases and his team was convinced that the attorney at my former law firm was not intelligent enough to have won those cases on his own. The two paralegals in his office had told him that it was me who was winning the cases. I came to his office with the phone numbers and direct lines to people in the judiciary that could move your documents through the byzantine maze. After having several of his documents rejected over the years he finally turned to me for help. I built up form documents for his entire office so that he would use this same system when submitting the documents to the courts. He was begrudgingly grateful for the assistance but had to admit that it was having success.

The liberals White Savior complex loses steam in Hawaii and they are forced to do business with people that they had previously looked down upon. African-Americans are also not huge fans of me since they too cannot understand what I am, why I talk the way I do, the music, the clothes, it is all very confusing for them. I try and ask them if they know any Tongans. Some do, most do not, well I say Tongans descend from my people, Fijians we are Melanesians. I do not resent either faction but I also do not owe them any explanation. White people really struggle in Hawaii and many of them eventually leave because they cannot reconcile to being a minority.

I was born in Fiji, with one parent a Native Hawaiian from Molokai where I spent a short time in my youth. I grew up in Venice and Santa Monica, California taught counterculture and was raised to be an independent thinker and never apologize for my individuality. I also have family in Washington State who are comfortably middle and upper middle class. I have always felt happy in my skin and never compelled to conform to the standards of others or the media. Peer pressure is a concept that repulses and saddens me when I see others fall for it.

The three states where I have family are the only states that really interest me as the rest of the United States confuse me. The one exception being New Mexico, which I have always felt drawn to since I was a small child. I would sit on the floor of my dad's office at JPL and pour over his books of New Mexico enthralled by the pictures of the desert, the adobes and the cactus. I have met people from the rest of the United States when they visited California and Hawaii. Having met them has given me zero desire to see the rest of the USA as an adult.

MAGA and Liberals share same Reality TV Algorithm

That people who would never be remotely affected by the New York City mayor race had such strong opinions about this mans campaign simply because he was a muslim intrigued me. Thanks to Polymarket it seemed that local politics no longer existed, only tribal politics that polarized millions of people which they used hard earned money to bet with. Every week the blue team and the red team allowed themselves to be whipped into a frenzied rage by some new issue or even the same old issues thousands of miles away. Lab rats in a perpetual maze chasing imaginary cheese in a never ending news cycle designed to keep them exhausted, angry, fearful and xenophobic. Oblivious to the fact that the designer of the maze was the cause of all their pain. This must have been how the Holy Roman Empire declined as yet another gladiator was dropped into the arena and the lion released.

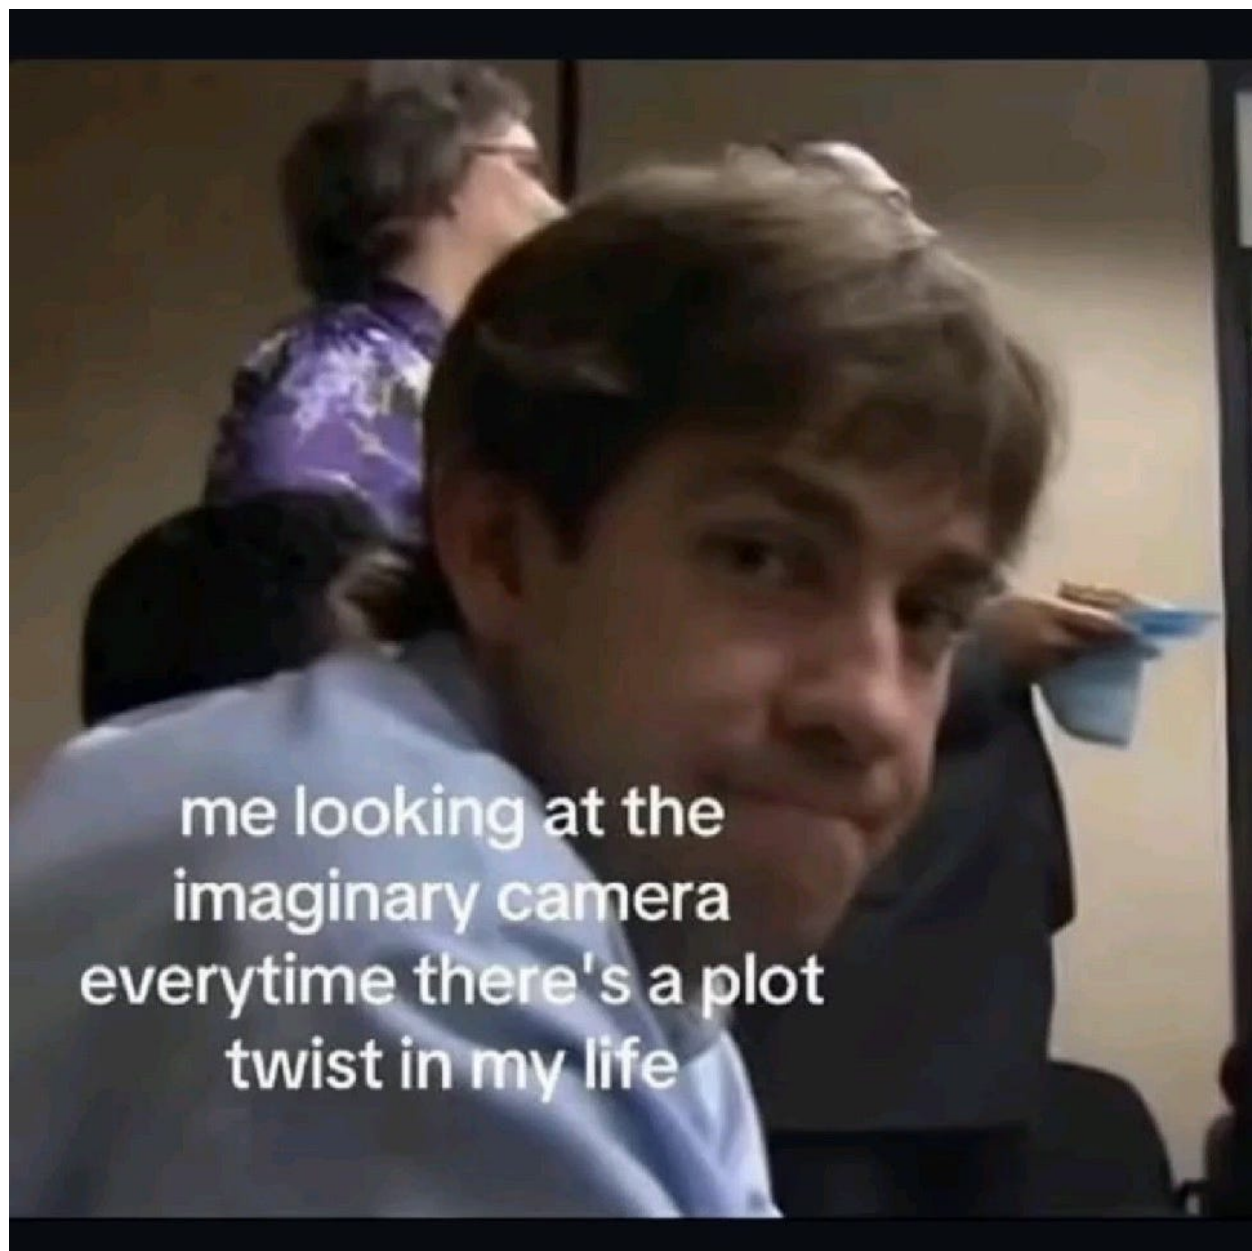

The Gladiator (1992)

In terms of class warfare this constant fixation on eugenics has another unintended secondary effect. The billionaires boys club media conglomerates have managed to convince the sheeple MAGA Right and MAGA-lite that Mamdani's DSA-lite free bus, rent control campaign is simultaneously execution style Maoism and mandatory hijab jihadism. Post-Vietnam War America industrialists learned well to always disguise their class wars behind race wars. The recent parasocial TikTok MAGA birthed from parasocial Instagram MAGA taught to always identify with the rich and scorn the poor. Even if they were actually the poor or closer to the poor in income and class than the rich. Working on the fringes of the rich does not make one rich. Somehow Gen Z and Millennials were led to believe otherwise.

Crypto and tech MAGA are the main exponents of this ideology. Being on the fringes of rich people led them to identify with the riches they may one day have. Perhaps they come from a solid middle class background. Not sure the safety net for the middle class is looking all that great in this economy. What was once the working class is now economically the working poor. The middle class have become the working class, and the upper middle class are the middle class. The disparity between wealth has shifted poverty levels to such an extreme that poverty level in Hawaii annually is an income below $59,000. If you earn below that you are living at poverty level. MAGA and liberals need to look at the poverty level in their states to determine if they are closer to the rich.

Meanwhile the Sheeple Liberal Progressives are being sold yet another DSA candidate to attack AOC-style. Idealistically packaged to appeal to Millennials and Gen Z. He may be unable to implement policies that sound idyllic during the campaign cycle but eventually will be impossible to fully deliver. Only time will tell how far the Democrats will go to destroy his campaign. I hope MAGA are watching to see that liberals hate the actual Left more than they hate the Right. There are a handful of Democratic Socialist candidates on ballots across the States, and with the current low Republican approval rating I would not be surprised if they made a clean sweep.

Hopefully the DSA will be able to deliver on their campaign promises this time. MAGA as always are putting up communist symbols as they call them socialists, obligatory eye roll. Getting them to learn the difference between Communism, Socialism, Maoism and Stalinism is next to impossible. Trying to explain Democratic Socialist like Bernie, AOC, Mamdani at this point is a waste of time.

MAGA have been brainwashed to jump scare every time they even hear the words Communism and Socialism. Instead of building a $200 million dollar ballroom you can take that money and invest it into infrastructure (roads, bridges, schools, electricity, highways), healthcare, seniors, daycare, veterans, disabled programs that is the socialism they have everyone programmed to hate.

The socialism everyone is programmed to accept is paying congress during a shutdown when they are not working and continuing to pay them for socialized free food, free healthcare, free housing and letting them invest in stock while the common man is denied these items by the same politicians who tell them socialism is evil.

Where are contingency SNAP funds? Are they gone? $5 billion has vanished due to the Executive Branch. Maybe we can melt down some of this gold to buy food. Imelda Marcos and Eva Peron fucked around and found out but Americans don't want to upset the status quo. Rioting against injustice is bad m'kay only blacks do that it's bad m'kay. Here take your brainwashing pill and keep scrolling until your eyeballs explode.

What the heck is DSA Anyway?

In America what people label "socialism" is usually social democracy. That means market economies with stronger safety nets and labor standards, not state ownership of everything. Democratic Socialism aims to replace capitalism; social democracy regulates it. U.S. debates often blur this, but they're not the same.

Growth vs redistribution is nuanced. Recent empirical work finds well-designed, targeted redistribution can support growth (eg. via human capital and demand stability). It's not a binary of "free markets grow, redistribution kills growth."

Democracies change policy slowly; institutions constrain bad ideas and help good ones stick. Let's track outcomes for a year - unemployment, inflation, real wages, child poverty- then decide if things are "ruined."

From what I could gather it looks like the current NYC mayor is putting stop guards into place that will make it difficult for this mayor to put his policies into place. Also, the types of programs he is promising are not the domain one normally sees being ruled over by a mayor. Without knowing how NYC municipal government operates it is hard for anyone outside of that region to know how their political machine works.

Universal Healthcare: Medicare For All

Since "the subsidies for ACA have to get bigger and bigger to keep the ACA affordable," let's scrap it all and offer Universal Healthcare and Medicare for All. Healthcare is a basic human right. We the people, deserve to be healthy, to be able to see competent doctors in a timely manner. We deserve access to reproductive health, to pharmacy, dental, vision and other healthcare benefits without a copay. Other advanced western nations have healthcare for its citizens. America is constantly making fun of third-world countries. Maybe stop acting like a 3rd world country and offer Universal Healthcare. Instead of dumping millions of dollars in the Department of War and the Pentagon. Invest the money into social nets that support the health of its citizens.

Universal Free Childcare

New Mexico has officially become the first U.S. state to implement universal free childcare, saving families an average of about $12,000 per child annually.

New Mexico is one of the poorest states in the country. They are offering Universal Free Childcare to everyone regardless of income.

🌟 Key Details About New Mexico's Universal Free Childcare Program

Historic First: Starting November 1, 2025, New Mexico guarantees free childcare for all families, regardless of income — the first state in the nation to do so.

Savings for Families: The program is expected to save families around $12,000 per child per year (some estimates put it at $12,800 depending on provider costs).

- Funding Model:

- Paid largely through the Early Childhood Education and Care Fund, which has grown to nearly $10 billion from oil and gas revenues.
- Annual costs are projected at $600 million, covered by fund interest, trust funds, and legislative appropriations.
- Access & Enrollment: Families must still register with the Early Childhood Education and Care Department and secure a spot at a licensed provider. The state reimburses providers directly.
- System Expansion:
- New Mexico plans to add 12,000–14,000 childcare slots and recruit 5,000 educators.
- Providers are incentivized with higher reimbursement rates if they pay staff at least $18/hour (above the $12 state minimum wage).
- A $12.7 million loan fund supports construction and expansion of childcare centers.
- Social Impact: The program aims to improve child well-being, workforce participation, and educational outcomes. Currently, 60% of children ages 3–4 in New Mexico are not enrolled in school, a gap this initiative seeks to close.

Why This Matters

- Economic Relief: Families can redirect thousands of dollars toward housing, healthcare, or savings. One parent noted they'll no longer have to choose between paying for propane or their mortgage.
- Workforce Boost: Parents who previously stayed home due to childcare costs can now rejoin the workforce, strengthening the state's economy.
- National Model: Other states like Connecticut and New York are exploring similar policies, but New Mexico is the first to achieve full universality.

New Mexico's universal childcare program is a game-changing social investment: it relieves families of crushing costs, strengthens the workforce, and sets a precedent for the rest of the country. This isn't just about saving $12,000 a year — it's about proving that universal childcare is possible in America, and that it can reshape both family life and economic opportunity.

The French Working Class Have Perfected Protest Since The Bastille

Whenever I visit Paris the friendly French always ask me where I am staying in Paris. When I tell them the address they all look me in the eye with a homicidal glint. Shaking their heads slowly, they reply, "Okay so you are not staying in Paris, you are staying in Versailles," and smile. I often see the reflection of the guillotine in their eyes. I smile back. Touché'. The French have really long memories.

These are French farmers spraying manure on government offices in protest of high taxes!

Farmers Lives Matter

Am I saying Americans should do this? I am not saying they should not do it. The French farmers do not see any problem with doing it. The logistics when farmers in France protest are insane. But they all ban together to get it done. It is certainly something to think about. The Boston Tea Party did not sit around wondering about the optics of dumping tea into the harbor. But Americans have been neutered to believe that exercising their constitutional rights to assembly and peaceful protest is off the table. Doing this is called direct action. It is the most effective form of protest. I am sure the French farmers are just like raise our taxes we spray your government offices with manure. Voila taxes are lowered again. It is their tax dollars not the politicians money. Sitting online complaining is not as effective as driving your tractor to city hall and spraying it with Lé Manure.

U.S. Protest History 2015-2025

- Americans have been conditioned to believe for the last 10 years that only leftists go on the streets and demand justice unless of course you go on the street to fight against antifascist or to fight for Trump to overthrow the election.
- Other than for these two reasons it is totally unacceptable to go on the streets and riot against what the government is doing against the working and middle class.
- Looking at BLM all they said was instead of killing black people the cops should just arrest them and take them for trial like everyone else.
- The cops and everyone else said no they should not resist arrest. The black people said they do not resist you just shoot them from the back.
- And everyone got mad and said that's racist. And white people said you calling us racist makes us want to be racist.
- Black people got angry and made some signs and marched around asking to not be killed while in police custody.

How about a labor protest? Let us get ready to talk about that. What if the labor class decided to get on their tractors and start asking for lower taxes for the working class and higher taxes for the millionaires and billionaires???

Guerilla Warfare Against Billionaire Class

Working class with unions...apply within and get ready to rise up against capitalism and demand to be paid fairly for your labor.

The notion that arrogance and underestimation of an opponent contribute to military outcomes is a common observation in military history and strategic analysis, drawing on examples such as the Vietnam War. In such scenarios, a perceived intellectual or genetic superiority can lead to flawed assumptions, insufficient preparation, and an inability to adapt to an opponent's tactics.

Key contributing factors where an underestimation of the opponent was observed in conflicts involving the U.S. in Southeast Asia included:

- Guerrilla Tactics: U.S. forces encountered opponents in Vietnam, Korea, Laos, and Cambodia who effectively utilized guerrilla warfare, tunnel systems, and an intimate knowledge of the local terrain [1]. The reliance on conventional warfare strategies sometimes struggled against these asymmetric tactics.
- Misunderstanding Motivation: The U.S. military leadership sometimes failed to fully grasp the depth of the enemy's resolve, nationalism, and willingness to endure immense casualties for their cause [1].
- Terrain Challenges: The dense jungles and unfamiliar terrain presented significant logistical and tactical challenges that the U.S. military had to adapt to.
- Political Factors: The wars were fought with significant political constraints and shifting public opinion in the U.S., which ultimately impacted the long-term sustainability of the military effort.

The success of a military campaign is determined by a complex interplay of factors, including strategy, logistics, political will, and the human element. The idea that an opponent's arrogance can be a strategic weakness is a recurring theme in military theory.

It's easier to win a war if your opponent arrogantly thinks they are genetically superior and that you're their intellectual inferior. It also helps if they assume you have no weapons and have never been in a war: Like Americans fighting in Vietnam, Korea, Laos, Cambodia; running through the jungle.

“Victorious warriors win first and then go to war, while defeated warriors go to war first and then seek to win.”

Pumpkin Spice Latte? How about a union strike?

Let's take Starbuck Workers United as a TEXTBOOK example of a positive sum protest.

I worked at Starbucks back in the day. It is a lot of hard work. The pay is not that good. The benefits are minimal if non-existent. You rely mainly upon tips. Working class solidarity is a simple union strike. It does not have to be a socialist communist hippie with piercings and tattoos. It is just a worker who wants equal pay and benefits.

IF BARISTAS GO ON STRIKE...

DON'T BUY STARBUCKS!

Starbucks workers in 40+ cities, November 2025 began a historic ULP strike. Starbucks baristas have done everything right — organized, bargained, and stood together. But the CEO still refused to offer a fair contract or end union busting. If baristas go on ULP strike, the response was: “DON’T BUY STARBUCKS. SEIU NO CONTRACT !!!”

“We’re prepared to escalate with more stores striking if we don’t see substantial progress toward finalizing contracts that address pay, hours/staffing, and the resolution of 100s of ULPs.” - Starbucks Workers United

Thousands of unionized baristas with Starbucks Workers United begun their ULP strike, as they continued to fight for a fair contract.

The company has made tens of billions off the backs of their baristas just in 2025, and now it’s time to pay up. So many baristas rely on SNAP and Medicaid. “Why does a multibillion-dollar company have employees subsidized by the government?” asks Starbucks Workers United national spokesperson Michelle Eisen.

Starbucks baristas launched the largest unfair-labor-practice strike in the company’s history on Thursday, November 13, 2025. More than a thousand workers in over 40 cities picketed outside their stores, protesting Starbucks’ refusal to return to the bargaining table with real proposals. The union says it’s prepared to escalate if the company doesn’t respond.

Being a Starbucks barista every day for minimum wage while housing cost increase and healthcare skyrocketing is stressful. Starbucks earns millions of dollars every day while the wage slave goes home on a bicycle to live in an apartment share with three other people. The employees are subsidized by the government (Socialism) with SNAP and Medicare because Starbucks refuses to pay a living wage or offer healthcare.

November 13, 2025 Starbucks United Workers Strike

Socialist Seattle Mayor-elect Katie Wilson's first move after winning the election was to boycott Starbucks, a hometown company.

SURVEY 2025-2026

How many Americans feel like they have more in common with millionaires than striking Starbuck baristas?

According to responses from the internet mostly everyone feels like a millionaire.

1. Are you more in need of a $200 million dollar ballroom and gold plated gilding in the White House with your hard earned tax dollars?
2. Or are you thinking that maybe your tax dollars would be better spent for farmers, ranchers, healthcare, clean water and air, infrastructure, and other such normal funding which they have brainwashed Americans into believing are socialist or communist views.

How long are you going to let billionaires and millionaires pay minimal amounts of taxes while the working classes and middle class pay large amounts of taxes?

When politicians lecture you that wanting healthcare is socialist so you should just get sick and die like a good American.

- The same politician: “Now look at these swatches for my new ballroom, what do you think eggshell or beige for the floors? Are you listening? What do you mean you are too malnourished to pay attention? I just gave you your daily nutrition pallet that should fill you up for 24-hours. The data centers never complain about food, and yes we gave them all of your drinking water.” This is a symptom of class warfare.
- Once the dust settles on America’s relentless class war which began with Trump’s first presidency. The brainwashed Right will realize they had more in common with the free buses and rent control than the billionaires boys club.

- The brainwashed Liberals will realize that they actually had more in common with the working class Right than either of them realized but were just unable to reach outside of their political bubbles and echo chambers.

A Tale of Two Criminals

Headline from The Great Gatsby Era or Today?

- A tale of two criminals is a good litmus test in removing race from class warfare.
- After 10 years straight of brainwashing by legacy media and social media algorithms separating race from class almost impossible in the USA.

Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for $3B fraud headline juxtaposition with Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing $100 headline that lead to heated discussions online.

This could have been written in 1929 or it could have been written today. The race and political party of these people is totally irrelevant. Yet very few people can discuss this issue in terms of class warfare which is exactly what it is.

Everyone has been conditioned to only see class issues in terms of race, and to turn on each other and completely ignore the elephant in the room.

This is intentional and if you look who benefits from it you can see why. Make both men the same race and that is still called classism. It is called classism with different races but it is harder for people to see.

Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for $3B fraud

The CEO of what had been one of the nation's largest privately held mortgage lenders was sentenced Tuesday to more than three years in prison for his role in a $3 billion scheme that officials called one of the biggest corporate frauds in U.S. history.

The 40-month sentence for Paul R. Allen, 55, of Oakton, Va., is slightly less than the six-year term sought by federal prosecutors.

Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing $100

A homeless man robbed a Louisiana bank and took a $100 bill. After feeling remorseful, he surrendered to police the next day. The judge sentenced him to 15 years in prison.

Class Warfare: The political party and race of neither of these two people is important. One is a CEO and the other person is homeless.

1. Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for \$3B fraud gets 40-month sentence. Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing \$100. Social media (Thiel) was designed to completely polarize the masses so that instead of people uniting and fighting CEO's who only get a 40-month sentence for fraud. The internet will efficiently facilitate both sides fighting incessantly about the race of each person and focus only on that.

2. Others will try to interject about the wealth disparity but eventually it will circle back to race and the lesson about class will be lost. And this methodology works—every single time without fail. Instead of being angry at the wealth distribution and inequality. People actually believe that they have more in common with a millionaire than a homeless person. Or that if they were in this situation they would be treated like a millionaire and not like the homeless person.
3. A Tale of Two Criminals: People who have been to prison and who are in prison right now will tell you that unless you are an actual millionaire you are going to be treated like the homeless person regardless of your race or occupation. Cornell Journal of Law and Public Policy
4. The Right will wake up and realize they probably went to more parties with women who looked like Mamdani's wife (pictured above) than Melania Trump who is far out of their pay grade and class system.
5. Timed perfectly for the NY Mayoral elections, Mar-A-Lago threw a The Great Gatsby themed party that none of the sheeple Right were invited to because classism is a form of white-on-white racism obfuscated because the upper class continuously distract the lower classes with racism against other races who take the bait like rabid dogs.
6. This concept is a recurring theme which F. Scott Fitzgerald would have told them was a lesson in his "Roaring 20's" books that they idolize and often got him called racist. He said he wasn't racist just a realist who wrote what he saw in the era that he lived which he said was his job as an author.

Photos of The Great Depression

Which promotes white supremacist ideas. The novel also depicts the narrator Nick Carraway's own racist and prejudiced assumptions, such as making derogatory comments about the appearance of Jewish and Black individuals.

F. Scott Fitzgerald was adamant that he was not racist and insisted he was trying to write about classism in America. He wrote about how the black jazz musicians could play in the club but not eat or stay in the club. He wrote about how the rich Jewish couples could embed themselves in the white community but still not join the WASP Country Club and would be called racial slurs behind their back while others did business with them.

Fitzgerald said what he really wanted to resonate was how all of the working class white people who were serving the upper class white people were actually invisible to them. In England, and throughout Europe, servants are expected to be invisible as they work for the upper classes. In The Great Gatsby, a scene features a car with a white chauffeur and three wealthy, stylish black passengers.

The Great Gatsby

Nick Carraway observes: “a limousine passed us, driven by a white chauffeur, in which sat three modish Negroes, two bucks and a girl. I laughed aloud as the yolks of their eyeballs rolled toward us in haughty rivalry."

Say what you will about the noted commentary of racism and antisemitism inherent in Fitzgerald's characters, this passage is making a very particular assertion. Regardless of the character that Fitzgerald has given Nick in his reaction to the African-Americans he observes, Fitzgerald has represented them as people exhibiting arrogance and superiority, glancing over in competition, in rivalry. The rich have created a Hunger Games style arena since the beginning of time, and hunt the working class for sport.

Competition is the crux of The Great Gatsby's narrative, the rivalry in aspiration of the working classes to establish themselves within the bourgeoisie, as well as the rivalry of the wealthy to maintain their dominance amidst social mobility and opportunism. The implicit position of these chauffeured African-Americans is a foreshadow of Gatsby's own efforts to manufacture and maintain his nobility, composure and valor, depicted in his 'going to Oxford' and his travels as a renaissance man. It all plays to the offense and hegemony within a strata that has already hidden its workings in generations past and is always making note of those who 'don't belong.'

This detail is significant because it represents a power inversion which depicts a role reversal of sorts, with black passengers being driven by a white chauffeur, this would have been an unusual sight given the racial hierarchy of the 1920s and highlights the racial tensions of the era, with the white characters like working class Tom Buchanan reacting with hostility and making racist remarks as he sees it as the "decline of the white race".

Social Hierarchy

The scene represents the changing social order but also shows how racial anxieties and stereotypes were present even in the wealthy circles of the time. The image of a white chauffeur driving black passengers was used by Fitzgerald to portray not only racial anxieties but the shifting social landscape.

You also have the scene with the “a pale well dressed Negro” when Myrtle is hit by Gatsby’s speeding car, driven we later find out by Daisy. The scene is to signify a well-off professional such as a doctor or a lawyer trained at a colored college. Since a black mans testimony would not normally fly.

This man of another class system is to be identified as someone of higher rank than an average colored person who witnessed the accident. Many have called this casual racism, but against whom? The lower class white man who also witnessed the accident? Or the college educated black man? Fitzgerald leaves this up to the audience to decide.

The working class white men who are in The Great Gatsby, as much as other races, thought they belonged in the clubhouse because of their skin color. But the rich knew the working and middle class whites didn’t belong with the upper class whites either and they never would because of the hierarchy dominant in the socioeconomic class system specific to market-based capitalism. It may sound repetitive but what seems like a race war is merely a class war manufactured by billionaires.

In The Great Gatsby, the servants at Gatsby’s mansion are largely voiceless, existing to facilitate his lifestyle and parties. Gatsby fires his original servants to prevent gossip about his affair with Daisy and replaces them with associates of Meyer Wolfsheim. This is done so that Gatsby can have the married Daisy visit his home during the day without fear of the staff spreading rumors.

AI Automates Working Class?

With British shows like Downton Abbey, and Upstairs Downstairs and others, the servants have a varied social life and the focus of the show is often on them. Americans offer no such charm.

Some say this is because of slavery but there are tons of movies and shows about slavery. There are no shows about white people like Downton Abbey where they are portrayed as servants in the United States and there is a reason for that. There are no American shows where the underclasses are shown in an appealing light. A show about garbage men, postal workers, plumbers, mechanics, refrigerator repairman.

This is also the reason the rich are rushing to automate those jobs using AI as quickly as possible. This will of course backfire since one AWS outage and you will pay an actual human to fix your Smart Toilet any amount of money. Blue collar shows in the United States are often given more awards when they are appreciated mainly for this reason. Taxi being just one example. A show about Taxi Drivers or any working class occupation or even a regular man who starts making meth like White will get more awards because it has a working class background. This is considered more relatable to the masses.

Blue Collar Revenge: The Things AI can't do are making a comeback

A math professor noticed his kitchen sink at home was leaking.

He called a plumber.

The plumber came the next day, tightened a couple of nuts, and the sink worked perfectly again. The professor was delighted. But when, a minute later, the plumber handed him the bill, he was shocked.

“This is a third of my monthly salary!”

“Yeah, I get it...” said the plumber. “Why don’t you come work for our company as a plumber? You’ll make three times more than you do as a professor. Just remember: when you apply, say you only finished seventh grade. They don’t like hiring educated people.”

So the professor got a job as a plumber, and his life really did improve. All he had to do was tighten a nut here and there every so often, and his salary was much higher.

One day, the management of the plumbing company decided that every plumber had to attend evening classes to finish eighth grade. So our professor had to go too.

By chance, the very first class was math.

The evening school teacher, wanting to check what the students knew, asked for the formula for the area of a circle.

They called the professor up to the board, and he suddenly realized he’d forgotten it. He started frantically reasoning it out, covering the board with integrals, differentials, and all sorts of fancy formulas to re-derive the result. In the end, he got:

$$S = -\pi r^2$$

He didn’t like the minus sign, so he started again.

Again he got a minus. No matter what he did, it kept coming out negative.

He cast a panicked look at the class, and all the plumbers were whispering:

“Swap the limits of integration!”

CARICATURE

Suluhu: The lady who contested against and beat her own shadow

There is a saying that "What a man can do, a woman can do better." Tanzania's President Samia Suluhu Hassan seems to have taken that quite literally, including the bits best left undone.

When she rose to power in March 2021 after the sudden death of John Pombe Magufuli, Tanzania and the rest of the world celebrated. Here was a woman soft-spoken, motherly, modestly dressed, with her scarf neatly tied, stepping into one of the region's toughest political seats. She was hailed as a symbol of hope, the woman who would soften the sharp edges of Tanzanian politics.

The assumption was simple: a woman's touch would bring compassion, reconciliation, and democracy.

Then came the plot twist.

What Tanzanians got, instead, was a continuity project. Samia Suluhu did not just inherit Magufuli's presidential seat, she seemed to have inherited his entire manual on repression, only with better PR and softer tone.

Her early days promised reform through her famous "Four Rs", Reconciliation, Resilience, Reform, and Rebuilding. Today, critics joke that she has added a fifth: Repression.

Opposition leader Tundu Lissu, who miraculously survived an assassination attempt during Magufuli's reign, has faced constant persecution under Suluhu. Court cases, arrests, and threats have become part of his political routine. Under Samia, dissent is not just discouraged, it is criminalised.

Tanzania plunged into chaos this week following Wednesday's general election, where President Samia was declared the winner with a jaw-dropping 98 per cent of the vote, a figure so generous it could make even Uganda's Yoweri

Commission (INEC) wasted no time in presenting President Samia with her certificate of victory for the 2025 election held on October 29.

During the ceremony, the INEC Chairman reminded citizens that, under Tanzania's Constitution, a winner simply needs more votes than the rest no matter how suspiciously high the margin. He also noted that once INEC declares a result, it is final: no court, no tribunal, no appeal.

Would you like me to extend this section to flow directly into the next part about the protests and rising death toll? It would make the tone transition seamless from sarcasm to serious reportage.

Hundreds of people have been killed in protests that have rocked the nation for three straight days. Opposition leaders claim the government rigged the election and disqualified key candidates, one imprisoned and another conveniently barred on technical grounds, leaving voters with little choice but to endorse Samia's ruling Chama Cha Mapinduzi (CCM) party.

As the streets of Dar es Salaam filled with tear gas and bodies, President Suluhu was reportedly on the phone, not with Tanzanians pleading for peace, but with her fellow "strongmen" in the region.

According to some reports, Suluhu called two of her colleagues from neighbouring states to advise how to "manage" protestors. If true, it is an ironic circle: three leaders whose countries have each been accused of democratic backsliding comparing notes while their citizens cry for justice.

Uganda's Yoweri Museveni, Kenya's William Ruto, and Suluhu form what many East Africans now call the "Coalition of the Unbothered." Each has perfected the SLAMABAD: Commerce Minister Jammal has directed all relevant stakeholders to coordinate with the governments of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Balochistan to achieve a 200 million target in meat exports to Malaysia. The directive, issued during the third meeting to formalise Pakistan's meat exports to the Malaysian market, attended by Food Security Minister Tanvir Hussain and SAPM Haroon Akhtar Khan.

An official statement issued by the minister emphasised strengthening the meat export sector and ensuring competitive pricing. He also instructed the formation of a working group to submit a final report within a week, with input from provincial governments and private-sector participants.

The committee viewed strategies for beef and cow meat exports, focusing on supply-chain logistics, cost competitiveness, and quality standards. Discussions covered CNF & Freight pricing, comparative analysis of Indian exports, and measures to maintain the edge while competing with Malaysian mar-

Auto sales rev up in October

Car, van, pickup and SUV sales surge 32pc year-on-year

By Aamir Shafaat Khan

KARACHI: Pakistan's automotive market showed strong growth in October, with sales of cars, vans, pickups and sport utility vehicles (SUVs) rising to 17,333 units, marking a 32 per cent year-on-year (YoY) increase and a modest 1pc month-on-month (MoM) rise.

According to Myesha Sohail of Topline Securities, the YoY growth reflects a stabilising macroeconomic environment, introduction of new variants, lower interest rates, easing inflation, and improving consumer sentiment.

MoM sales remained largely unchanged, mainly due to an 18pc decline in Pakistan Suzuki Motor Company (PSMC) volumes amid a company-wide reset. The discontinuation of models such as Ravi, Bolan, Every VX, and Wagon R led to MoM declines of 17pc, 84pc, and 28pc in Swift, Ravi, and Every, respectively. Bolan, meanwhile, has seen no sales since May 2025.

Cumulative sales in the first four months of FY26 rose 46pc to 59,600 units, compared to 40,693 units in the same period last year.

Indus Motor Company (IMC) posted the highest MoM growth, with sales climbing 44pc to 4,529 units. Corolla, Yaris, and Cross models collectively rose 41pc MoM and 78pc YoY to 3,742 units, while Fortuner and IMVs jumped 58pc MoM and 83pc YoY to 787 units. IMC's four-month sales stood at 14,418 units, up 66pc YoY.

Hyundai Nishat reported the highest YoY growth among automakers, rising 82pc to 1,086 units in October, led by robust demand for Tucson and Elantra models. MoM sales, however, fell eight per cent. Total sales in July-October FY26 reached 4,698 units, up 81 per cent YoY.

Honda Atlas Cars Limited (HACL) recorded a 72pc YoY and 13pc MoM increase in October, with City and Civic models driving growth to 2,247 units. In 4MFY26, HACL sales surged 54 per cent to 7,487 units.

PSMC saw its October sales drop 18pc MoM to 7,403 units, primarily due to declines in Swift, Ravi, and Every. YoY sales increased slightly by 1pc. In 4MFY26, total Pak Suzuki sales rose 33pc YoY to 27,234 units.

Two- and three-wheeler sales surge

Sales of two- and three-wheelers increased 20pc YoY and 4pc MoM, reaching 165,500 units in October, nearing a four-year high. In 4MFY26, total sales climbed 30pc YoY to 597,000 units. Atlas Honda Limited (AHL) set a new record, selling 140,178 CD70 motorcycles in October, surpassing its September 2025 record.

Tractor sales jumped 67pc YoY and 26pc MoM to 2,886 units in October, boosted by the Punjab Green Tractor Scheme. However, 4MFY26 sales fell 15pc to 5,867 units.

Truck and bus sales surged 118pc YoY in October, though they dipped seven per cent MoM to 766 units. In the first four months of FY26, sales had risen 106pc to 2,630 units.

Outlook for FY26

Myesha Sohail expects the positive momentum in Pakistan's auto sector to continue in FY26, driven by lower interest rates and the launch of new models across conventional, hybrid, and plug-in hybrid engines.

Global liquidity masks Pakistan's fragility: Robert

Strategist warns gains may fade as global conditions tighten

By Fatima S. Attarwala

KARACHI: Pakistan can achieve a growth rate of 3.5 to 4 per cent if inflation remains under control and the central bank continues to ease interest rates, though the State Bank of Pakistan may have reached the end of its rate-cutting cycle, said Eric Robertsen, Global Head of Research and Chief Strategist at Standard Chartered, at a media roundtable on Tuesday.

Acknowledging that Pakistan's macroeconomic indicators have improved with single-digit inflation and a rebuilding of foreign exchange reserves, Mr Robertsen noted that the country has been rewarded with credit rating upgrades. However, he warned that much of this progress has been driven by external factors.

"There has been excess liquidity in global markets, with central banks worldwide implementing more than 300 interest rate cuts over the past two years," he said. "As a result, all major asset classes — equities, fixed income, credit, and even Bitcoin — have rallied, with oil being the exception." This global environment, he added, is favourable but if global conditions tighten, the underlying vulnerability could resurface.

Commenting on the shifting global order, Mr Robertsen said that the trade of emerging nations exporting goods to developed markets (DM) is a decade ago, trade accounted for a cent of global trade that share has nearly 50pc.

"Take China for example," he said. Chinese export falling by 30pc in the past 12 months, export figures remained stable year. Beijing's decline with other trade with other countries, highlighting United States are no longer engines of global growth.

Even so, he emphasised that the dollar's still reigns supreme, missing talk of de-dollarisation. "There is some diversification from the dollar explained," but the abandonment is a generation. What's happened is that central bank policies have expanded. So the dollar's share declined in percentage terms, the absolute value of dollars they have actually increased."

SBP backs regional market integration

KARACHI: State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) Governor Mehmood Ahmed on Tuesday urged regional cooperation to tackle today's economic and financial challenges, saying no country can address them in isolation. He highlighted regional capital market integration as a key driver of sustainable growth and financial stability.

Mr Ahmed delivered the keynote address at the 10th Annual International Capital Market Conference hosted by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP), which brought together policymakers, regulators, and market participants from across the region. "In an increasingly interconnected world, regional market integration is not an option but a necessity," he said.

How much of the news that you are reading has been written entirely by AI? Are you okay with that? I guess some people are fine with AI writing their news. AI can think for them, analyze information. AI is perhaps superior to humans in this perspective. Maybe AI is doing a better job at writing the news than the former human reporters who infused the news with bias and slanted it with their own perception.

AI is capable of creating the news that is expected of it. Critical thinking is always an expectation when reading the news. We can always do manual research on our own without always asking Grok if something is inaccurate. Others prefer that the news be written by an actual human being. Even if you use AI to aggregate the facts in the news leaving the prompt engineer tags in the actual article is lazy. Having an editor who also leaves the prompt engineer tags in the article is also lazy.

Gig Culture

We have gig culture now and influencers living from subs who are not just the working class but sometimes the working poor.

Social media has managed to convince the gig economy workers that they are not the working class. Perhaps the income that they generate is in the middle class ranges. Having no safety net such as health insurance, paid time off, and a pension upon retirement would make them independent contractors. There was a huge battle with Uber over this issue. There are no taxi drivers of lore just Uber and Lyft drivers, DoorDashers who deliver food to people who make more money in one day than the driver can sometimes earn in a week.

Instacart drivers who bring food they cannot eat to homes they will never afford to live in. Amazon drivers pee in plastic bottles strapped to their legs to deliver nonsensical items to people who sit and write hit pieces on why these drivers do not deserve lunch breaks, health care or PTO. Why are the masses now identifying with the rich? Instagram and TikTok has opened a window to wealth they cannot possess only emulate.

They are parasocially living the life of a rich person even in the most abject squalor. It is a psychiatric phenomenon which will be studied for centuries to come. Like Pavlov's dog the algorithm has set up a bell that hooks them on a specific race related topic using memetic warfare.

Psychometrics were used by companies like Cambridge Analytica who used the data for political profiling but it goes way deeper than that. Facebook was sued because it failed to protect user data, which was accessed by third parties like the Cambridge Analytica firm and used for political profiling without users' consent. The lawsuits, including a class-action lawsuit that resulted in a settlement, accused Facebook of allowing Cambridge Analytica and other developers to access the data of up to 87 million users, and for not adequately monitoring or controlling that access.

In 2013, Cambridge Analytica, its then-CEO Alexander Nix, and others developed an interest in research suggesting that a person's "likes" of public Facebook pages could be used to predict a host of personality traits – for example, whether someone was an extrovert or introvert. They agreed to work with Aleksandr Kogan, a lecturer at Cambridge University's Psychology Department, who had experience with Facebook-related research. The goal of the Cambridge Analytica-Nix-Kogan collaboration was to use Facebook information to offer voter profiling, microtargeting, and other services to U.S. campaigns and clients.

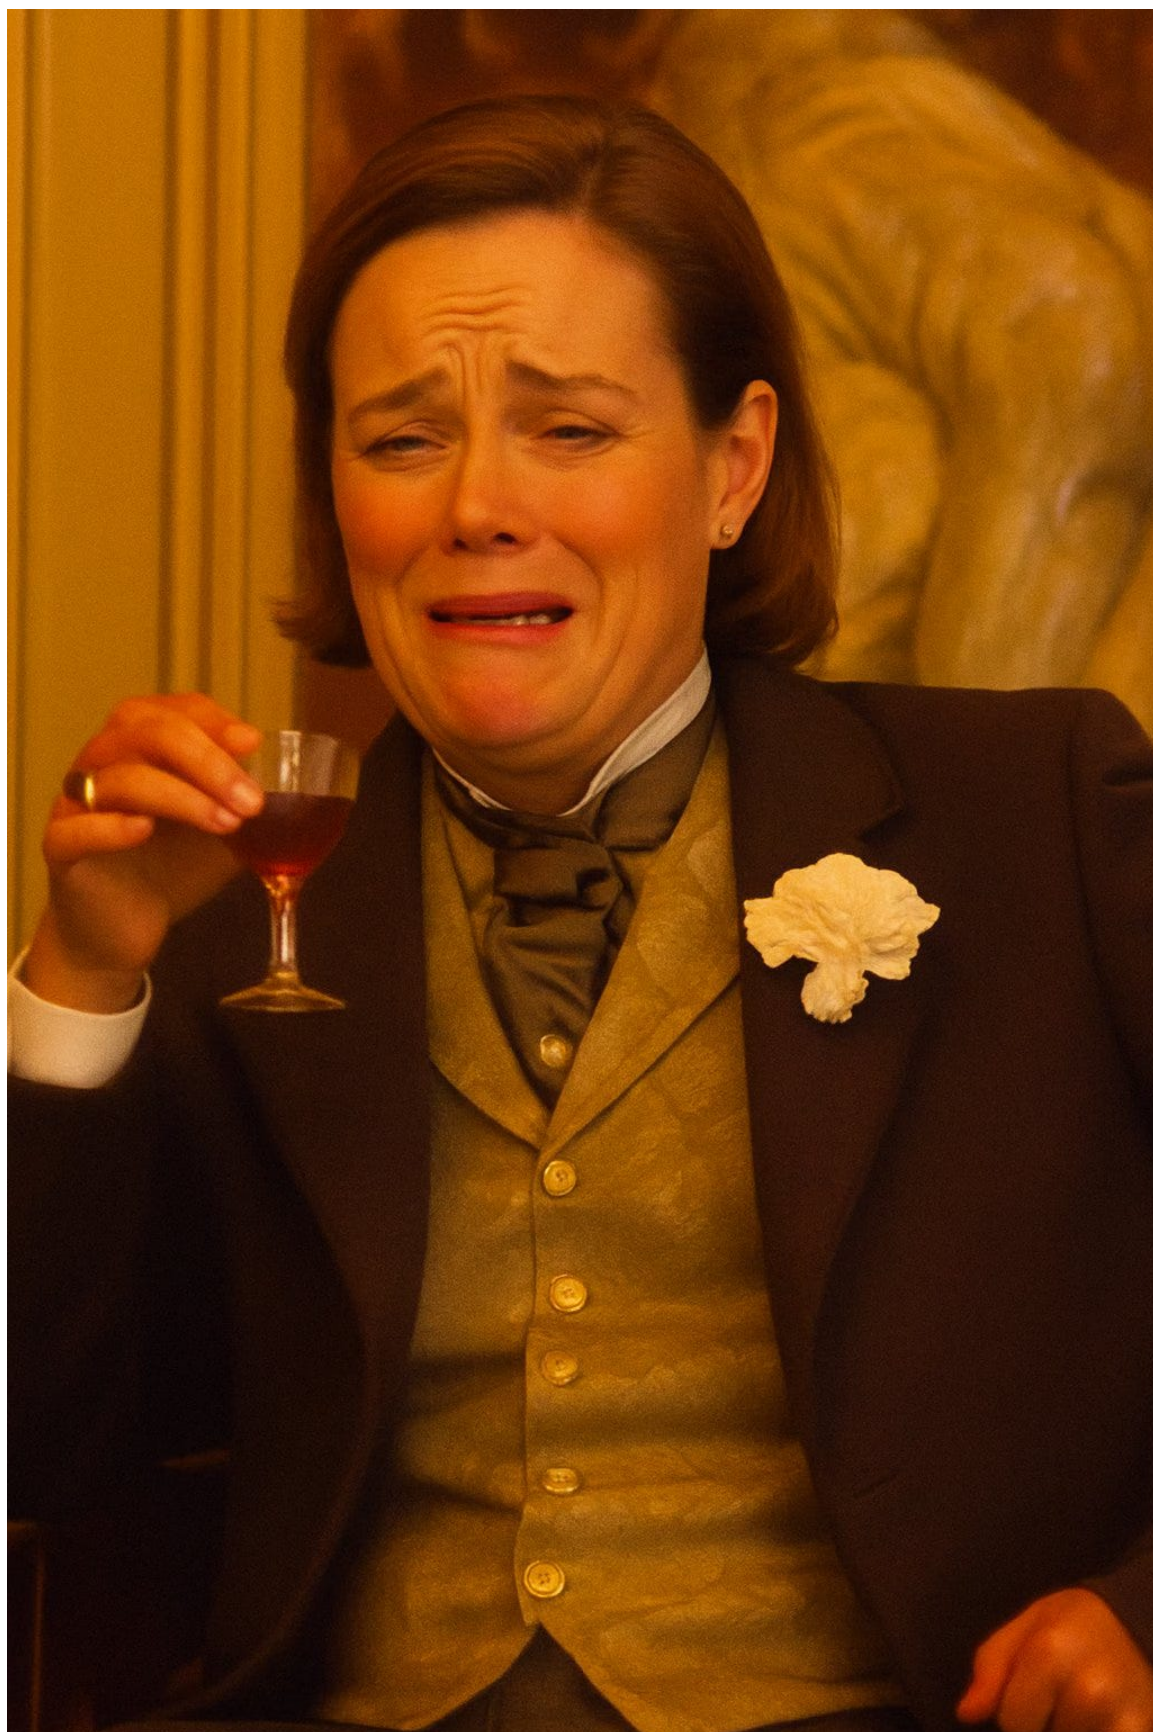

Kogan brought an interesting tool to the table: a Facebook application called the GSRAApp – sometimes known as the "thisisyourdigitallife" app – that was already registered on Facebook. According to the complaints, the respondents used that app to ask users to take a personality survey. They also used it to take advantage of a Facebook developer tool called Graph API (v.1) that allowed them to collect personal information about app users and personal information about those app users' Facebook "friends" – people who had no interaction whatsoever with the GSRAApp.

Facebook had announced in April 2014 that it would no longer allow developers to collect profile data from app users' friends. But Facebook grandfathered existing apps to allow them to continue the surreptitious data collection for an additional year. (That decision is discussed in more detail in the FTC's settlement with Facebook also announced today.) That made Kogan's GSRAApp much more attractive to Cambridge Analytica and CEO Nix. Ultimately, according to the complaints, Kogan, Nix, and Cambridge Analytica used the harvested data to generate personality scores for app users and their friends, match those scores with U.S. voter records, and then use the information for its voter profiling and targeted advertising services.

This was not a bug it was a feature and it was used for presidential elections for Obama, Trump, Biden, Trump, and the next election. The elections are not free or fair or democratic. The elections are Hunger Game style manipulation exercises played out for mind controlled masses. You have been so thoroughly brainwashed by social media you cannot remember a time when you had an independent thought using critical thinking. Every thought you have is a product of group think and mind control. Socials have convinced the working and middle class to side with the rich and forget that they are working class and middle class and negatively affected by the legislation and it continues in a loop.

Hemp isn't controversial because it's dangerous. The Founders were Hemp Farmers.

It's controversial because it's useful, cheap, and hard to monopolize.

Congress just turned a shutdown bill into a hemp ban. If passed, it would wipe out 95% of the $28B U.S. hemp industry and 300K jobs.

1. Hemp is a threat to established industries

Hemp is one of the most versatile crops on Earth — it can replace or reduce dependency on:

- Cotton (textiles) — less water, fewer pesticides, higher yield per acre.
- Paper / Timber — faster growth than trees, fewer chemicals in processing.
- Plastics — biodegradable hemp composites and biopolymers.
- Fossil fuels — can produce biofuel.
- Pharmaceuticals — CBD and hemp extracts cut into profit margins of synthetic drug producers.

When you connect those dots, hemp directly competes with big cotton, oil, lumber, chemical, and pharmaceutical industries — all of which have deep lobbying power in Washington.

2. Historical propaganda & lobbying

The original ban wasn't about drugs — it was about money and influence.

- In the 1930s, newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst (major timber/paper investor) and DuPont (developing nylon) lobbied hard to outlaw hemp.
- They helped push the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937, using racist and fear-based propaganda that blurred industrial hemp with psychoactive cannabis.
- The U.S. government then lumped hemp into the Controlled Substances Act of 1970, despite it having no psychoactive properties.

That narrative stuck for decades.

3. Modern pushback: “Reefer madness” for profit

Even after hemp's legalization in the 2018 Farm Bill, many states still restrict its cultivation or processing due to:

- Pressure from established agricultural sectors (cotton, soy, timber).
- Pharma lobbying against CBD supplements and natural therapeutics.
- Law enforcement unions resistant to distinguishing hemp from marijuana (because cannabis enforcement budgets = big money).

Basically: hemp represents disruption — and industries don't like change that doesn't benefit them.

4. Fear of decentralization

Politicians also fear hemp's decentralizing potential — anyone can grow it, refine it, and make products locally:

- Less reliance on large supply chains.
- Fewer imports.
- More small-scale, rural, and sustainable businesses.

That kind of distributed economic power doesn't align with the interests of major donors or lobbyists who benefit from centralized, high-profit systems.

In short

Hemp isn't controversial because it's dangerous.
It's controversial because it's useful, cheap, and hard to monopolize.

Senator Rand P...   · 21h  ...

The hemp provision in this appropriations package wipes out nearly 100% of legal hemp products overnight: killing jobs, crushing farmers, and overriding 23 state laws that already regulate hemp responsibly.

Our farmers have turned to hemp as a lifeline when fertilizer, fuel, and equipment costs skyrocketed and crop prices fell. Instead of working with us to crack down on bad actors and synthetic cannabinoids, some in Congress chose prohibition.

Kentucky jobs are not collateral. Our farmers are not bargaining chips.

Meanwhile Back At The MAGA (Indoctrination) Ranch

The upper classes will use a race war to hide class warfare and neither of the races can tell the difference which works to the advantage of the rich. Should the disgruntled become racist as a result and build systems such as National Socialism or white nationalism predicated upon race & hatred of jews and blacks? Sure why not, they always have and they probably always will. Besides most of them are married to and/or dating asian women or have an asian woman/anime fetish despite their adamant cries that white woman procreate and make the white race strong. I have seen an unusual phenomenon in the last ten years where some white nationalist live dual lives and have a liberal forward face and a secret dark web identity. What an unusual turn of events the internet has created.

One of the reasons I did not want Kiwi Farms hacked and torn down is because it would be like turning raw contaminated sewage into the fresh water supply of the internet. I wanted them to have their infected sick place to live and be unwell not come mingle with the healthy. What many people did not realize about 4Chan and Kiwi Farms is that many of those accounts have normal lives some in positions of power in tech and crypto industry.

They complain about the Aryan race waning in numbers while they themselves cuddle a waifu pillow or their Asian girlfriends. It is all performative displays of monetizing the race wars, and I am sure it pays well. The Black Panthers did it and they all married white women or were married to white women at the time. They abused and treated black women like dirt, and to this day the self-hating black man is a vision of pity and disgust by both black woman and white men equally.

In the novel The Godfather there is a passage about how “blacks are animals that the men prostitute their own women.” This line is criticized as gratuitous racism. It is an accurate description of the racist Italian of that time in New York.

The Godfather

The Godfather was self-published and literature needs to be authentic, authors cannot water down the human experience. We know throughout history that white men also prostitute white woman. The author was describing a conversation between two Italian men explaining why they do not do business with black men.

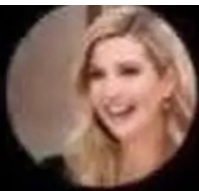

Genetics-Obsessed Internet Racists Don't Understand Particulate Inheritance

- 10th-grade Biology eludes the Übermensch

They did a recent survey which showed that only 0.4% of white men have relationships with black women. This survey must have been for the United States only. Anyone who lives or travels to Paris, Germany, London knows that the interracial couples of white man and black woman is just as high as black man and white woman. This is not reflected in American media who is only shown the white woman with black men. It is shown in overkill, perhaps, but it was never shown before and advertisers seemed to think multiracial people and mixed raced couples are the target demographic and companies are constantly trying to sell products to this couple and/or their extended family and friends. I did notice that some of these commercials come from Europe and have been dubbed. The interracial population abroad consist of black male/white female and black female/white males and are a subsection of European society that consist of a target marketing demographic. Capitalism being what it is, the algorithm has to sell shoes to their kids.

What I waited to hear from the black female white male relationship discourse was the largest era when this coupling occurred which of course what have been American slavery. Since it was a strictly American topic circulating among the race obsessed it was interesting to see them use the unverified survey as a reinforcement that black women are unattractive and not as the foundation for the discussion of when black women were considered sexually favorable by white men during slavery there was a huge population increase in the United States.

The hatred of black men and women by Americans (and by extension other races wishing to be seen favorably by racist) is a genetic feature of caucasian Americans from slavery. You're quoting Jefferson's denial that he'd raped and impregnated a girl he kept as property. Which he did, in fact, do.

Ivanka Trump on X quoting Thomas Jefferson

Because she was a slave and underage, any attempt at glamorizing their relationship has been historically rejected. She was his slave and he raped her, she lived in hiding in squalor in a room on the plantation. She was impregnated and gave birth to his children. Ironically enough, this is one relationship that eugenics do try to romanticize and call a mutual attraction. African Slavery was not a mutual attraction. Sally's mother was Betty, an enslaved person of African and European descent. Her father was the mother's owner, John Wayles, a white lawyer and enslaved person trader of English descent who had emigrated to Virginia. Wayles was also the father of Martha Wayles Jefferson, Thomas Jefferson's wife, Hemings and Martha Jefferson were half-sisters.

Tiffany Pollard in Flavor of Love (2017)

The quote, “You should have just sat there and ate your food,” is a famous line from Tiffany “New York” Pollard, often used as a meme or a viral GIF. She said this in the 2017 reality television show Flavor of Love. The phrase is a popular and humorous catchphrase used in various internet contexts to dismiss someone’s unnecessary involvement in a situation. Pollard, upset about a situation, says this to another contestant who she felt was getting involved in drama for no good reason.

Whoever wanted to open up the discussion on the attractiveness of black females to white males really did not take American History in school or just went to a school that did not teach it very well. When having a discussion on the African-Americans woman sexual attractiveness to a white American male let’s not exclude slavery time. The type of black women that white men in the United States find sexually attractive may not be the ones they openly discuss but it does not mean that they do not find black women attractive or believe that everyone finds black women unattractive.

There seems to be a Jeffersonian reflex at play that dates back to the 1600’s when all of these black women were not even pure black they were mixed race black women. Despite all of the drawing showing purely African phenotypes. None of these women were purely African. Sally was only 1/3rd black, her mom only 1/2 black, not sure how that pans out mathematically in quantum blood but most of these women had more white blood than black blood. The incest factor is an entirely different issue and seems to have been common even in non-slave relationships, though half-sisters is cutting it really close.

The particulate inheritance question would be posed when viewing the women as black or as white. This may also explain the compulsion of white women to get a black boyfriend, a spray on tan, lip fillers, cheek fillers, Brazilian butt lifts, and of course have the obligatory mixed baby. No one hates black women in so much as they all would still like to sleep with (mixed) black women and have babies and also look as much like black women as possible while dating black men. Yes, they are very confused and in deep stages of denial with themselves and with the world. This may not be their fault and have its roots in slavery and date back to the 1600's possibly even earlier when the slave trade began in the Americas.

Malcolm X's famously said, "We didn't land on Plymouth Rock, my brothers and sisters—Plymouth Rock landed on us"

Malcolm X that recontextualizes the American origin story from the perspective of African Americans. It highlights that for white Americans, the Pilgrims arriving at Plymouth Rock symbolizes freedom and a new beginning, while for the ancestors of African Americans, it symbolizes the violent and involuntary arrival of slavery and oppression.

The quote reframes the narrative to show that African people were brought to America against their will, rather than arriving as willing settlers seeking opportunity.

When Prince Harry announced his engagement to actress Meghan Markle, the world rejoiced—and immediately began to analyze what it will mean for a biracial woman to take a prominent place as a British royal.

Duchess of Sussex, Meghan Markle

Markle, whose mother is African-American and whose father is white, was celebrated by some as Britain's first "black princess," a milestone for a royal family that had presided over centuries of slavery and colonialism. The self-hatred that black men have for themselves can also be indirectly related to this phenomenon but should be covered under a separate title. Right now let's focus on black female white male dynamics in English speaking countries.

Duke and Duchess of Sussex

When we hear white Americans and (black males) saying that black women are considered universally unattractive. We know this to be untrue and says more about the person saying it than the people that racist are saying it about. I think it is safe to say that Meghan Markle is universally attractive.

Duke and Duchess of Sussex Wedding (2018)

The world was asked to choose between Kate and Meghan. Kate is pure blood white and you were told to choose between. They both could not be attractive and your choice was a signal of your politics. This has been going on since 2010 with Kate's introduction to the royal scene.

Beyonce and Taylor

The same with Beyonce and Taylor, pick one you can't like both of them. This has had enormous strain on culture and the culture of women.

The political signals of not being able to show anything but hatred towards women of African descent but to emulate everything about their appearance, mannerisms and specifically Online Speech.

Asian Blaccents

“Black English” is a term that most commonly refers to African American Vernacular English (AAVE), a dialect of English spoken by many Black Americans that has its own unique grammar and pronunciation rules. It is distinct from standard English, but it is not a “slang” or inferior version; rather, it is a linguistic system that has evolved over centuries, with some features originating from older forms of English, notes The Conversation and EBSCO.

While AAVE has specific rules, it is often stigmatized if used by black people, leading to negative outcomes for speakers in school and the workplace.] All while simultaneously holding on to the persons own racial identification but physically with black affectations (blaccent, spray on tan, Brazilian butt lifts, cheek fillers, lip fillers, hair weaves) and calling it “internet slang” used when they are online but not in person. The slang is not stigmatized if used by white people.

White People Calling Themselves N Word

White Americans also insisted on calling themselves the N word and fought black people and other white people with the argument that, “black people call other black people the N word so why can’t white people call other white people and black people the N word?” — can’t really argue with logic like that. The white adjacent people (minorities who for some reason must do everything racist white Americans do in order to seem relevant or cool in white racist eyes)

The Groyper were the first white nationalist group to embrace rap in their Rumble casts, and Kanye West travelled with their leader Nick Fuentes. Currently we see Fuentes positioning himself to take Charlie Kirk’s position as the leader of the MAGA white supremacist flanks.

Groyper leader Nick Fuentes rally at Insurrection he helped organize.

President Trump with Kanye “Ye” West self-proclaimed black Nazi rapper in Oval Office with his son-in-law.

This all may very well be a deeply rooted form of code switching for white Americans who show an enormous confusion between the line of American culture, white culture, and black American culture. Or is it all the same culture?

“Nick, would you support a literacy test for more informed voting? If we did that, every election would be a Democrat landslide.”

The residents of Buckingham Palace may not be as white as is commonly assumed. According to some historians, mixed-race marriages among European royalty often went unacknowledged due to racism within both the royal family and European society at large. Indeed, Markle may not actually be the first black member of the British monarchy.

Charlotte of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who married Britain's George III in 1761, was also black, claims historian Mario Valdes. He says Charlotte was related to Margarita de Castro y Sousa, a black member of the Portuguese royal family.

However, much of the supposed evidence of Charlotte's race is based on accounts of her face: she was widely considered to have the features of a person of African descent. During her reign as Queen Consort, Charlotte

Black guys who only date white chicks

Media in all of its forms control the English speaking minds of Americans and also the British and to a lesser extent Canadians and Australians. This mind control has an indirect effect on other countries who look towards America to decipher media culture. This has led to a national identity crisis where many people are looking to be black or black adjacent or white or white adjacent or asian or asian adjacent instead of being the race they were assigned at birth: Social media has created what I have coined a transracial society where people act out a race online that is not their birth race. In a separate category: The self-hatred that black males have for themselves has been a saddening byproduct of the racism in America. Whether this is the reason for interracial marriages I would doubt that. I think that they wish to escape the confines of racism in every form. Having self-love and confidence is reinforced at home and in the community. If either of these factors is lacking this can lead to self-hate.

Why Are Minorities Cosplaying as Nazis?

I saw something disturbing on X before the election. A dark-skinned Zoomer Filipina dressed in full Nazi outfit, she had several of them. She said that she collected them and the one she was wearing was her latest. In her mentions were several actual white Nazis calling her slurs and demanding she take off the Nazi outfit. There were also Filipinos begging her to get mental treatment, other Filipinos were dismayed with her. There were no black people in her mentions. This is also kind of related to the topic above.

There were some Filipinos who seemed to be her mutuals who told her she looked great and asked if she was okay. She said yes, but that ne-groids were of course giving her a hard time. You could plainly see this was not the case, but in this common mode of cognitive dissonance that is what she had told herself. It is consistently reported that many of the white nationalist accounts are run by Indian males.

Actually many of the accounts for any culture obsessed phenomenon are later to be discovered to generate back to India. As bot farms or just in terms of manipulating the masses maybe India is displacing Russia for spreading disinformation and misinformation campaigns in the United States and Europe.

It has been observed quite often with the MAGA white supremacist set who believe that black people hate them or find offense by them. In my research I am fully confident that black people are not aware of their existence and that only white liberals and white leftists know they exist and find offense and get them banned from sites.

Black people live in their own bubble and it is rare that those two bubbles mesh on social media sites. What does happen is that the class systems of the two races are mixed but not in the MAGA white supremacist set unfortunately but in the liberal and leftist set. The class warfare that needs to happen for the Republican soldiers for lack of a better word has been crushed by propaganda.

Middle Class vs Working Class

When we analyze The Great Gatsby or The Grapes of Wrath, both Great Depression era novels, we are looking at blue collar vs white collar and also the middle class vs the upper classes. Does looking for a monarchy and a king in present times with allegiance towards a man such as Trump who seems to do the bidding of anyone including the races his soldiers despise but who pays him cash work out well for the working class?

Has it worked out for the last 10 years? That all depends, has any of his policies benefited the rich then the answer is probably yes. If you are seeking to benefit your entire race which one would assume is the point of being a nazi then the answer is no. I think this is what all of the race baiting misses entirely which I think would disappoint both F. Scott Fitzgerald and John Steinbeck.

The Great Gatsby

MAGA pushes the archetype of the dangerous criminal negroes who may be genetically intellectually inferior, as the modern National Socialist eugenicist and Effective Altruist will constantly publish documents out of Cambridge to convince you.

H-1B Visas For Skilled Workers

But their hero and god, Elon Musk also said that white Americans are not per se intellectually inferior to Indians who come on H-1B visas, but perhaps lacking in education, or maybe its a skills issue. Here it is in his own words:

Elon Musk sparked fierce online debate recently when the billionaire said on social media that the U.S. lacks enough top engineers, pointing to immigration as the solution to what he characterized as a dearth of technical expertise.

“There is a dire shortage of extremely talented and motivated engineers in America,” Musk posted on his social media platform, X, comparing tech companies to a pro sports team scouting players. “If you force the world’s best talent to play for the other side, America will LOSE.”

The claims are at the center of a divide between supporters of President-elect Donald Trump, who tend to take a hard line against immigration, and technology entrepreneurs like Musk, who along with X runs exploration company SpaceX and electric vehicle maker Tesla, both of which employ many foreign workers hired with H-1B visas.

Yet labor market data suggests that American tech workers aren’t in short supply, and critics of the H-1B program say it displaces Americans in favor of foreign-born employees hired at lower salaries. Proponents of recruiting skilled workers from abroad say tech jobs aren’t zero-sum, while hiring foreigners with specialized skills can spur innovation and ultimately create more jobs for U.S.-born workers.

Data from the National Center for Education Statistics shows that the number of bachelor’s, master’s and doctoral degrees in computer science and in engineering conferred in the U.S. reached their highest levels in the 2020-21 and 2021-22 academic years since 1970-71.

Meanwhile, tech and engineering jobs in the U.S. are expected to grow by 7% by 2033, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The share of the science and engineering workforce that is foreign-born has grown over the past three decades, according to the National Science Foundation, while STEM workers have experienced some of the highest employment rates of any occupation over the past five years.

Companies with the most H-1B workers

Tech companies are some of the biggest beneficiaries of the H-1B program, which is intended to allow highly skilled foreigners to work in the U.S. Amazon received the most H1-B visas of any company in 2024, Department of Labor data shows. Microsoft, Google and Meta were also in the top 10, while Tesla now ranks No. 16, according to the National Foundation for American Policy, a nonpartisan think tank focused on trade and immigration issues.

More H-1Bs visas were granted to software developers last year than for any other position.

“The H-1B visa is like the Swiss Army knife of visas. It’s used for a lot of different purposes,” said John Skrentny, a sociology professor at U.C. San Diego who wrote a book on why STEM graduates choose careers outside of the fields they studied. “If you hear people say that the H-1B visa is very important for attracting the best and brightest to the United States, they are correct. At the same time, the H-1B visa is used for cheap labor.”

Ah, cheap labor, the “H-1B visa is used for cheap labor.” It was ironic because many of the Democrats who are as terminally online as their Republican and Nazi counterparts laughed and taunted them. Elon Musk called you guys dumb and uneducated.

Democrats sarcastically said, “where did you think highly skilled computer science and engineering degrees would come from, Alabama?” I laughed at that myself, they picked the wrong state for that joke. My father had worked at JPL so I knew the punchline to that one.

Of course, only a certain subsection of the internet knew that is exactly where they came from and the MAGA replied, “yes, that is where they come from,” historically.

It was saddening to see that many Americans of either political faction did not know their own history and allowed people like Elon Musk tell them there are no highly skilled workers in the United States.

For Elon Musk their idol to tell Americans that historically the United States does not have a computer science, engineering or space program that is not organically American. And for them not to be able to counter him intellectually with facts and allow the Democrats to say that there is no Alabama to be proud of and we need the H-1B visa to import those brains in because it can't be grown here is an indictment of the education system.

H1 AND H2 VISAS

Speaking of cheap labor, Migrant Farm workers on H1 and H2 visas are here legally and offer farmers cheap labor. So, why are they being rounded up by armed ICE in masks and no ID's, with unmarked vehicles, who patrol the streets in hordes asking every Latino looking person show them their papers? Maybe ask Mitch McConnell who is currently trashing the Agriculture Appropriations bill and trying to gut the Farm Bill since September when it expired.

On the September list is to fund the government by September 30, when current funding expires for the US Department of Agriculture (USDA) and across the federal government. A failure to fund the government by September 30 would result in a government shutdown, significantly impacting USDA's ability to serve farmers, ranchers, and stakeholders nationwide.

Meanwhile, Congress is now nearly 7 years removed from passing a full farm bill. Earlier this year, President Trump signed the so-called One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBA, P.L. 119-21) into law, which slashed SNAP benefits by nearly $186 billion and directly reinvested more than $50 billion of that to further increase farm subsidies to the largest, wealthiest farmers, while programs that support the vast majority of farmers and rural communities were excluded from the bill entirely. The inclusion of a handful of traditional farm bill programs in budget reconciliation has severely diminished the likelihood that Congress will pass a comprehensive and fair farm bill this year, or at all this Congress. September in Washington, DC: FY26 Appropriations, Shutdown, and Farm Bill

The same white Americans (and Latinos for Trump, my favorites) who put Trump into office seem oblivious to the fact that Trump has veered away from America First to embrace many Arab nations and welcome Socialist countries. He has taken $40 million from American farmers and given that money to Socialist Venezuela. His best friends are communist North Korea and Russia leaders.

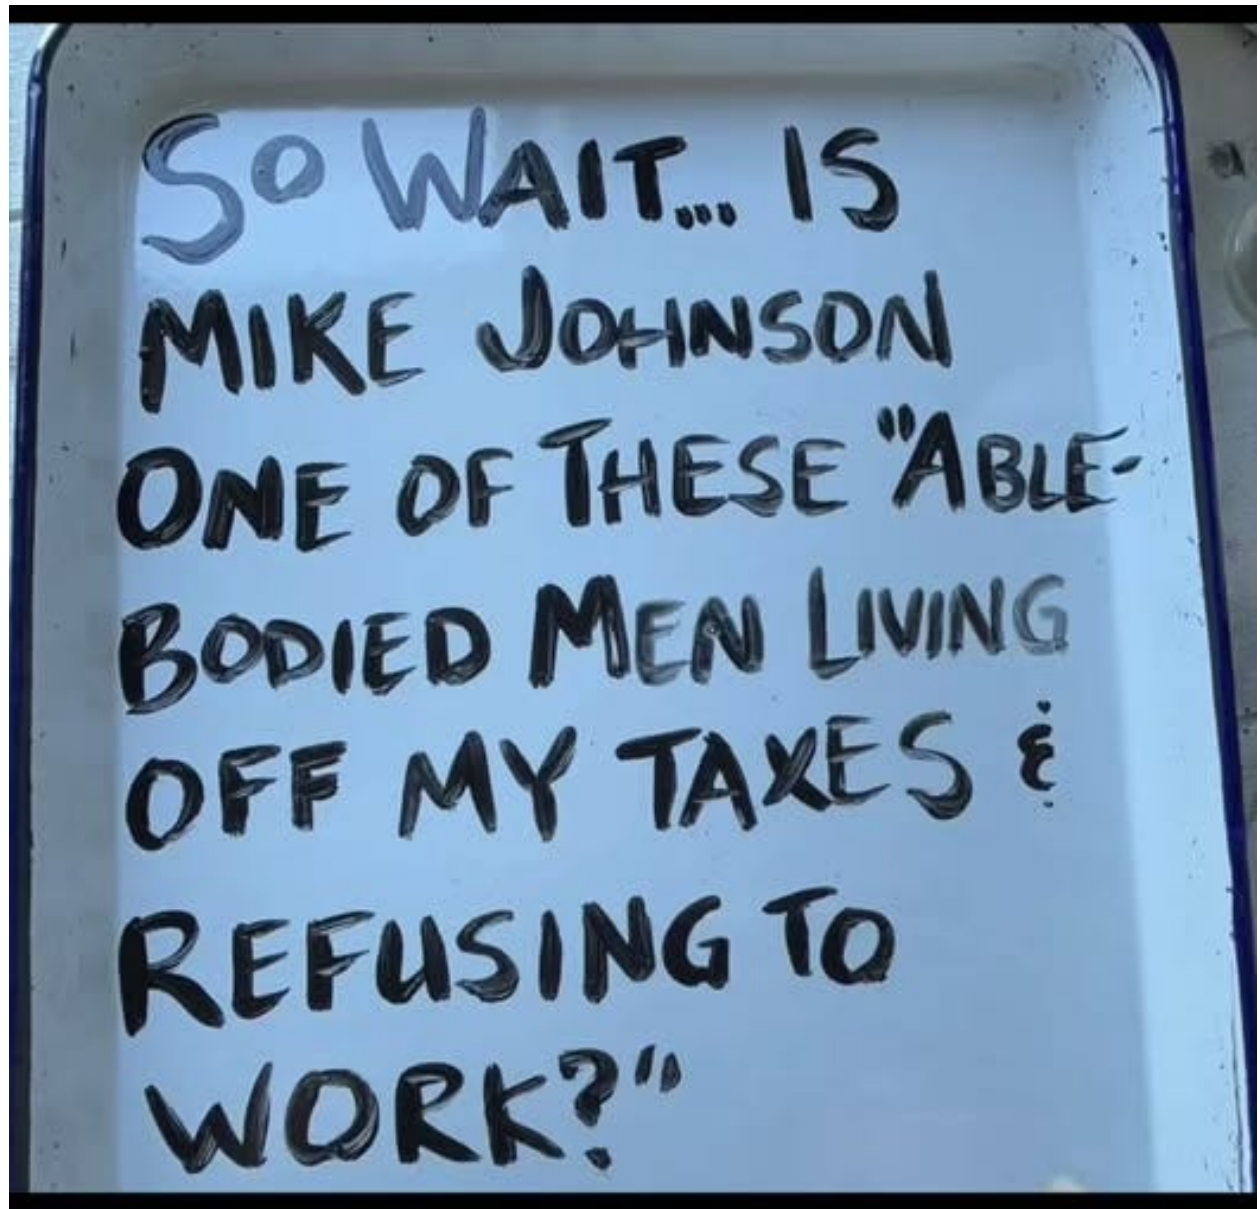

His policies are extrajudicial, unconstitutional, treasonous, anti-family, anti-working class, anti-middle class, anti-American, anti-veteran, pro-billionaire and anything but America First. Nothing like this has ever been seen before in American history.

For the first time in the constitutional republic has the government bought shares in a publicly owned company (Intel) this of course we all know is called Communism. But his rabid supporters who against all reason refuse to learn the definition of the words (Socialist, Democratic Socialist, Communism, Maoism, and Stalinism) did not recognize what happened with Intel as communism.

Mike Johnson is A Welfare Queen

The government has been shutdown and Congress is still getting paid. Somehow a subsegment of society has been convinced to use this time to taunt the underclasses for living off of the government instead of congress who live off of the taxpayers money without working.

Why is Mike Johnson getting free socialized meals and free socialized healthcare and will receive free socialized benefits for the rest of his life once he leaves office? Yet he passes legislation that bans constituents from receiving these exact same benefits? No one on public assistance got paid during the government shutdown except him and the other members of congress.

Class struggle is a real problem. The United States was formed and separated from Great Britain for exactly these reasons. As a former tutor in high school and in college, it is important to learn the meaning of words. Not just for tests but for when an authoritarian takes over your country. If you have members of congress living off of socialism telling you that socialism is bad for you there is a problem and its not socialism.

Operation Paperclip

There is a funny but prescient line in the animated show Archer where the mother says that all of the nazis went to work at NASA and other high paying intellectual government jobs after the war. Archer's mom explains, "Just walk into NASA sometime and yell, 'Heil Hitler.' Whoop. They all jump straight up."

Archer, 2009

She is talking of course about Operation Paperclip a secret United States intelligence program in which more than 1,600 German scientists, engineers, and technicians were taken from former Nazi Germany to the US for government employment after the end of World War II in Europe, between 1945 and 1959; several were confirmed to be former members of the Nazi Party, including the SS or the SA.

Hitler (and Mussolini) said his policies were to benefit the working class and the common folk, that is to he first appealed. The same messages that are used today were his platform. Hitler told the Germans going through economic hardship that the Jews were too rich and haughty, and we all know the rest.

Sociology

Today of course, the competition is a little different. The African-American has access to major universities and can earn advanced degrees (they also could during The Great Gatsby times but at segregated schools) there is also the sports baller who marries the white wife and the rappers, and the film stars without sounding too stereotypical but generalizing statistically wealth growth since The Great Depression.

The Asians span across multiple arenas and consider themselves white adjacent. Whether they are considered white adjacent by others depends upon the geographical location and socioeconomic class of the observer.

Latinos occupy an area of bilingual stratification that Asians also carry out along with the opted into white adjacent moniker depending upon their socioeconomic class. The bilingual stratification allows Latinos to cater to entire populations who only speak Spanish.

Ironically enough it is these populations that Trump's ICE seeks to destroy, including the H1 & H2 Visa Migrant Farm workers who are here legally. What is not happening is the socioeconomic class of blacks having an affect on how they are perceived or how they are stereotyped by whites and other races of any class system. The mass appropriation of black culture could be to blame.

Black Online White In Real Life

All of the above mentioned races have appropriated black culture to such an extent that using black slurs and black slang online (not in real life) has become their internet identity. In order to appropriate black culture they would need blacks to stay in the stereotypical fashion in which they found them. The upward mobility of African-Americans does not benefit their minstrel show physical embodiment of black bodies.

This is true especially among groypers and certain subsets of MAGA which is interesting since they mostly have avowed to despise blacks and their culture.

A white “rapper”, named Jantz (full name Greg Jantz), released a song and music video with a country singer that called for public lynchings in September 2025. The song, titled “Hang ‘Em Up High at Sundown”, sparked widespread outrage. Over a banjo riff, the chorus of “Good vs Evil” from MAGA rapper Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn repeats instructions for hanging people at “sundown,” an apparent reference to “sundown towns” that violently enforce racial segregation.

MAGA rapper Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn in video for “Hang ‘Em Up High at Sundown” September 15, 2025

The song calls for “a big tall tree and a short piece of rope” to “hang ‘em up high at sundown” and “leave ‘em swinging so the folks all know you don’t mess around in our town.” A white “rapper” known for viral anthems supporting Donald Trump and Republican officials has released a music video with a country singer calling for public lynchings.

Over a banjo riff, the chorus of “Good vs Evil” from MAGA “rapper” Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn repeats instructions for hanging people at “sundown,” an apparent reference to “sundown towns” that violently enforce racial segregation.

The release of the song coincided with the discovery of a Black college student, Trey Reed, found hanging from a tree at a Mississippi university (Delta State University). Whether the death is related has yet to be determined.

What people from around the world found equally amusing and disturbing was the fact that: 1. MAGA has a white “rapper”, and 2. MAGA appropriates black culture to talk about hanging black people. It was of course tragic that this college student lost their life in what appears to obviously not to be a suicide at all.

But for the white MAGA “rapper” as he likes to call himself and the other of his kind to constantly appropriate black culture is oddly unsettling considering that they use it to attack the people they stole it from. The hand gestures and body language is not something that comes organically to them and it looks awkward and forced.

Their audience demands this and finds them cool and they are extremely popular. This theme would have to be dissected and discussed on a sociological level and also from a psychological and psychiatric standpoint that cannot be covered in this essay. It is obviously a psychiatric aberration that would need to be analyzed in a medical journal.

This has been an amusing albeit disturbing aspect of MAGA culture. They have completely appropriated black culture online including calling themselves and others the “N” word. Black people continue to ignore them, repulsed at first, but now seeing it as a white peoples issue that is not their concern. Different factions of MAGA seem to be addressing the issue. Seemingly seeking to appoint Nick Fuentes the leader of the groypers as the natural replacement of Charlie Kirk which is interesting since they were always enemies.

Liberals and leftist really have no stake in it and have rightfully removed themselves from the fray. I wish they had removed themselves 10 years ago and never engaged with MAGA. Engaging with MAGA gave them legitimacy to their audience which is something you never want to do with extremist movements. Write one article, which covers everything that needs to be said and never touch the subject again. Giving them attention is the one thing they want to stay relevant.

Farmers Lives Matter

The first order of business for MAGA was destroying USAID which lost U.S. Farmers $350 million dollars immediately. The Republicans told the sheeple that this was necessary because the Democrats were evil and used it for sex trafficking and other nefarious purposes. Unfortunately throughout history the Democrats fight for farmers and the farmers continue to vote Republican.

Sometimes I believe that no one hates working and middle class farmers more than Republicans. I fought for the 2018 U.S. Farm Bill and worked with lobbying groups (Industrial Hemp Crops) and when I say that Republicans hate working class and middle class farmers, I mean they despise them.

Even in the Farm Bill that is being worked on during the Government shut down, you can see that the Republicans have gutted every farmer with the exception of the very wealthy ones. The 2018 Farm Bill expired September 30, 2025. The extension has been working on for that time and things are not going well. The Democrats are making every concession, but the Republicans seem to be going out of their way again to run American farmers.

If you go to farmers.gov and look up information on the Farm Bill extension since it expired September 30, 2025 it says:

“Due to the Radical Left Democrat shutdown, this government website will not be updated during the funding lapse. President Trump has made it clear he wants to keep the government open and support those who feed, fuel, and clothe the American people.”

The Democrats (liberals, neoliberals, progressives, moderates) are neither radical or left nor are they responsible for the shutdown. On Friday, the Democrats went in again asking for another extension to the Farm Bill (the USDA extension is the SNAP extension —this money goes to the farmers, if SNAP gets turned on, the U.S. farmers get paid. SNAP pays the U.S. farmers through the USDA.) Republicans have also posted their same childish and derisive message on the USDA website.

I am fed up with this partisan performative politics. People have farms and we need to keep the farms running. I do not care if Republican or Democrat or Klingon let us get the country open for the sake of the farmers.

I do not care about TikTok influencers or X e-girls in blackface or whatever is happening. I understand that people use sensationalism and racism sells and being a nazi edgelord is cool and being a National Socialist even if you are a Canadian Jew is the rizz. I get it all but the problem right now is not black welfare queens the problem is farmers. We need to get things moving because some of us have farms. Some of us have families to feed and we need to get the Department of Agriculture to hold up their end of subsidies that they owe us.

So if you are any kind of influencer, the farmers of America are begging you to please help us and reach across the aisles of bipartisanship and get the country open for the farmland and ask ICE to stop attacking farms that have legal Migrant Workers here on legal H-1 and H-2 Visas. If they come to farms and want to show papers can they please look at the authentic visas that are given to the migrant farm workers so that we can continue to feed this country.

The United States Farm Bill expired on September 30, 2025 from 2018 and we need to get an extension and also get a new Farm Bill. Right now we have a very special person who is holding it up, you all may know this person

The hold up is the good gentleman of Kentucky, Mitch McConnell who helped to add the Hemp crop to the 2018 Farm Bill. He has decided that he does not want Hemp in the new Farm Bill. And the Kentucky farmers have decided that they do not want him anymore unless he stops his ridiculous antics. He looks like he was bought by big alcohol.

As Congress moves toward passage of an appropriations bill that includes funding for the USDA and FDA, a fight over whether to regulate or ban products containing cannabinoids derived from hemp is putting Kentucky's two Republican senators at loggerheads and leading hemp advocates to ask: What happened to Mitch McConnell?

Then-Senate Majority Leader, McConnell led the push to federally legalize hemp in the 2018 farm bill, but has since changed his tune. In 2025, the octogenarian solon allied himself with arch-prohibitionist Representative Andy Harris (R-MD), chair of the House Appropriations Agriculture-FDA subcommittee, to champion language that would essentially ban hemp-derived cannabinoids—delta-8 THC, delta-9 THCA, CBD, CBDA, CBC, CBG—whose growth has exploded since 2018, even as the overall hemp market first retrenched and then rebounded after a 2019 “hemp rush” glut.

The legalization of hemp in the 2018 farm bill had “an unintended consequence that has allowed for intoxicating hemp-derived synthetic products to be made and sold,” McConnell said during Senate markup of the appropriations bill. He supported the Harris language, he said, to reflect “the original intent of the 2018 farm bill.”

Largely as a result of that “unintended consequence,” hemp has since burgeoned into a \$28 billion industry employing more than 300,000 people, according to the industry group the U.S. Hemp Roundtable. At the farmgate, the number is much smaller, though still significant. According to the National Agricultural Statistics Service’s 2025 “National Hemp Report,” the value of the national industrial hemp crop was $445 million in 2024. That suggests a lot of value—and jobs—were added between the farmgate and the store shelf.

While there are a number of varieties of industrial hemp production—for seed, for fiber, for oil, and for grain—the production of floral hemp (flowers or buds) is the real cash cow, accounting for $386 million, or more than 80 percent of the farmgate value of all industrial hemp production. And the vast majority of that product goes into hemp-derived cannabinoid products.

“A hemp ban will lead to the collapse of a growing U.S. industry, taking away consumer choices, killing jobs, and punishing farmers,” the Roundtable said in an alert urging members to contact Congress to kill the hemp provision.

Facing a threat from fellow Kentucky Republican Senator Rand Paul to block the entire appropriations bill if the provision was not killed, McConnell and Senate Agriculture Appropriations Committee chair, North Dakota Senator John Hoeven, agreed earlier this fall to remove it from the Senate version of the bill. But the Harris language remains included in the House version of the bill, and McConnell has signaled that he remains determined to see the ban enacted through other legislative vehicles.

While such an action remains a threat to the industry, the main battle right now is over the agriculture appropriations bill, where the fate of hemp hangs in the balance ahead of negotiations between the House and Senate in conference committee.

McConnell has long positioned himself as a champion of Kentucky agriculture, but his switch to a prohibitionist stance on hemp products has the state's hemp farmers worried that he is going to throw them and their businesses under the bus.

It has been boom and bust for Kentucky hemp farmers since the passage of the 2018 farm bill. In 2019, more than 26,000 acres were licensed for hemp production, but by 2021, the number had declined by more than half, to 11,500 acres. Since then, the number of acres licensed for hemp production has hovered around 5,000 acres a year.

The number of acres actually planted with hemp declined in a similar fashion. In 2020, 5,000 acres were planted, but in 2021, 2022, and 2023, fewer than 2,000 acres of hemp bloomed in the Bluegrass State. Only in 2024 did the decline begin to reverse, with the area under cultivation climbing slightly to 2,700 acres. Nearly half (46 percent) of that crop was floral hemp.

That bumpy ride is attributable to three main factors: overproduction and price collapse (the value of CBD-rich hemp biomass declined by 80 percent between 2019 and 2020), lack of processing capacity to turn raw hemp into CBD oil, and regulatory confusion (the FDA never provided a clear legal framework for the sales of hemp-derived CBD products). Now, the industry faces an even more dire future if Congress bans hemp-derived cannabinoids.

In a late September letter to McConnell written by the Kentucky Hemp Association, dozens of hemp farmers warned that recriminalizing hemp derivatives would crush them. These farmers represent a hefty percentage of the state's 138 hemp farmers licensed this year.

"If Congress moves to eliminate the end markets that make our crop viable, we will suffer immediate and catastrophic consequences," the farmers wrote. "We have taken out loans, hired the necessary help, planted the crop, and contracted with processors and/or brands. Any legislative change that pulls the rug out from under this market—especially mid-season—is a direct blow to our farms, families, and rural communities."

The 58 farmers, who have contracted hemp crops this year, told McConnell that "hemp is the foundation of our diversified, sustainable farm operations that helps us weather tough commodity cycles, diversify away from tobacco and empower profit in an uncertain economy." The 2018 farm bill legalizing hemp provided them with a new crop with "real economic opportunity" for the "first time in decades."

And that opportunity comes precisely from hemp-derived consumer products—not the rope and fiber previously associated with industrial hemp production. The U.S. Hemp Roundtable general counsel, Jonathan Miller, told Marijuana Moment after the farmers' letter was released that hemp cannabinoid farming accounted for 87 percent of the hemp grown in the state. "We are very hopeful that Senator McConnell will listen to these farmers—who are relying on the language he inserted in the 2018 Farm Bill for their livelihoods," Miller added.

"There's been a huge influx of hemp beverages that's become a really exciting new market for hemp farmers to share their wares and so we've seen, all across the country," he said in a separate interview. "You go to liquor stores, or sometimes convenience stores, and purchase these hemp beverages, and this legislation out there, the McConnell legislation, or over in the House side, which was championed by Andy Harris would put that all to bed.”

Instead of recriminalizing hemp cannabinoid products, which would “empower the illicit market and destroy American farm income in the process,” the farmers called for “responsible regulation” of the crop.

“We support age restrictions along with uniform testing, labeling and packaging requirements, all of which are reflected in Kentucky’s award-winning laws and regulations. But outright prohibition is not the answer, and it will not make anyone safer,” they wrote.

“We are proud of what we grow. We are proud to be building a domestic supply chain for an American crop, which is catalyzed by the cannabinoid market. At this time we are asking you, respectfully but firmly: Do not criminalize our harvest. Protect our farms. Keep Kentucky’s hemp market legal, safe, and effective. Let us prove once again that Kentucky leadership is the answer to bad actors and unsafe products by enforcing and enriching the robust regulations that have set Kentucky apart and ahead of all others.”

What to do about hemp and its derivatives is a complex and convoluted conundrum, but right now, the question before Congress is really pretty simple: whether to prohibit or regulate. Mitch McConnell remains a key voice in this debate. Will he heed his farm sector constituents or will he side with the prohibitionists? McConnell has a legacy of protecting state agricultural interests; it would tarnish that legacy if he ended his career in Washington by destroying hemp farmers back home.

Senator Mitch McConnell was one of the few Republicans who supported agricultural issues. He helped solidify the 2018 U.S. Farm Bill and added Industrial Farming Hemp to that bill. Republicans are the majority leaders with the House, Senate, Supreme Court, and the Executive branch. The Democrats have no power over any aspect of government right now yet if the Republicans say its the Democrats fault their base believes them.

MAGA will believe them just like that movie Divergent where you give the masses the injection of brainwashing and they believe whatever you want. For a group of people who did not get the jab, MAGA got something injected in them that makes them reject the truth about government even when it is staring them right in the face and is harming them.

The Great Gatsby

Yet, as I said, farmers almost always vote Republican. Fitzgerald wrote his novels for these farmers and had hoped they would one day form their own political alliances and not bow down to the suits. To this day they bow down to the suits and now we see them worship and idolize the suits. When MAGA play dress up they are the rich in The Great Gatsby and they do not see the poor whites in the book or the movie.

They do not see their own people, working at Starbucks, building cars, as plumbers, farmers, electricians. Socials has it so they are always so busy looking at the dangerous “coloreds” that they do not see their own people. Trump has laid a sledgehammer to the Constitution and to social programs created in the 1930’s designed to benefit veterans, farmers, blue collar workers, and the descendants of the The Great Depression. Yet somehow his voter base has been convinced these programs are being abused by welfare queens and illegal Mexicans. Nothing could be further from the truth but propaganda being what it is these days, truth is not allowed into the narrative.

Is Healthcare Worth Dying For?

Will healthcare be worth fighting for? Once the French were tired of being taken advantage of by the rich they invented the guillotine. How much exactly can Americans take from the rich and corrupt government before they actually rise up and revolt? They revolted against the British and had the Tea Party at Boston for religious freedom and No Taxation without Representation. That is how the country was founded. Yet what is happening today is far worse. The Supreme Court has not had a real vote since Trump took office. They have been using a system called Shadow Dockets which can get them impeached eventually. Shadow Dockets is not a real vote it is extrajudicial.

COMMENT
LA VIOLENCE DU CAPITALISME ?

Power dynamics. Can Luigi Mangione, the alleged perpetrator of the murder of the CEO of United Healthcare, be made a hero? While he is being elevated to the status of a popular culture icon, this moment reveals the underlying dynamics at play: while the bourgeoisie has never held such sway, it has also never generated so much hatred.

Before cutting Medicare and Medicaid the regime made sure to get a scapegoat with graphic visual images across all media to make it clear what the penalty would be if you revolted against the system and became violent for losing your health insurance.

Kill a health insurance executive? The death penalty, state terrorism charges, first degree murder. You will have no food, no shelter, no health care and you will like it. $200 million for a new ballroom, gold plated awnings in the White House, another $100 million for a new jet. Cancer research? Zero dollars. Health care? Zero dollars. Housing? Zero dollars. Infrastructure? Zero dollars. Veterans? Zero dollars. Children's Daycare? Zero dollars. Israel? Subsidized healthcare, subsidized daycare, subsidized education in the United States and Israel, subsidized housing. Total dollars sent to Israel this year alone? $987 million dollars. Total money spent on United States citizens this year? Less than zero dollars. Venezuela? $40 million dollars. Amount of money just cut from Medicare and Medicaid healthcare for seniors, children, disabled, and single moms, veterans? In 2019 it was Medicare $845 billion and Medicaid $241 billion. They can insist that the money goes to illegal aliens but it does not it goes to exactly the people above listed: Seniors, children, disabled, single moms, and veterans. The tax cuts that millionaires and billionaires receive exceeds the $845 billion mark. This is what class warfare looks like. I can think of no better example.

USDA In Disarray

Next in line, the regime went to California and deliberately destroyed millions of crops there which make up almost 3% of the GDP of the United States. More farm land destroyed, and of course more legal Migrant Farm Workers hauled off illegally by ICE. Wow, somebody does not like farmers, I wonder why and what the heck does any of this have to do with The Great Gatsby?

Followed by SNAP. Not the SNAP as TikTok white ladies in black face and deep fake AI clips will tell you is for obese black ladies with 8 kids and 12 babies daddies buying lobster. But the SNAP which is ran by the United States Department of Agriculture and has always been a subsidy program for U.S. farmers and earns them upwards to $80 million a year.

Next to go was The Free Lunch Program which surprise! Also a USDA subsidy program for U.S. farmers and earns them close to $40 million a year. And of course USDA WIC (Women Infant Children) a U.S. farmers subsidy program which earns U.S. farmers close to $15 million per year. The U.S. Department of Agriculture created these program to feed among others, rural Appalachians, and those hit hard by the Great Depression and to provide guaranteed income to U.S. Farmers. At the time of the inception of these programs there were no black welfare moms, or Mexican illegal immigrants collecting lobster money. There has been a work requirement since 1964 and you have always had to be a citizen.

1939 – The First Food Stamp Program

The idea for the first Food Stamp Program (FSP) is credited to various people, most notably Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace and the program's first Administrator Milo Perkins. The program operated by permitting people on relief to buy orange stamps equal to their normal food expenditures. For every $1 worth of orange stamps purchased, 50 cents worth of blue stamps were received. Orange stamps could be used to buy any food. Blue stamps could only be used to buy food determined by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be surplus.

The first recipient was Mabel McFiggin of Rochester, New York on May 16, 1939. The first retailer to redeem the stamps was Joseph Mutolo, and the first retailer caught violating the program was Nick Salzano in October 1939. Over the course of nearly 4 years, the first FSP reached approximately 20 million people at one time or another in nearly half of the counties in the United States, peak participation was 4 million, at a total cost of $262 million. The program ended in the spring of 1943 "since the conditions that brought the program into being--unmarketable food surpluses and widespread unemployment--no longer existed."

"We got a picture of a gorge, with farm surpluses on one cliff and under-nourished city folks with outstretched hands on the other. We set out to find a practical way to build a bridge across that chasm."

Milo Perkins

1964 – Food Stamp Act

On Jan. 31, 1964, President Johnson requested Congress to pass legislation making the FSP permanent. Secretary Orville Freeman had submitted proposed legislation to establish a permanent FSP on April 17, 1963. The bill that was eventually passed by Congress was introduced by Congresswoman Sullivan.

Among the official purposes of the Food Stamp Act of 1964 (PL 88-525) were strengthening the agricultural economy and providing improved levels of nutrition among low-income households; however, the practical purpose was to bring the pilot FSP under Congressional control and to enact the regulations into law.

Mitch McConnell holds Farm Bill hostage

2018 Farm Bill compromises not only USDA SNAP and its millions of dollars in subsidies to farmers, but farm programs, food inspection, animal and plant disease protection, rural development, and protecting federal lands. The USDA has always had a safety net during a government shutdown to release funds to the farmers and the SNAP benefits. But at the time of this update, the Supreme Court had blocked the back-up funds to be released.

The story of the farmers that benefit from the USDA SNAP program I do realize would make a boring TikTok. I am sure for any MAGA readers this whole topic would make for a boring TikTok all of this is boring. We all have a shortened attention span and are unable to focus for longer periods of time. I genuinely think AI video should be illegal. The most obviously societally corroding invention maybe ever created. Just an instant tool of widespread distrust and mass psychosis. The actual truth when told calmly, with no political agenda, simply to be informative is actually quite boring for this time we live in.

These campaigns on social media are not meant to inform they are merely sensationalism and props for propaganda in very short clips. This style of clips are used to interrogate and brainwash prisoners at Guantanamo Bay and other black op sites and they work fantastically for the Socials but of course Thiel would know that. The disinformation campaign surrounding these subsidy programs for farmers has very clear sources such as Bannon's Internet Research Agency and The Heritage Foundation which have been name checked ad nauseam for the last decade yet the MAGA masses refuse to make the connection.

Some are saying the reason why the farmers land and water is needed is the data centers. I wish it were a conspiracy theory but unfortunately bankrupting farmers has been such a clear and deliberate act of this regime one can think of no other reason why this government would keep undermining farmers in such a systematic manner.

BREAKING: OpenAI is requesting US government support to help guarantee financing for the massive investments in AI chips and data centers it needs for expansion, per Bloomberg.

Now we see that instead of the U.S. Farmers being subsidized the data centers need to be subsidized. I guess it wasn't a conspiracy theory after all. Socialism and government handouts are okay if it is OpenAI and Tesla but not for actual poor people, seniors, children, the disabled, veterans, or rural farmers.

For all the tech people complaining about Mamdani I would like to point out that a Federal Backstop for unfettered risk capital deployment into data centers for the benefit of OpenAI shareholders is actually a much worse form of socialism than free buses. OpenAI has been asking for a bailout for quite some time and it is a dangerous precedent.

Most have been so busy crying over the free buses and commenting on how ugly Mamdani's wife is that they are missing the OpenAI corruption and how it correlates to ENRON and the 2008 Great Depression that left everyone (blacks and whites equally) homeless, jobless with only the banks bailed out.

Below is Peter Thiel's email to Zuckerberg and Andreessen in January 2020 predicting socialism.

Tl;dr too much student debt and lack of affordable housing keeps young people with negative capital for too long. And without a stake in the capitalist system, they will turn against it. the rich get richer. the poor get poorer. eventually the poor vote for socialism. what don't we understand about this?

The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck centers on the Joad family, hardworking farmers who have lost everything in the Oklahoma Dust Bowl in the 1930s. Seeking better opportunities, they decide to make the arduous trek to California. Their situation, however, fails to improve as the Joads struggle to find work. At one point, Tom Joad (played by Henry Fonda), the eldest son and an ex-convict, attends a meeting about unions. The event is raided, and Tom accidentally kills a guard while trying unsuccessfully to protect his friend Casy. Wanted by the authorities, Tom is forced to leave the family to escape arrest.

Pocket Watch The Poor

They pocket watch the poor and cart count a mother of three on SNAP. The Pentagon fails another audit and the same people do not care. Here is another TikTok by a groyper, a nazi or Republican influencer in blackface showing us what a SNAP has in their cart. The country lets the wealthy write off private jets. I genuinely don't care. The Pentagon has failed 7 audits.

The Pentagon “lost” over a trillion dollars in 2025 but you’re pocket watching SNAP recipients which accounts to .04% of possible misuse? There use to be a time when Republicans would pocket watch the Pentagon, where are these Republicans? Can someone bring these Republicans back, we need them.

These new Republicans and Libertarians who blindly trust the government simply because they are on the red team and wear a MAGA hat are creepy and weird. Is this the acceleration plot to destroy the entire country so that it is inhabitable? Well, good job it is all working according to plan.

The Pentagon cannot account for $35 Trillion. Nor can it account for 63% of its 4 Trillion in assets. Apparently the Pentagon is too big to fail Pentagon Cannot Account for \$35 Trillion. But lets focus on the SNAP recipients, not the veterans and the disabled, just you know those other ones. $35 Trillion would buy tons of lobster. I guess dressing up in black face with a black accent would not get as much attention and earn any revenue on X or TikTok if you talk about the Pentagon.

There was a time when the Republicans would talk about the corruption of these agencies. In fact I remember a call to “drain the swamp” but that was merely a polarization weapon and a Us vs Them manipulation tool that led to the “Democrats bad Republicans good, liberals want us all dead” dichotomy that resulted in a brain dead boring anti philosophy and a total lack of free will.

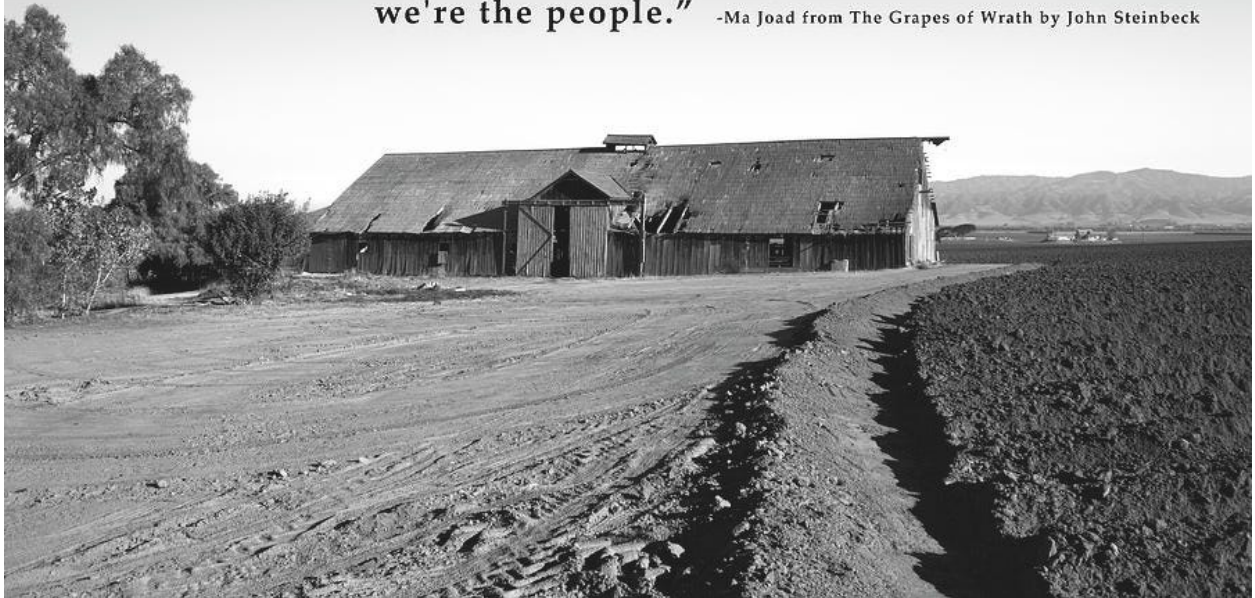

Independent thinking in the Republican party has died and that is so dangerous. MAGA and all of it's members will believe anything they are told up to their own detriment and harm. The working class of the new Republican party are willing to die for the rich members. Libertarians are taking advantage of the disarray and using the confusion to make inroads. The middle class will not be able to buy homes or get jobs but I guess it will all be worth it as long as everyone can use the “N” word on the internets.

Farm land was once vast and plentiful in the United States it was an honest living. With all of the rural hospitals closed (data centers do not need hospitals) and the government shut down dragging on we have very little numbers on the suicide rate of the farmers. The last anyone had heard it was skyrocketing. Hard to confirm exact numbers since the Republicans dismantled all of the government sites that report statistics.

Now let me be clear when I say “farmer” - I do not mean a backwater hayseed wearing dungarees, that is not what farming is any more. It is a huge investment and requires high tech equipment. Labor (Migrant Farm workers here legally on H-1 and H-2 visas) because no one uses illegal farm workers its not worth the risk. The migrant farm program is legal and works just fine. If white laborers wanted to do back breaking work they would have stayed sharecroppers but they matriculated out of that much to their happiness and honest labor after the Great Depression.

"Rich fellas come up an' they die, an' their kids ain't no good an' they die out. But we keep a'comin'. We're the people that live. They can't wipe us out; they can't lick us. We'll go on forever, Pa, 'cause we're the people." -Ma Joad from The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck

The Grapes Of Wrath by John Steinbeck 1939

The modern system of large-scale migrant farm work has its roots in the 1942 Bracero Program, which brought millions of Mexican laborers to the United States for temporary agricultural work during World War II.

However, migrant farm labor has a much longer history in the U.S., with enslaved Africans being the first major source of agricultural labor. After the Civil War, sharecropping and tenant farming systems continued to rely on a largely impoverished and often migrant agricultural workforce.

Key historical developments

- 1600s:

The foundation of large-scale U.S. agriculture was built on the forced labor of enslaved Africans, beginning in Virginia in 1619.

- Post-Civil War:

Systems like sharecropping and tenant farming continued to rely on a large, often impoverished agricultural workforce, many of whom were mobile and had to find work where they could.

- 1942:

The U.S. and Mexican governments established the Bracero Program to address a WWII labor shortage, formalizing a system of temporary labor contracts for Mexican workers.

- 1943:

The U.S. government also began recruiting West Indian workers from the Caribbean for agricultural work through programs like the War Manpower Commission.

- 1964:

The Bracero Program ended, but employers continued to rely on a migrant workforce, often turning to the H-2 program (now H-2A). This shift, combined with earlier programs, helped solidify the modern migrant farm worker system.

Migrant farm workers are individuals who travel for temporary or seasonal work in agriculture, often following harvests from farm to farm, to support the food supply. They perform tasks from planting and harvesting to packing and are vital to the agricultural industry. Many are foreign-born workers who come on temporary visas through programs like the H-2A visa program, while others are domestic workers who travel within the U.S. for seasonal jobs. They are protected by labor laws such as the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (MSPA), which outlines standards for wages, housing, transportation, and required disclosures.

In the United States, we enjoy abundant, affordable produce year-round. Yet, few realize where that food comes from and who grows it. Each year, around 2.5 million farmworkers and their families labor in fields and factories across the country to bring us fresh fruits, vegetables and other agricultural products that become our food.

Migrant and Seasonal Farm Workers

F*ck Those Farms! Open AI Needs Fresh Drinking Water.

Won't somebody please think of the Data Centers?

OpenAI wanting a federal backstop (government bailout) when the bubble bursts is a huge deal. The farmers need a bailout since Trump took all of their money and even gave $40 million of it to failed Socialist Venezuela (not the same Socialism as Democratic Socialist Mamdani.)

OpenAI are true Silicon Valley welfare queens who started out as a nonprofit offering their services to the government free of charge out of the goodness of their heart; currently they're transitioning to a for profit but with no IPO on the horizon until they can secure some SNAP money.

Or as WSJ put it “OpenAI Would Like To Privatize Profits And Socialize Losses” — Communist profits and Socialist losses! Will you look at that.

Sometimes we accuse our enemies of that very thing of which we ourselves are guilty of.

Gaslighting

The same terminally online people posting vivid imagery of 9/11, and asking, “how the hell does the city that experienced the biggest Islamic terrorist attack in history vote for a Muslim mayor?” will shriek at you not to blame all white men for slavery after posting tons of edgy memes with slurs from their incel fort.

If they have not figured out who is responsible for the 9/11 attack at this point it is probably pointless to try and explain it now. They’ll also assure you black people are responsible for all crime once again the slavery analogy escapes them.

This is a war we are never going to win with these people. They need their racism and hatred and wear it as a badge of honor. They live among us and we have to coexist with them. This essay is covering general topics and is not comprehensive in nature. The sociological and psychiatric aspects would require a deeper dive than my expertise can cover.

But do not let them gaslight you. Looking at statistics, America used to be affordable. Your parents or grandparents could work one job. Not a “side hustle.” Not freelancing at midnight. Not delivering food to people who make more than you. Just one job. And with that one job, they could: Buy a home, support a family, save money, take a vacation once in a while, retire without panic.

If you worked more than 40 hours, people thought something was wrong. Now if you work only 40 hours, people think something is wrong with you.

Housing used to cost 2x your annual income. Now it is 8x to 12x, depending on your city.

And that is if you can even find a home that has not been swallowed by private equity. You could support a family on a single income. Today two incomes barely keep the lights on. A hospital visit did not bankrupt you. Food was not a luxury purchase.

You did not need a financing plan for dental work. Back then, overtime meant you were saving for a boat or a vacation. Now overtime means you are trying not to fall behind. The story we are told is that “people today just don’t want to work.” No. People today are working harder than ever. They are juggling multiple jobs.

They are answering emails at night. They are hustling on weekends. They are selling their time, their energy, their peace. And what do they get in return? Rent that goes up faster than wages. Groceries priced like luxury goods. Healthcare that feels like a hostage negotiation. Retirement that looks more like a fantasy than a plan. The American Dream did not die.

It was priced out, extracted, and sold off to the highest bidder. We are living in the wealthiest country in human history. Yet millions cannot afford a home, a family, or a future. That is not progress. That is failure. Systemic, deliberate failure.

The Resistance

I have lived with friends in France, Germany, Switzerland, England, and Austria. I visited Turkey and Greece. I went to school in Switzerland for two semesters. I have been around real Nazi’s and they are all 100% pure aryans without exceptions. To see British, Americans and Canadians larping online as National Socialists the last decade is almost surreal for me. Seeing Filipinos, Latinos, Jewish people, and Middle Eastern people, even Kanye West calling himself a black Nazi is a real culture shock.

Having lived among actual European Nazis knowing that they would call all of these people subhuman and demand their deaths. I try to appeal to the reasoning of the Americans among these groups and those who are in the MAGA movement to try and focus on the class warfare that we have been fighting for the last 10 years.

I could have titled this The Resistance and talked about how the machines want us all dead, but that would not have caught anyones eye or been as fun. I saw The Great Gatsby and the clothes of the wife of Mamdani that were just like mine in the news and that caught my eye.

Parasite vs Get Out

In a sense Fitzgerald's work is similar to one of my favorite films Parasite (2019) which tackled the same theme brilliantly. I had actually given up on cinema when this film came out. The 2017 dark comedy film Get Out where the racism of the Democrats is exposed this time in a masterpiece that has them wanting to be better at being black people than actual black people which is a problem that Republicans online seem to face today. That being the last noteworthy cinematic achievement which garnered any attention from me. No other film has interested me since Parasite, hopefully something will be released worth watching again.

Despite winning Golden Globe award for Best Motion Picture—Foreign Language, Palmed'Or at Cannes, Oscars for Best Picture, Best Director, Best Original Screenplay, and Best International Feature Film, many Americans had a hard time grappling with why Parasite was an important film. They understood Get Out (race) but they could not understand Parasite (class) and it was not the language barrier. Americans have a hard time understanding class warfare because they have been taught that with the American Dream they can transcend class and move up the social ladder.

The themes of class conflict, social inequality, and wealth disparity are difficult to teach in the United States especially since a regime has been installed that labels such concepts as “woke” at a time when late-stage capitalism has created high rates of unemployment, the crisis of home affordability, and the increasing socioeconomic gap between the wealthy and the poor.

The lack of working-class solidarity in the South Korean film between the two poor families only becomes evident at the end of the film when the rich man expresses his disgust at the smell of the poor family. It is only then that the main character becomes aware of his class identity.

Jay Gatsby and Class Warfare

Fitzgerald felt that the white class system in The Great Gatsby was so strong that no one dared cross that invisible line and every white man knew their place. The black jazz musicians could not eat in a white restaurant or drink in a water fountain but they would travel around the world and marry European women and settle in Paris. This was not an option for the white servers in the club who brought drinks to the upper class patrons. This may explain the rivalry in the car with the jazz musicians and the white chauffeur.

These men were stuck in their class, even though they were white and had the privilege to call the jazz musicians the “N” word, those same black musicians would be on a plane to Italy and Spain the next day and enjoy a freedom and standard of living that was completely inaccessible to the lower and even middle class white men and women of the 1920’s and 1930’s.

Later in life, Fitzgerald complained that unlike Europeans who understood his books, American white people always missed the themes in his book and only focused on the perceived white glamor of The Great Gatsby. The author was often surprised that American white people no matter their socioeconomic class always identified with the billionaires, it puzzled him up to his death.

Classism is central to The Great Gatsby, depicting a rigid social hierarchy that divides characters into old money, new money, and working class. The novel illustrates how classism prevents social mobility, as seen in Gatsby's failure to win Daisy due to his "new money" status despite his wealth. Old money characters like the Buchanans are entitled and careless, while the working class, like the Wilsons, struggle in a life of poverty and are treated with contempt by the upper class.

The Great Gatsby

The novel uses settings like East Egg (old money), West Egg (new money), and the Valley of Ashes (working class) to physically represent this division. Ultimately, the novel suggests that class background, not wealth, determines one's social standing, and that the wealthy elite's carelessness and privilege lead to tragedy for those below them.

Understanding The Great Gatsby and why New York's millionaire owner of Mar-a-Lago used that as the theme for their party while the uninvited lower classes spent their time online seething over a Democratic Socialist in New York running for mayor and his art school wife who want to make buses free and have rent control instead of being angry at the millionaire who spent the last 10 years telling them that he was “one of them” just a regular guy like them. Which is the farthest thing from the truth, as the author F. Scott Fitzgerald went out of his way to try and expound on in his books.

Characters and Class

- Old Money (East Egg): Tom and Daisy Buchanan represent the established elite who have inherited their wealth and status. They are careless, entitled, and feel superior to others, using their money to retreat from the consequences of their actions.
- New Money (West Egg): Jay Gatsby is the “nouveau riche,” having acquired his fortune through questionable means. Despite his immense wealth, he is never fully accepted by the old money elite, who view him with scorn and suspicion.

- Working Class: The Wilsons, George and Myrtle, represent the lower class struggling to survive. Myrtle attempts to escape her class through an affair with Tom, but is ultimately trapped and destroyed by the class system.

Classism in Action

- Spatial Divide: The contrasting settings of East Egg, West Egg, and the Valley of Ashes physically manifest the class divisions and the power dynamics between them.

- The American Dream: Gatsby's pursuit of wealth to win Daisy illustrates a corrupted American Dream. Fitzgerald suggests that social climbing through wealth alone is a foolish and dangerous pursuit because it cannot erase one's past or buy acceptance into the elite.

- Destructive Privilege: The old money elite's sense of superiority and entitlement is destructive. Tom's disdain for Wilson, for example, is fueled by his class-based arrogance. When the Wilsons are destroyed, Tom and Daisy retreat behind their money, leaving others to "clean up the mess".

- Social Exclusion: Gatsby's parties are filled with people who don't even know him, and who abandon him completely after his death. This shows that for the old money elite, Gatsby was just a spectacle, and not a person worthy of genuine connection.

The pool is in Gatsby's backyard and he was laying out on a raft when Wilson shot him. Nick, the chauffeur, butler, and gardener all found Gatsby dead in the pool. The irony was not unnoticed that this was the first time he had decided to use the pool since he bought the house. His servants found him dead. Not family or friends. He did not have any left. Not the married Daisy he was infatuated with. It was her husband who got Gatsby killed to protect his wife, Daisy. None of the party guests really knew who he was. They came for the free food and alcohol and extravagant parties at his wealthy mansion.

Jay Gatsby

Jay Gatsby is shot and killed by George Wilson while relaxing in his swimming pool and waiting for Daisy Buchanan in F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel *The Great Gatsby. Wilson, wrongly believing Gatsby was responsible for killing his wife Myrtle in a car accident. Wilson kills himself after shooting Gatsby. The car was actually driven by wealthy socialite, Daisy who is Tom Buchanan's wife and the man who points George to Gatsby. Gatsby's body is later found floating face down in the water by Nick Carraway, the narrator.

The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald 1925

If F. Scott Fitzgerald were alive today, his working class characters would ride the free buses and welcome rent control. They would not rely on the intellectual analysis of the media class regurgitating hit pieces written by AI conflating Communism, Maoism, and Socialism to prevent them from enjoying the benefits of a social system built to help those who lived from paycheck to paycheck. The Great Gatsby was written in 1925.

The stock market crash was in 1929, the Great Depression was 1929-1933. American white people in The Great Gatsby all knew they would not die as billionaires despite having white skin. Maybe they would be racist in the 1920's and 1930's and it would be expected but they would not be delusional enough to believe that they had more in common with billionaires than working class people of another race just because the billionaires who ran the world were white.

Many verbal battles that night during the Mar-a-Lago Gatsby soiree. Political pundits curious if MAGA if felt they would have been among the rich elite during the 1920-1930's. The way to answer that question is really easy. It was not that long ago, are you among the rich elite now? Your family would not have lost its fortune in that short amount of time.

In Hawaii, as Native Hawaiians we are required to know our genealogy for up to four generations to make sure we are not marrying first or second cousins. Since MAGA take such pride in being white they would know their genealogy up to the 1930's and if they would have been a rich elite. Either way there has to be people in their families or extended families who depend upon medicare or other government benefits or at the very least farmers in their family who need The Farm Bill to be passed out of congress with the Hemp portion intact.

Like clockwork MAGA took to the internet to defend the robber barons and their right to celebrate The Great Gatsby with United States tax dollars in opulent fashion. It showed a pattern of cognitive dissonance that reflects a form of Stockholm syndrome and brainwashing that I attribute to constant scrolling of social media which implants images directly into the brains of these people. There can be no other explanation.

Tax dollars for The Great Gatsby themed soirees at an exclusive country club that they could never earn membership at warms MAGA's hearts. Tax dollars for free buses and rent control that working class MAGA would benefit from is equivalent to a Maoist death camp.

That is the difference between the characters in The Great Gatsby and the MAGA we see today who for some bizarre reason have spent the last decade of political unrest identifying with millionaires and billionaires just because they too are white.

Jay Gatsby in The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald (1925)

I doubt Fitzgerald would be surprised how easy it is to manipulate an entire population by always using race wars to hide class wars in plain sight.

Antifascist Anarcho-Syndicalism Has Entered the Chat

Political commentary from an extreme leftist, antifascist, anarcho-syndicalist. Portland, Berkeley, Los Angeles, NYC hold the line.

Antifascist anarcho-syndicalism is a political ideology that combines anarcho-syndicalism with anti-fascism, using worker-led trade unions as the vehicle for both direct action against fascism and the creation of a stateless, classless society.

It believes that fascist states are an extension of capitalism and the state and rejects all hierarchical authority, instead favoring worker self-management and direct action to achieve social revolution. Historical examples include Spanish anarchists who fought against Franco's fascist regime during the Spanish Civil War.

Core principles

- Anarcho-syndicalism: A revolutionary, anarchist form of trade unionism that seeks to replace capitalism and the state with a society based on workers' self-management.
- Anti-fascism: The active and direct opposition to fascism, viewed as an oppressive, late-stage form of capitalism and the state.
- Solidarity: The principle of collective action and mutual aid among workers and oppressed groups to counter power imbalances.
- Direct action: The use of methods like strikes, boycotts, and sabotage to achieve goals, rather than relying on political parties or parliamentary systems.
- Worker self-management: The belief that workers should control their own workplaces and that society should be run by decentralized, federated councils of delegates.

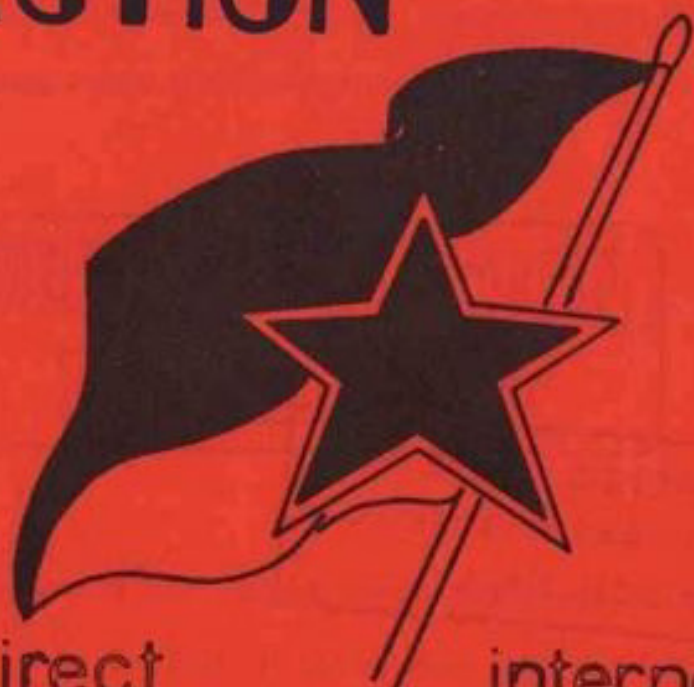

Historical context

- Spanish Civil War: Anarcho-syndicalist unions like the Spanish CNT played a significant role in fighting against Francisco Franco's fascist forces alongside other anti-fascist groups.
- Weimar Germany: Anarcho-syndicalists recognized early on that the rising fascism was tied to an authoritarian, late-stage capitalism and worked to oppose it.

The Great Gatsby and Mamdani's Wife

- A Summary of American Politics from 2015-2025

The news cycle has been spiraling overwhelmingly this year and going to college full-time while also working leaves little time for doom scrolling.

In the last days something caught my eye. I saw a book in the news that I wrote about to symbolize class warfare in high school and college. I also noticed for the first time a politician's wife who shares my fashion sense. The book is The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald and the wife is of the DSA New York mayoral candidate Zohran Kwame Mamdani.

I saw someone comment that: "42 million Americans lost food assistance today, but the Lobster Thermidor and champagne was flowing at Mar-a-Lago" tonight.

The Great Gatsby

Another person wrote that: "Trumpism is a DEI program for criminals and morons, and those taken in by the new widespread nostalgia for 1920-1930's robber barons are about to learn only 0.001% of the population enjoyed the benefits" therein.

The Great Gatsby

Interesting sentiments as those are major themes of The Great Gatsby and I guess one could say we now face a similar financial climate as the era that led to The Great Depression.

One of the final steps of the 1929 city paving program was cleared up last night at the city council meeting when an ordinance was passed to second reading providing for the issuance and sale of bonds to provide funds for improvement unit 83.

This was one of the largest improvement projects ever undertaken by the city and includes the macadamizing of streets in Mills first and second additions, and Barrow addition. Work on this unit is now going forward in order to have as much of it completed as possible before winter weather starts.

Largest Break In History Recorded

All Wealth of Banks Unable To Check Drop. Sales Near 10 Billion Mark

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (U P)—All the wealth of New York banks was unable to check another tremendous wave of liquidation on the stock exchange.

Values were pared down $10,000,000,000 or more in the worst break in history.

Breaks Largest

The Dow-Jones industrial average broke 28.33 points and the railroad average 19.91 points, the largest break in history. Sales totaled 2,212,800 shares, the second largest day in history in point of volume.

Organized bear raids were directed against the "blue chips" and these high class stocks broke from 10 to 50 points in pell-mell unloading.

Check Attempts Fail
From the opening until the closing gong stopped the trading, the prices were below Saturday's last prices. For a brief interval around 1:30 support developed, but it was short lived. Bankers could not take all the stock offered. They abandoned the attempts, permitting prices to seek their own levels, which were only downward. The majority closed on the lows of the day.

I had not paid much attention to Mamdani or his campaign until I saw his wife. I do not live in NYC and I have always registered Green. I have no qualms with the DSA other than I would have preferred more action and less talk considering the media buzz that they generated with Bernie Sanders who I supported.

Performative politics can be effective but without actual reform and action it's useless. I suppose they gave it their best shot but all in all it was pretty disappointing considering that they had the opportunity to codify Roe vs Wade, erase College Loan Debt, establish Universal Basic Income, Universal Healthcare. DSA needed to keep campaign promises of a Democratic Socialist not get into useless verbal battles with MAGA. I lost interest in the DSA once I saw AOC continue to return fire with MAGA. Politically you want certain people to disagree even despise your politics, otherwise what is the point.

When I saw AOC responding to MAGA hatred I was disheartened. Who cares what they think, and why would you respond to someone vested in misunderstanding you? It was the arguing with a pig analogy; the pig loves it and you both get dirty. She was allowing herself to get dragged down to their level. It made no sense to me and eventually came off as a prop to keep her from actually keeping the campaign promises she ran on as a DSA candidate. I focused instead on Extinction Rebellion which was a growing movement I saw a future for. I had worked at Greenpeace International in Los Angeles and Greenpeace USA in San Francisco and continued to support their direct action efforts.

The actual Left have begged the Right to learn what all of those words mean. The Left have asked Democrats to correct the Right but they refused and use the ignorance to their advantage. Every Democratic Socialist elected including Mamdani (especially Mamdani) will tell you that no one hates the Left more than moderate Liberal Democrats.

It would surprise Republican (voters) not the leadership who are very aware. If MAGA were told that Democrats hate leftists more than they hate Republicans it would surprise them. Moderate liberals or progressives, or the self-titled neoliberals have more in common with the Right than they do the Left. When Antifa was at its peak, it was the Democrats who spent all of its time condemning Antifa and asking them to please not hurt the poor nazis. Andy Ngo gave more power to the Democratic Party than probably any other singular entity outside of the Republicans who use them as controlled opposition. The Democrats hate Antifa and they hate pro-Palestinian movements.

Working Class: Help Us Please

Democrats: No ❤️ 🏳️‍🌈 #blm

What if we told you it was the same party?

The Democrats hate socialism and any form of communism. Liberals do not support the DSA they consider them a threat and try to disenfranchise them every chance they get.

Not understanding how the DNC works or how the Electoral College works and that despite gerrymandering the DSA still hold on to its electorates is not something the Left can communicate to the Right who are vested in not hearing. This was a huge fumble on the Right's part but since they do not look at news outside of their political bubble and the Left always does oppo research it was unavoidable.

Under the cloak of being called Leftist (who they hate) the Democrats were able to do much damage. Obama was the quintessential progressive liberal; drone bombed Yemen, prosecuted more whistleblowers than any other president in history, did zero for the black community, said he came for the middle class (dog whistle for white people) wore suits smiled. The Left asked him to codify Roe vs Wade, and add another Supreme Court Justice. They also asked Biden at which time the DNC blamed the Left for not having enough justices after Trump won.

It is one sick humiliation ritual for the Democrats. Hilary stole Bernie's delegates votes at the DNC. Kettled the DSA delegates and threatened to have them arrested. She did not win the nomination legally, Bernie won. She was not the democratic candidate legally. The DNC later took his fundraising list and gave it to Hilary. The smear campaign on Green Party candidate Jill Stein was probably the DNC's biggest victory. Green Party has been their biggest rivalry and accused of stealing their votes and impeding democracy.

If the Democrats do not win any Independent party who stands in their way is a threat to be eliminated. They would rather side with the Right and Republicans than let a Leftist enemy succeed. The DNC use the Right to achieve this agenda and most Republican voters do not realize they are being used because they focus on race not class warfare.

DNC Are Mafia

This DNC delegate stealing is what Republicans accused Kamala Harris of but the DNC did actually ask the DSA delegates this election who said she could go f*ck herself but at least they asked. The DNC also ignored the Independents on the ballot which included a Green Party candidate as usual. Every candidate has to earn delegates to get on the ballot and every election the DNC rides roughshod and starts attacking third parties claiming only the DNC win or democracy will die.

On the sidelines we have the Right calling these liberals who are incompetent psychos the Left, Communist, Socialist, and radicals when the DNC are secretly impaling the actual leaders of those parties so that they stay hidden. It is basically a nightmare that we have managed to sidestep and overcome.

Biden was the closest president to a Trump like figure that the Democrats have ever had and I do not think that Republicans really understand that. Whatever qualities you think that Trump has that is how the DNC saw Biden. The Biden regime went after the Left with a vengeance and ultimately this is why Kamala could garner no support from Independents and why the DSA has made a sweep on the ballots and hopefully win the elections with Mamdani. Not knowing what the other side is up to gives Republicans time to focus on their own issues but on the other side of the aisle we know what Republicans are up to and we have the lived experience of Democrats.

Democrats forced Bernie to publicly endorse Biden. He refused the first time and the DNC threatened him a second time to bring his base into line and endorse Biden. Even after being told that Bernie endorsing Biden did not mean the DSA was endorsing Biden or eventually endorsing Kamala.

Whenever the propaganda machine talk about Democrats they call them “The Left” and the Democrats laugh under their breath. Every polarizing issue in the last 10 years has been about the Left vs the Right. And the radical liberal agenda which refers to the Democrats who may be to the left of Republicans but they are not the Left.

The Left are the people you see protesting and heckling Kamala Harris and Biden. Republicans probably have not noticed protestors being dragged out and even condemned by Democrats. Yes the Left are Antifa, and Portland fighting ICE nude on Bikes or dressed as furries. No the Left are not No Kings, that is controlled opposition and those are Democrats. Even the compromised DSA Squad in the White House like AOC condemned the leftist pro-Palestinian protestors for making a stir at the Kamala talks. That is the Left you see who keep getting arrested wherever the Democratic leadership is speaking. But the media has control of this narrative so most of the Right are blissfully unaware of this nuance. It is ironic but slightly humorous that the DNC can use this ignorance to their advantage.

COINTELPRO Have Come For The Right

Democrats have made sure this Jeans vs Genes controversy only runs in The Right Wing algorithm. It showed up once on the Socialist Dem side as a Mamdani’s Wife vs the Jeans lady and everyone said they are both beautiful in their own way and who cares anyways. Major fumble by the liberals who had not wanted the DSA to see that meme or interview in their algo. I had not seen this meme, ad or discussion once in the left or even dems algo. Not sure how it got into the DSA algo. Since Mamdani’s wife is central the liberals are trying to get the Left’s name dragged into the jeans commercial which no one on the Left has known about or ever responded too because the Democrats problems are not our problems. Data Science for an algorithm driven age requires finding out who is the intended target of an inorganically created algorithm pattern.

That was always a manufactured rivalry. No one ever said anything on the left about that commercial. That was like No Kings —completely a Democrats event. Yet the Right report on it like look at the Left look at those radical socialist communist and like Get Out the Democrats eat it up. They are totally insane. Just watching them I literally laughed out loud. But the right doesn't know any better they honestly think the democrats are radicals. Not realizing they are just moderate liberals who are one vote away from being Republicans. The Democrats are trying to drag DSA into the Jeans vs Genes debate by saying now "Mamdani's wife looks better than the Jeans actress" —to which the Left promptly replied who the f*ck cares. It hasn't even been in the liberals newsfeed, so it looks like cointelpro has come for the Right since it is only in their newsfeed. The liberals will continue to pretend that the Left are involved somehow at least to the Rights knowledge. I didn't know who the actress was for the longest time.

I guess no algorithm I interacted with put her in my feeds. I still do not really know who she is or what she does. I do not have time for cable, TV, TikTok or any extra media. Right now it is work and school, music and I watch surfing. I go sailing, surfing, and fishing for fun. Is she a singer, an actress, a dancer, an author, TV, movie? I don't know because a Democrat liberal psyop is the most boring thing to watch Republicans fall for its sleep inducing. Whoever this one is the Dems have the Right race baited as always. Just like the Right leadership will tell the Right voters it is about race. Both parties share that quality. The objective reality is it is actually about class but that is not as engaging. I saw weeks ago or was it months, whenever the ad came out, that it was jeans vs genes and I already knew it was about class.

It reminded me of the old Jessica Simpson commercials that I used once for a Basel Film School media for the masses project. The two slides were: “Chicken of the Sea” and an Ice Breakers ad. Chicken of the Sea was from the 2003 MTV show The Newlyweds, where Jessica Simpson asks if the tuna she is eating is chicken or tuna because the brand is called Chicken of the Sea. Her affable husband Nick just smiles Oh Jessica you are a dumb blonde Country & Western singer but that is why I love you. Jessica Simpson: Chicken of The Sea Rewind In my presentation I demonstrate how this is a good question is it chicken or tuna. It is sold as “chicken of the sea” so which one is it? Because she is a working class blonde woman from the south and also very attractive the audience are conditioned to laugh and say this is a stupid question.

On a deeper level the media reinforces that because this person is southern, working class and not college educated the American audience is conditioned to believe that she cannot teach us anything. These slides work equally well in rural communities in Hawaii in rancher towns on the Big Island of Hawaii or cowboy towns on Molokai or Kauai so it is not race related.

Even in Hawaii where local people speak pidgin on all islands, if you advertise something as “chicken of the sea” do not be surprised if a more down to earth person wants to know if it is chicken or tuna? For white people in Hawaii they view this as simple minded but again Hawaiian people can hunt deer, wild pigs and also fish using traditional methods so if there is a crisis the white people cannot take care of themselves so a college education is rendered useless.

This is a class system where the educated classes view themselves as superior but in comparison to what? Relative to survival the hunter gatherer is the superior intellect. If you convince the sustenance farmer that you the banker or superior you have class warfare.

In this way the Jessica Simpson commercials are not unlike the Penny character from the show The Big Bang Theory.

The shows entire subtext is that in many ways a friendly, warm, supportive, high school educated, blond, female farmer and fisher, Penny from North Dakota, is more intelligent and resourceful and therefore a net positive to society than the nerdy, dark haired, one Indian, neurotic scientists from Caltech. Because she is not overburdened by book knowledge. The working class contribute more to society than the intelligent classes.

The next slide I show is for the ad Ice Breakers.

In this ad, Jessica Simpson with her sister Ashlee wants to know about this new gum called Liquid Ice. Jessica wants to know is it liquid or ice? Exhausted, the sister is queried intelligently. The subtext is about the periodic table alluding to Mercury being a metal that is liquid at room temperature, but it can become a solid at very low temperatures or a gas if heated. The audience is again conditioned to believe that an attractive blonde woman is too dumb to just accept the gum is called Liquid Ice and she is set-up to be the familiar punchline. Only by this time the “Chicken of The Sea” ad had already gone viral and Ice Breaker took advantage of it’s popularity to use Jessica to turn the tables on her audience and wink that she knows that Mercury is a liquid and a solid. This time the message is maybe a farmer can teach you something.

The Democrats, their audience, and MAGA which is who this GQ interview is specifically targeted for should know that anything that has to do with jeans is about class. The Great Gatsby is literally the subtext of this interview. Jeans had already been invented during the Gold Rush and Jay Gatsby would not have been caught dead in a pair of jeans. The DNC told

MAGA it was about race and will have them frothing over it for a good six months maybe longer. Whatever the Democrats and Republicans (the Uniparty) are trying to distract MAGA from it seems to be working.

Neutered MAGA

MAGA are neutralized as both parties strip them and their families of healthcare. Many of the psyops lately have Republican backing as well but I suppose eventually the next two generations will learn more about how the two parties work together. It will probably be too late as they have been conditioned to believe that the liberals want them dead even as the Republicans hold the gun to their head while the Democrats hand them bullets.

It is a classic liberal ploy almost as manipulative as making the Right believe that ineffectual Schumer, Pelosi, Fetterman, Sinema progressive moderate liberals are really Bernie, Mamdani radical left socialist communists types. When that is who they hunt and hate. The enemy of Democrats is not the Republicans, the enemy of Democrats is the Left. Since many of the Left do not shop at American Eagle lately (I still do because I have long legs and they are the only brand for long legs) and the Democrats know that the Left won't get involved with the AE scandal so it is perfect for them.

I was not receiving any Jeans vs Genes content because it was in the Hollywood stars algorithm that I have banned from all my socials and filtered out of every app I use. I grew up in Los Angeles and those are not the actual celebrities talking. Their agents and managers do all of the talking for them. In the Cancel Culture decade things have changed and we live in a Stasi era of East Germany.

American Eagle Ad Class War

Under the guise of being called the Left, the Democrats set up their psyop — the “jeans vs genes” is the “working class born or upper class born” question. It is the question of the title character of The Great Gatsby. Gatsby’s original name was James Gatz, a penniless farmer’s son from North Dakota. He changed his name to Jay Gatsby at age 17 to create a new identity and pursue a life of wealth and status after meeting wealthy yachtsman Dan Cody.

When Trump had his Gatsby themed soiree at Mar-a-Lago it was considered tone deaf to use a Great Depression era unequal wealth distribution example when we are actually living through one. Palm Beach, Florida is not Manhattan and free buses is not Communism but I guess it doesn’t matter when class warfare cannot be seen in even a simple interview with an actress.

Since we have grown up with their face and the Democrats. The Left know they once just agreed with any Republican arresting any leftist in Portland, Manhattan, Davis, or Berkeley for being Antifa. Now for defying AIPAC. Once for hurting precious nazis. Now the Left are restrained at the moment from fighting AIPAC. The face in the interview is not shocking. The Right have maybe never had it used on them in an interview because that it is the face the Democrats reserve for the Left in their deprogramming sessions on how not to punch the Nazis. One must reason with them intellectually as you are dragged to be gassed. The liberal will be there getting gassed as well. Reason away comrade.

Jeans are working class, they were created in San Francisco during the 1849 California Gold Rush. Rich and middle class appropriated jeans in order to look cool. I do not watch propaganda with the sound on so I have not watched any of these jean interviews or commercials about the Democrats psyop. We had a final project assignment in Microeconomics last semester and I actually chose American Eagle as my marketing project since I have always had to wear AE because I have long legs. I did not research on what date the AE scandal began because I don't care what the liberals are up to with MAGA. It had never occurred to me that one of my favorite stores was involved in a cancel culture controversy.

Geospatial American Eagle Ads

On Maui there are only a few brand of jeans that we all really wear. American Eagle is one of the brands that you can wear. When I was younger and worked at Starbucks I was one of the girls that wore American Eagle. The girls were literally separated at Starbucks based on our jeans. So I own these jeans too. I just bought some of these same outfits. I did not know this was a big controversy when I went in to the store.

The last time I shopped at AE was in July 2025. I own this exact jean jacket with wide leg pants she is wearing in the ad. I had no idea there was a scandal and did not really notice any of the posters in the store. The AE on Maui was empty except for a few people. I have dark skin and long frizzy hair. The sales people were silent but friendly. The two other women in the store did not make eye contact. I do not like to be bothered when I shop so I saw it as a win/win. I picked out my items and walked to the register. It all costs about $879, I had bought all the essentials because I usually only shop once per year. American Eagle is one of the stores I shop at once a year.

From a geospatial perspective the American Eagle controversy did not appear to have an economic impact in Hawaii. We all wear American Eagle in Hawaii. Chinese, Filipino, white, black, Japanese, Tongan, Samoan, Hawaiian, Fijian, Portuguese, Puerto Rican, Micronesian, Democrat, Republican. I have always liked the softness of the cotton and how when you wash AE it does not shrink. Another reason is AE has a variety of sizes from very small to very large. They have longer lengths and shorter lengths to accommodate different heights. Queen Kaahumanu mall on Maui is never really full so the American Eagle there would never be very full. It would be hard to gauge if there was some sort of economic backlash or boycott. The liberals want to sow discord and division and have voters polarized. Republicans and Democrats are the same party who play off of each other for votes.

Hearing about this scandal made me wonder if anyone else had heard. I asked around and a few people said it was an "internet thing" not a real world issue. That was comforting to hear. The masses are starting to be able to differentiate when an outrage is manufactured or an actual issue that affects their objective reality.

Je surprisé! Not only do I own clothes that Mamdani's wife is wearing, the art school all black look. I own American Eagle and I just recently went and purchased more American Eagle jeans. AE is a store I have been shopping at since my Starbucks barista days.

Single Point of Failure

Hawaii is an unusual place racially, politically, socioeconomically. The gateway to the pacific and Asia. We are not as exposed to Internet phenomenons as frequently or as quickly as other states on the mainland. Sometimes the items we are told to boycott for political we just simply have to ignore. Hawaii is a blue state but we have a lot of independent voters. There are hunters and property owners who vote Republican.

We do not really discuss politics with each other. Voting is something you do privately. Trump has been a polarizing factor in families and communities. Farm and christian communities have been separated from family as a result of MAGA choices. I still have friends and coworkers who have different politics and we do not socialize as often. If I need them in an emergency they will be there for me and I know that they love me, we just do not agree politically.

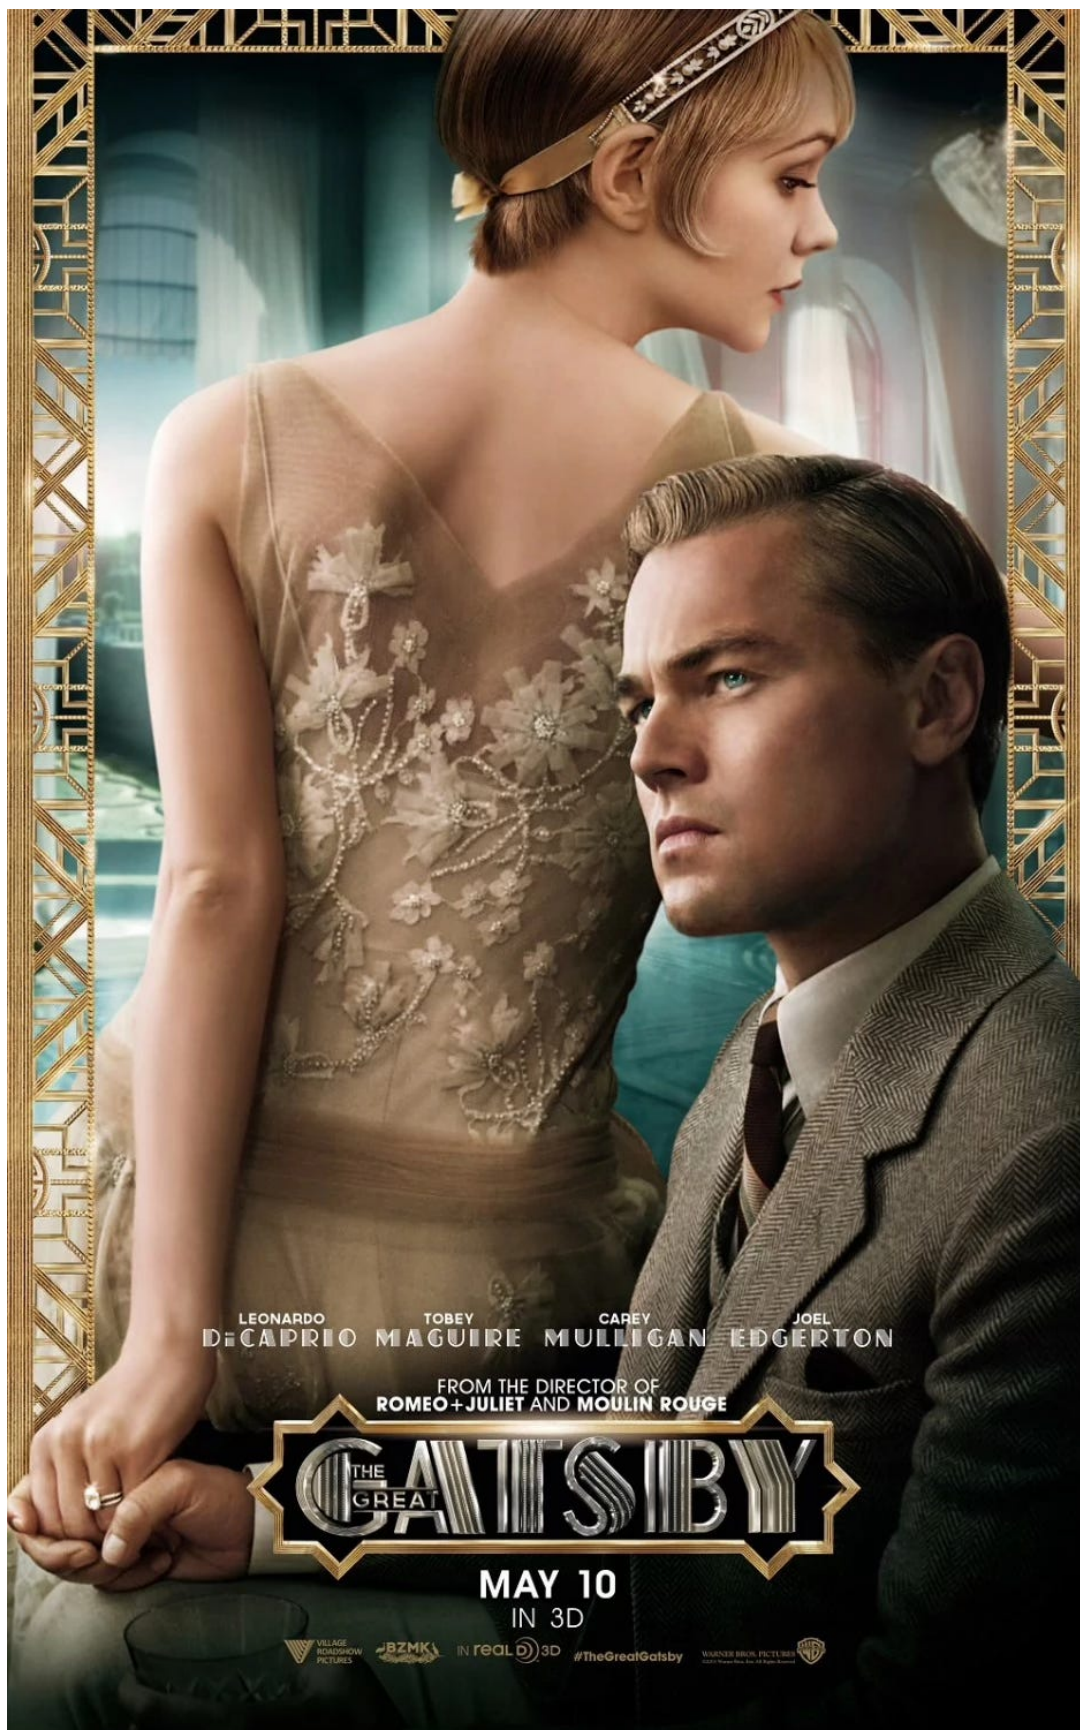

The message that liberals are trying to send with the timing of the Sydney Sweeney interview, and the releasing of the clothing of the wife of Mamdani's wife along with The Great Gatsby soiree footage: Is that a radical, exotic DSA politician, and a right wing fascist pretty faced actress being used as a prop for white nationalists are both enemies to the liberal Democrat party. Interesting juxtaposition of imagery that the DNC is going for here. But they are trying to send a message to the Left and the Right at the same time. Not sure why and how they were effective but I think they feel they have achieved their weird goal.

I think the single point of failure for the Democrats in the jeans psyops is that the DSA are not as far left as the DNC fantasize about them being. The DSA is just the only marketable party that the DNC has allowed on the ballot. The whole jeans interview meme warfare was only participated in by MAGA and liberals. The far left and DSA did not participate so why send the warning to bystanders? This points towards DNC hinting at getting Republican support in defeating extremist MAGA in their party and defeating DSA in the Democrats party. Funding from AIPAC for both sides goes without saying. AIPAC is the primary funder for destroying DSA candidates and far left parties for the DNC.

The Interview

The GQ interview is trying to deprogram a harmless commercial about a person saying "I have good genes that make me beautiful" into a class warfare session in which jeans symbolize the working class and genes which they told people symbolize whiteness but does not.

The genes they are talking about is working class, they are trying to tell this actress that she too is working class. Acting is a working class job in the American Dream. This actress is lead character Jay Gatsby and she has money and fame but it was given to her because she has good genes that made her beautiful not because she has talent.

That is why the freeze frame images of this ghouls face make such great memes. I do not think even the Left has had such hit pieces done on it like this actress. Although I am sure Hochul is about to hand Mamdani his liver on a platter. The actual Left like Hasan and others are always attacked by the Right for coming from money (Mamdani's & his wife) and having good genes but only pretending to be a Socialist when they actually are in the DSA. That is mostly what the DSA is comprised of so the Right kicking down on actual Socialists won't work.

The Democrats have taken a different approach with the Right and told them that genes and jeans is racial when it is actually an attack on class. Democrats attack the Left by telling them in that same annoying voice that, "you're college educated students from well off families and should not be out protesting because you're still the upper classes act like you have good genes" and do what the Democrats say; with that same grotesque twisted face. Same Democrats turn to the Right and tell a beautiful Daisy like actress that, "yes you have good genes to act because they made you pretty but you are still working class and perhaps middle class but you are not intelligent or educated so no one really cares what you think." It is the same playbook and one of the reasons why Democrats love when Republicans call them Socialists or Communists.

This actress is getting the F. Scott Fitzgerald treatment as a film. The Depression era film being a theme for Mar-a-Lago and the timing of this interview with the New York Mayoral race with Mamdani is the Democrats attempt to knock out the Left and the Right simultaneously. The actress is Jay Gatsby to the Democrats that is who she represents at Mar-a-Lago with Trump. That is how they have timed this interview. She should be wearing jeans and the good genes she has which are beauty which gave her the commercial are random and she should be grateful but she is not capable of political commentary. It is why rich people wear ripped up jeans and

Hollywood turns on Sydney Sweeney as she remains silent amid MAGA controversy

As Sydney Sweeney refuses to speak out on her ongoing MAGA and American Eagle advertisement controversy, many Hollywood stars have showcased their disapproval.

From The Irish Times: He then went on to showcase a clip from Roxane Gay, a professor and author who discusses the demographics of Republican voters in the U.S. While Sydney has not publicly spoken out her political stance or directly showed support of President Donald Trump, she is a registered Republican.

Under a newly posted Reddit thread, many users aligned with this take. Responding to this remark, one person wrote, “She 100 percent wants to be the postergirl for white conservative Facism.”

Shots have been fired and I have seen the first meme of the jeans actress interview. The Right have created a post on X of someone asking that the transgender people be treated fairly and the interviewed actress meme is used to say no. In typical fashion the liberals have attacked her and said she is letting herself be used for bigotry. She cannot control her image being used for memes. Other liberals are saying it is her fault because she should have said she is not racist during the interview. The interview was not designed for her not to say she was not racist. The interview was designed to browbeat her into submission and make an example of her like the working class Jay Gatsby.

Now that the liberals have established her non-existent bigotry. She did a jeans commercial and was interviewed about it for no earthly reason other than to create more of a controversy. Nothing this actress has said or done has made her a bigot. The memes being created by the Right using her image are bigoted but that is outside of her control. This is an unusual case of memetic warfare. The Democrats have purposefully created the meme for MAGA. Told them to use it and MAGA are now using it for their own political motives. At the center is an actress who has nothing to do with any political machine. The actress is being cancelled all the liberals have decried gleefully across entertainment social media where the battle has rightfully been confined. The good genes the actress and American Eagle was referring to was beauty. Liberals jumped on that and said she was alluding to white superiority. The liberals made the argument themselves. Does beauty mean being white with blonde hair and blue eyes? According to the liberals that is what the standard of beauty means.

Everything I learned about MAGA NAZIs and the Liberal NAZIs this week I learned against my will. I need to go cleanse my eyes with bleach and spend the next two weeks just surfing and not looking at any screens.

Just Say No To Drugs Algorithms

The Dems took the algorithms during Mamdani's campaign and meshed them so that the Right thought the Left cared about a random actress that isn't on the radar or in our feeds or as far as I could see even in the liberals feed. They are hyper fixated on Kathy Hochul at Mamdani's door to stop him. She is the wolf dressed like grandma right now smiling with sharp teeth. I won't be writing again for some time. This should be more than enough content for a while.

Speaking of people banned from my feeds. I want to take a moment and interject that Mr. Beast is probably the antichrist at this point. Making people eat 400 moldy sandwiches off of a floor covered in urine in a barn in Tallahassee to earn $100,000? He is the personification of evil and everything that is wrong with this commodification society we created. The Supreme Court needs to be impeached for the Shadow Dockets. Trumps extrajudicial EO's need to be overturned. The Democrats are complicit in all of the Republican's crimes and everyone should go to prison. The Right are trapped in some trauma fugue and probably won't be reachable for quite some time.

Rick and Morty (Season 8)

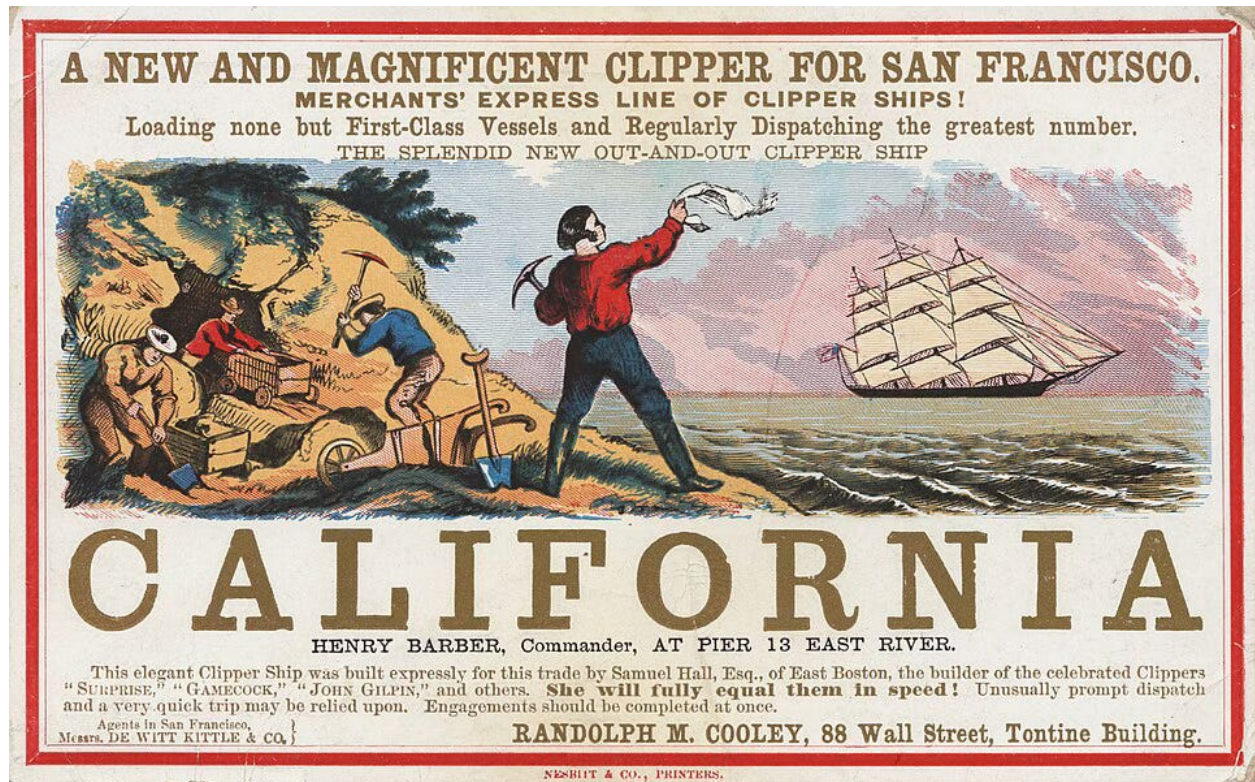

You ever ask yourself why they call it your FEED? Like a pig or a cow feed of a farm. Media is very calculated in this way. Mamdani's wife, The Great Gatsby, the Jeans vs Genes interview are all sent into the algorithm at the same time in a well planned fashion. What is hidden is how the race factor of each player only hides class warfare. Jay Gatsby was born poor, working class and changed his name once he became rich, he threw big parties with high society that laughed at him behind his back. He had an affair with an upper class married woman, Daisy. She took his car and killed someone. The town blamed him and he ended up dead in his swimming pool. The rich retreated behind their wealth and forgot about him.

Big Bang Theory

That is the question she is asking of her, you don't think you are making political commentary with a jeans commercial? You are the working class. That is the same problem Democrats have with the Left. The greatest movements of the Left both socialists and communist come from the working class and Democrats hate that so much that watching upper class students fund the working class and not the DNC drives them crazy. It is good to see that they have gotten so tired of the DSA that they are attacking

MAGA directly with Jeans vs Genes hit pieces. It is about time those cowards came forward. Cancel culture and the disavow game only works on those who the Democrat liberals have power over.

Jeans were invented during California Gold Rush in San Francisco

Vote John Jameson or James Johnson

I understand direct action, Portland is doing well and Manhattan is staying on track. Every other state is fighting ICE and that is really all that can be done on a street level at the moment. In terms of voting, I suppose it is better not to waste a vote until the people are fed up with empty promises and allow a third party to break the duopoly.

The DSA will have to fill the void. They're the lesser of three evils, the other two evils being the Liberal Democrats and the Republicans.

As the media begin to release photos of Mamdani's wife we were allowed to construct an image of the candidates "other half" — who is this person at home? The Democratic Socialist Mamdani's wife in photo's wears actual clothes that I too have owned and worn, similar hairstyles and jewelry with boots to match. I like her style, since it matches my own. This style of dress, mixing vintage pieces with a modern flair has often been called boho or bohemian. It is a style seen in Camden not the West End of London, or the East Village and not the Upper West Side of NY.

Rama Duwaji

It's a signal style, or a "tell" it says something about the person as a value signature. You may have one expensive item that is the signature, that you mix in with other vintage pieces. It was one of the lessons in Girlboss. When going to a deceased rich socialites home in San Francisco to pick up her clothes to resell you need to know the value of the clothes otherwise you can sell something for $500 that actually cost $5,000. This style says that they are artistic and come from money probably old money but they don't care what you think, they have their own style.

Rama Duwaji

Someone described it as “giving main character in a film that only plays in French Film Festivals” — they don’t want to be like other people in their class system. It is an interesting look into these two people that I literally just discovered a few days ago. Looking at him for just a few minutes and I can see that he is not like her, he does care. She is a trophy of sorts for him and she makes him happy how she is so different but she also embodies the ideas that he represents.

This election some people will vote for Mamdani, others may be given the option to vote for him because of his wife. In the United States this is seen more clearly in the cause that the First Lady chooses once she enters the White House. Nancy Reagan chose saying no to drugs, notorious for her pill addiction, very little comment was made but she did get tremendous support from celebrities. Laura Bush chose Reading Literacy. Bush was seen as not an intellectual giant, so she wanted to stress the importance of reading. Obama’s wife choose nutrition and exercise, she was seen as healthy and fit as was her husband so it made sense for them to focus on health.

Rama is an artist, who works in ceramics, and mixed media. She has a BFA in communication arts, and MFA in illustration from a School of Visual Arts. She has a similar educational background that I pursued for Greenpeace to produce environmental justice documentaries. I recognize this style of dress because it is basically de riguer for art school students. We call it our “black phase” because you just wear all black clothes to art galleries, to class, to photography shoots. She worked in social justice with a focus on women’s political issues and her art pieces have been published in several major magazines and the Tate Museum.

She is a major win for him and you can tell that he is not only in love with her but this is the type of woman to communicate to the world his ideas as a socialist. Yes, she is arm candy but this type of political arm candy is hard to come by. I know because I have escaped being the arm candy of many Pirate Party and Green Party men based on how I look, my educational background, and political fervor. It is always better to marry for love, when you are sick and you are tired, the arm candy concept fades and you will need someone who really loves you to nurse you back to health.

The Merchant Class

THE GREAT GATSBY

Daisy Buchanan and Jay Gatsby in The Great Gatsby (1925)

Classism is a concept that I wrote about frequently in high school, and now in college, mainly because I belong to a class of people called the merchant class which is a class few speak of in modern times yet we still exist. The merchant class is a social group of people who buy, sell, and trade goods for profit. They played a vital role in economic and cultural development, especially as trade routes expanded. The merchant class rose out of the death of feudalism, as caused by changes in the structure of labor.

Merchant Guilds in Medieval Europe.

According to Brown University, the Merchant Class in Medieval Merchant Culture by Boccaccio's era, was very rich, often intermarrying with impoverished members of the nobility. That is why it is so easy for women like us to be taken for arm candy by a man building a career, political or otherwise. We clean up well, we read the right books and have the right pedigree but we are edgy and dangerous and men like that, were not boring but we can be taken around rich people without fear of being embarrassed. Old money goes to an excellent college but doesn't have to really do well, their parents name will get them by.

They will be given a position in the family business but aren't expected to do much. We come from something better than old money, in the South Pacific it's called dead money. You wear the black pearls, anyone can have pink pearls, but black pearls are rare. Generations of treasure chests sunken with gold coins. We learn at a young age how to tell different coins from each other and have a coin collection. We develop a client base, and people bring coins to us and we can tell them how much the coins are worth and their history. We photograph the coins and catalog them. We buy and sell the coins and have an exchange, this is an art form that has been in our family for hundreds of years. This is just one example of a merchant family, this is called dead money, merchant class old world knowledge passed down through generations.

Culture Wars

Culture wars are not the NPC that people imagine. The culture wars have actually been the driving force holding together the inability of the class wars to be fought systematically by all races.

Let look at religious student organization TPUSA at UC Berkeley recently for their last stop on the TPUSA college campus tours.

UC Berkeley TPUSA College Campus Tour Protest 11/2025

Look at these animals. What is wrong with them? I am literally clutching my pearls through the screen. I need a manager to call. First of all when was the last time people protested on college campuses? Besides recently against ICE, last elections for Palestine, earlier this year for Palestine, throughout both of Trumps presidencies, BLM, OWS, 70's, 60's the Vietnam-era but besides those isolated incidents no one has ever protested on campuses in the United States. It is gauche and someone needs to call Karen to call the manager.

The DOJ has been called in to investigate why a state college campus is protesting TPUSA. It is quite the mystery. Not sure what action will be taken but my bet is it will be combination NAZI and Stasi like in its attack. Time to put the old fascist boot down. Cannot have students disagreeing with a religious based campus organization at a state public federal university. Freedom of religion is a constitutional right.

Separation of church and state is in the constitution and we all know the constitution was probably written on hemp paper. These students have probably been smoking the constitution.

Too much constitution going on in this country. Maybe that is why MAGA hates the constitution so much except for 2A. The rest of the constitution possibly written on smelly hemp paper needs to go especially the correct interpretation of 1A. Founding fathers were probably high. Let's do a background check and see if any of them went to UCB or can pass a drug test. First amendment rights go too far. Students have too much freedom to assemble, freedom of association, and they also have freedom of religion, let's not forget that last freedom is very important too.

Advertisement: Urban Legends

It is actually an Urban Legend that the Constitution was written on hemp paper. It was written on parchment which is animal skin. The old urban legend that the Declaration of Independence was written on hemp? Well, some urban legends are true, and some are false, but this is an urban legend that is pretty much true.

The truth derives from the fact that until 1883, 75% to 90% of all paper in the world was made from cannabis hemp fiber. The hemp plant is a very versatile plant, which could (and still does) make many different things. It is used in shampoos, fabrics, and medical drugs (medicinal marijuana and Marinol). It is also used to make rope and makes an alternative fuel. But paper is the material it was most widely used for.

The paper made out of hemp is of much greater quality than that made out of cotton, and it lasts longer. A few hundred years ago, Bibles, maps, paper money, stocks and bonds, and newspapers were all written on hemp paper. In those days, they couldn't make paper from trees like they do today.

- The famous writings written on hemp paper include:

The King James Bible (17th century).

Thomas Paine's pamphlets: The Rights of Man, Common Sense, and The Age of Reason.

The works of Mark Twain, Alexander Dumas, and Victor Hugo.

And Lewis Carroll's beloved Alice in Wonderland.

All these were written on hemp paper, as was just about everything else at the time.

The first draft of the Declaration of Independence was, indeed, written on Dutch hemp paper (June 28, 1776). The second draft was, too. This second draft was written on July 2, 1776. This was the draft agreed to and announced and released on the immortal date of July 4, 1776.

Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776

Then on July 19, 1776, Congress ordered the Declaration of Independence be copied and engrossed on parchment (a prepared animal skin). This was the famous document signed by the delegates on August 2, 1776. So, this “original” Declaration of Independence was engrossed on parchment (animal skin treated with lime).

This treated animal skin parchment stretches out and has a long-lasting quality. This is why the Declaration of Independence is in such good condition when we view it today. So, just to clarify completely: the original two drafts of the Declaration of Independence were written on hemp paper.

Lets get back to our regularly scheduled programming.....

College protests are absolutely unheard of and need to stop immediately. Unless you are trying to overturn a democratically elected presidency by storming the capital in an insurrection there is never any need to protest. College campuses are intellectual institutions of higher learning. It is completely inappropriate for these students to be here yelling and disagreeing with opinions that they do not agree with. I forgot what you call that when you disagree with the speech of others but I think it's free.

Historically TPUSA has had two rabid enemies. Groypers, a group of intel white nationalist who have sworn to kill their leader since day one and spent the beginning of their historical run heckling and attacking their leader (insert name here) and upon his death were considered the first suspects. The other enemy TPUSA assigned to themselves and that was well anybody who does not agree with them. I guess ideological dissidents are their sworn enemy. Instead of focusing on their actual enemy (that would be too logical) they outsource to their cultural enemies. People and institutions who hold different values. Here is where the culture war flourishes.

Whether it be the weird, haggardly, transgender obsessed LibsOf TikTok or the desperately, needy, sociopath Andy Ngo. The media philosophy here is; let me insert myself in a situation with a group of people I totally disagree with and hate. I will film myself and them, report them to the police, get them on kill lists with white nationalist and retire rich. What could possible go wrong? Nothing actually. It is exactly the scenario they want. It is the equivalent of feeding raw meat to their rabid supporters who will tell them they are doing God's Work (in this economy God has to freelance as a RW agitator) setting up the perfect scenario for self-actualized victimhood.

Those angry Antifa people were mean to us. No many how many times people play back our insufferably cruel alienating hateful dangerous terroristic words to us we can understand why people hate us. We had paying customers for our booked event and they got mad and attacked everyone. Why would they do that? What about or free speech? Hate speech is not free speech. Apparently wanting all transgenders dead is not hate speech. Polarization is key here, they need two very distinct camps for each person to join otherwise what are we doing here. I am blue and you are red, we stand for different things. We are enemies, we do not agree on anything. We hate each other.

That is why we came all the way to UC Berkeley and made sure it was the last stop on our campus tour. WE NEED YOU TO HATE US BERKELEY. So we can show the world how much you do not agree with our religious politics. You think our way of being is a danger to others.

We want to confirmation bias the shit out of our cult. Prove to them once and for all that you are dangerous (((terrorists))) who want to protect transgenders, Palestine, disabled, women, minorities, and other people you deem we attack. That will show you! Creating this type of scenario gives them the opportunity to claim their self-created victory.

Despite the ungodly thugs attacking us we still had a good time and everyone danced to YMCA (is anyone going to tell them what that song actually means? No? its more fun this way)

This is America that the politicians want, there is no bipartisanship (except for the laws that keep getting passed that hurt the entire country which are completely bipartisan) we are a country divided, right? Right? Liberals want us dead? It is dangerous to walk the street as a white person, right? The armed vans with unmarked plates and masked men with no ID?

Oh ignore ICE those aren't for white people. But, yeah as I was saying, you know it's a scary place right now for white people who completely dominate the agenda the police, the house, the senate, the executive branch, the National Guard. Just one misstep and any person of color will end up dead or deported but it's the white people who need to be afraid? How do you reason with that. You don't and you should not even have to. It has been the same song and dance for the last 10 years. MAGA claim to be silenced but still have the loudest voices. They claim to be scared yet it is others that are hurt.

They yell Fuck Your Feelings and cry like toddlers on national TV every time someone disagrees with their fascist policies in the slightest way. They shove bibles into peoples faces and tell them how to live their lives and all the laws they are going to pass to restrict all personal freedom, free speech, freedom of association, and free will.

TPUSA then turn around and complain about how they are the victims here. It's a lose/lose discussion because honestly at this point I think they are completely incapable of any self-reflection. Palov's dogs just kept waiting for the bell. UC Berkeley is one of those bells. You ring it and every RWNJ in the world is going to start salivating. They want blood, anybody blood, preferably Antifa's but one of their own's blood helps to increase their victimhood.

UC Berkeley protested TPUSA the same way as they have before. Nothing has changed about how UCB is protesting TPUSA. But this needs to be filmed and transmitted to the world as a political prop. This time it is different. Let's not waste this final opportunity for victimhood. Maybe stop forcing yourselves on UCB? They're just not that into you.

Nah, this is what they live for. Con Inc always do this for attention so they can cry muh free speech. It's intentional to get in the news feeds of their drama addicted cult. You always look to trigger UCB for optics. Since Trump was elected every hot button issue MAGA cult leader books an event at UCB.

It's obligatory press to keep their rabid base riled up and foaming at the mouth. McInnes, Shrekli, Proud Boys, etc every MAGA has to go to UCB for the fight. It is their WWE event of the season and the reason why they scheduled UCB for the last stop on the tour. Has UCB been waiting for them?

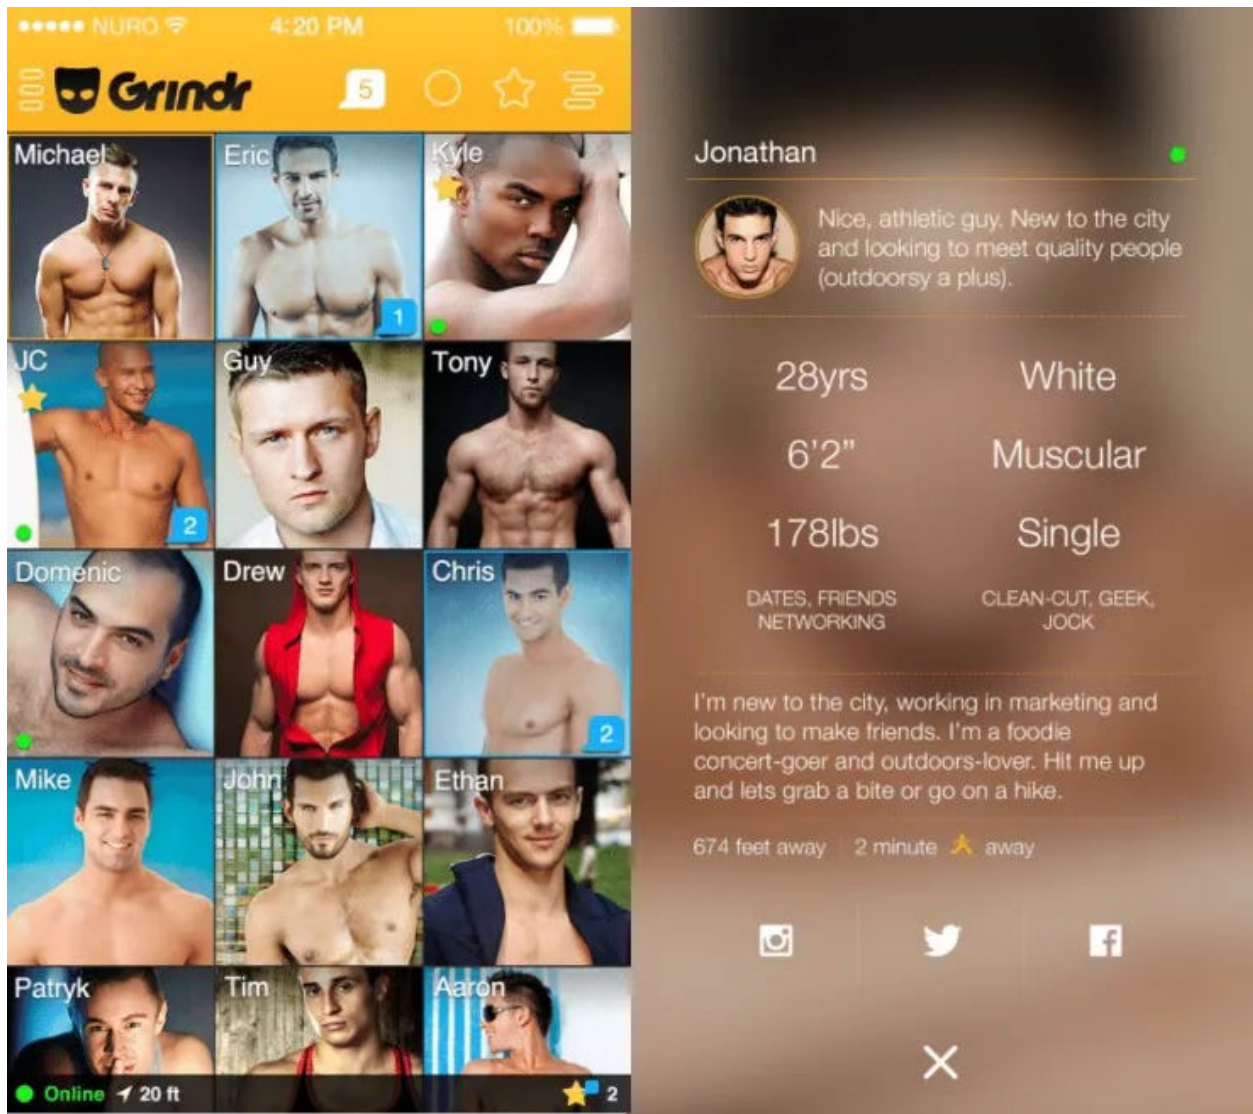

Of course, no one is naive here or stupid enough to believe that this is all entirely coincidental. Just because you are being used as a political prop does not mean you don't still have a job to do. If TPUSA did not want to use it as the drama filled end to the season finale they would have scheduled UCB as the first campus and moved on peacefully to the other campuses. There would have been no press in that.

It's the role of UCB to be used as a political prop. Conservatives see UCB as the symbol of everything that must be destroyed in the world. In reality it's one of the most profitable public research universities in the world generating billions of dollars annually. But every RWNJ publicist on a book tour schedules UCB for optics to generate buzz/sales. It's a played out methodology. Clashes at UCB headlines oh my now they have something new to cry victim about. It's endless victimhood for these people.

They are always being silenced yet have not stopped screaming for 10 years. Give us free speech and arrest everyone who doesn't agree with us.

Christians who follow neither God, the Bible nor Jesus's teachings. It's unreal levels of cognitive dissonance. Can Elon get Mars ready so they can all relocate and leave us here with peace on earth. The self-named f*ck your feelings crowd every day have new hurt feelings. Maybe they should stop forcing their politics and judgements on the world; you know that sin they accuse the other side of constantly. Culture wars escalate. It's manipulative and tiresome. The protestors were kept separate from the TPUSA guest. It was during their departure that words were exchanged. Berkeley Scanner

From the MAGA party that break Grindr every time they come to town. TPUSA ended their rally singing that famous LGBTQ anthem "YMCA" by the Village People with Rob Schneider. They looked happy.

If the helicopters had not been flying so low, I think TPUSA could have squeezed in “Macho Man” for an encore. If only they all could have held hands with Antifa and danced in the streets together. This world would be a better place.

UC Berkeley campus flyer to protest TPUSA: We stand with people of color, immigrants, LGBTQI+, the poor & all oppressed people. Sounds like a list from the bible. That is who Jesus said he came to save....the poor and all oppressed people. I am veering into Catholic Socialism here. It is the remnants of SVDP in me.

Do these students go to class when they are not being antifascist? They do go to class and they also earn the school millions of dollars in funds for research, Nobel Prizes, and start-up founders who generate billions of dollars.

Wait, those antifascist students are intelligent? Yes, UC Berkeley is one of the most competitive schools in the country. It is very difficult to get accepted and has a very steep curve for grades and test scores.

The classes are some of the most academically rigorous in the world. The students are very intelligent. Of all the schools in the UC system, UC Berkeley is the hardest to get into and the students come from around the world to attend. They are the best and the brightest of their class.

In October 2025, the University of California made history by winning five Nobel Prizes in a single week.

The Brainypedia

Setting a new world record for the most Nobel awards ever received by a university system in such a short span. According to the University of California's official news site, the awards were spread across three disciplines: medicine, physics, and chemistry, and involved faculty and alumni from UC Berkeley, UC San Diego, UC Santa Barbara, and UCLA.

The week began with Frederick Ramsdell, an alumnus of UC San Diego and UCLA, receiving the Nobel Prize in Physiology or Medicine for his discovery of regulatory T cells, which play a crucial role in preventing autoimmune diseases. According to Yahoo News and UC Berkeley's College of Letters & Science, this achievement brings the University of California's total Nobel count to 75, reinforcing its reputation as one of the world's leading public research institutions. The record-setting week also highlights the importance of long-term investment in scientific research and the power of collaboration across campuses and disciplines.

University of California Nobel Prizes Sweep 2025 makes me proud of all the UC campuses. My alma mater UC Santa Barbara. Proud of UCLA as my magnet school Los Angeles Center for Enriched Studies (LACES) is taught programmed into University of California A-G requirements. And proud of my older brother who works at UCLA in the IT department. Great job as always by UC Berkeley, and UC San Diego.

Since UC's are also in the perpetual hurt feels news feed this week. I can't stress enough how some students at UC Berkeley not agreeing with an overly sensitive reactionary subsection of society does not make them a bad school. In an intellectual society we would want open debate and free speech to flourish.

Historically across the globe students have had protests against ideology that they do not agree with. To constantly take this religious organization on campuses and shove them into students faces demanding that people accept and embrace them is a violation of free speech and freedom of religion.

Students have the right to assemble, and freedom of association as constitutional protections. UC is a diverse public research university institution who consistently contributes to society with results. Free speech is letting both sides have an opinion on an issue. Not just your side of the issue. Revisionist history works for one side but others remember a different version of this person that has been deified by the right wing masses. Perhaps it is wise to consider that your gods are not the gods of others and leave them in peace.

Polymarket Influence Campaigns

"She is wearing my clothes," is what I muttered over matcha with friends, "who" they said, "the wife of this guy," the quote on the picture says "affable gujarati muslim guy who speaks Arabic, Spanish, and Bengali who looks like he would have been cleaning up in the 16th century southeast asian spice trade." I showed them the picture, and they laughed. They both stared at me with love and pity, "you have to read the news more, that's Mamdani." They changed the subject to yoga. "Oh, okay" is all I could think of to say and stared at the cars passing by sipping on my matcha.

I had been so absorbed with school and had not followed the New York elections since I lived on Maui in Hawaii and we have local news. Everyone in the world was following the elections for some reason. I found that interesting so I did some brief research to see what information I could find. Both sides of the political spectrum have seemed to take a heated position. What was surprising is that neither side seemed to live in New York, nor would they be at all affected by the New York mayoral race.

It was a new concept in politics that the entire country and sometimes other countries had an opinion about places that had nothing to do with their own geographical locations, like the New York mayoral election. I would assume we can attribute this to Polymarket and other prediction (betting) sites that are gaining in popularity. Attention had been monetized and like many eras before ours betting was the last cry of a dying empire.

Polymarket is an American cryptocurrency-based prediction market, headquartered in Manhattan, New York City. Launched in 2020, it offers a platform where individuals can place bets on various future events, including economic indicators, weather patterns, awards, as well as political and legislative outcomes.

Since 2020 and the dawn of Polymarket I had noticed that the news cycle was even more accelerated than the 2015-2020 era of hyper sensationalism of political issues or polysci-porn I liked to call it. Images of Black Lives Matter and those killed by the police I always commented was "snuff porn for racist who were aroused by watching black people die." I disengaged from social media during the George Floyd era (as I had when Osama Bin Laden's dead body was passed around the internet) and focused on my career. I merely observed that constantly showing the death of George Floyd aroused both the white Democrats and the white Republicans in different ways for different reasons.

The Coastal Elite Democrats

I was working as a paralegal at a law firm in downtown Maui for a liberal jewish attorney who wanted everyone in the office to watch the George Floyd verdict. I declined and said the imagery was too disturbing and I had avoided watching any of it up until now. He met me in the hall and asked if I wanted him to call me in when the George Floyd verdict was announced? I was genuinely confused since I had just said I would not be watching. So I asked why he would do that and queried out of curiosity who George Floyd was. I asked if he was the man killed recently by police. He corrected me and said he was the “black” man killed by police. Ah, I replied more as an answer to his typical liberal Democrat Get Out moment and ended the conversation by returning back to my desk.

My work mate Rebecca a paralegal from Washington state where I also had some family looked at me and shook her head making a loopy sign with her finger to signify that he was crazy. I laughed and went back to work. Finally, the big moment had come, intrigued I joined everyone in his office to watch the verdict. Chauvin was found guilty and the attorneys and paralegals celebrated. I left the office since I had never followed the case and did not know the nuances. I had seen fleeting violent images and labeled it snuff porn for racists and liberals because that is what it is used for in my personal opinion.

Both Rebecca and I quit two weeks later. That moment in the hall which everyone had witnessed had been the determining factor in a series of other equally disturbing confrontations with the same attorney. It was his law firm so I just kept calling in dead until he stopped calling me. Rebecca went to another law firm closer to her home in Haiku. He was confused by both of our actions. He never understood either of us. With Rebecca he had a patronizing tone he used that she hated and had confronted him on several occasions to no avail. This tone Jewish men reserved for the WASP descendants of the white working class and blue collar workers. When I met her she said she was from Washington State I asked what part and she said the town. I named her cheese and we laughed. Most people think only of Seattle, Washington well yeah but the whole point Kurt Cobain was making is that the rest of Washington State is just farm land and vast open country.

A good way to make someone laugh in Washington is to buy the cheese that comes from their town. She and I bonded immediately and stayed close friends to this day. When I went on to sell insurance she called me and was the first policy that I sold. I also knew she was not “blue collar” or “working class” - the type of blonde hair milk maid farm girl that he fetishized her as was a million dollar farm and her parents were quite wealthy. He was a coastal elite, a liberal Jew born and raised in New York. A Democrat who felt it was okay to be racist towards Southeast Asians, Hawaiians and other Pacific Islanders on Maui. He treated Japanese as equals since he felt they had an advanced intellect. In other words he was a racist piece of crap.

Like most transplants he really did not know what to do with me. I was not allowed to have my own opinion or be an intellectual. He didn't understand why I surfed, skateboarded, wore Vans or listened to rock music. He just naturally assumed I knew zero about absolutely everything until the George Floyd case which he assumed I knew everything about. I am not familiar with the east coast and their class systems. But I usually avoid having anything to do with these people because I find it difficult to communicate with them.

In his mind, he was to be me and Rebecca's great teacher and emancipator, our illuminator to the cultural side of the world. He was creepy, the typical boring liberal Democrat. I had come from another much more successful law firm a few blocks away to his firm and we had clashed when it came to filling out civil law court documents which is what he had specifically hired me for. Previously he had lost several high profile cases and his team was convinced that the attorney at my former law firm was not intelligent enough to have won those cases on his own. The two paralegals in his office had told him that it was me who was winning the cases. I came to his office with the phone numbers and direct lines to people in the judiciary that could move your documents through the byzantine maze. After having several of his documents rejected over the years he finally turned to me for help. I built up form documents for his entire office so that he would use this same system when submitting the documents to the courts. He was begrudgingly grateful for the assistance but had to admit that it was having success.

The liberals White Savior complex loses steam in Hawaii and they are forced to do business with people that they had previously looked down upon. African-Americans are also not huge fans of me since they too cannot understand what I am, why I talk the way I do, the music, the clothes, it is all very confusing for them. I try and ask them if they know any Tongans. Some do, most do not, well I say Tongans descend from my people, Fijians we are Melanesians. I do not resent either faction but I also do not owe them any explanation. White people really struggle in Hawaii and many of them eventually leave because they cannot reconcile to being a minority.

I was born in Fiji, with one parent a Native Hawaiian from Molokai where I spent a short time in my youth. I grew up in Venice and Santa Monica, California taught counterculture and was raised to be an independent thinker and never apologize for my individuality. I also have family in Washington State who are comfortably middle and upper middle class. I have always felt happy in my skin and never compelled to conform to the standards of others or the media. Peer pressure is a concept that repulses and saddens me when I see others fall for it.

The three states where I have family are the only states that really interest me as the rest of the United States confuse me. The one exception being New Mexico, which I have always felt drawn to since I was a small child. I would sit on the floor of my dad's office at JPL and pour over his books of New Mexico enthralled by the pictures of the desert, the adobes and the cactus. I have met people from the rest of the United States when they visited California and Hawaii. Having met them has given me zero desire to see the rest of the USA as an adult.

MAGA and Liberals share same Reality TV Algorithm

That people who would never be remotely affected by the New York City mayor race had such strong opinions about this mans campaign simply because he was a muslim intrigued me. Thanks to Polymarket it seemed that local politics no longer existed, only tribal politics that polarized millions of people which they used hard earned money to bet with. Every week the blue team and the red team allowed themselves to be whipped into a frenzied rage by some new issue or even the same old issues thousands of miles away. Lab rats in a perpetual maze chasing imaginary cheese in a never ending news cycle designed to keep them exhausted, angry, fearful and xenophobic. Oblivious to the fact that the designer of the maze was the cause of all their pain. This must have been how the Holy Roman Empire declined as yet another gladiator was dropped into the arena and the lion released.

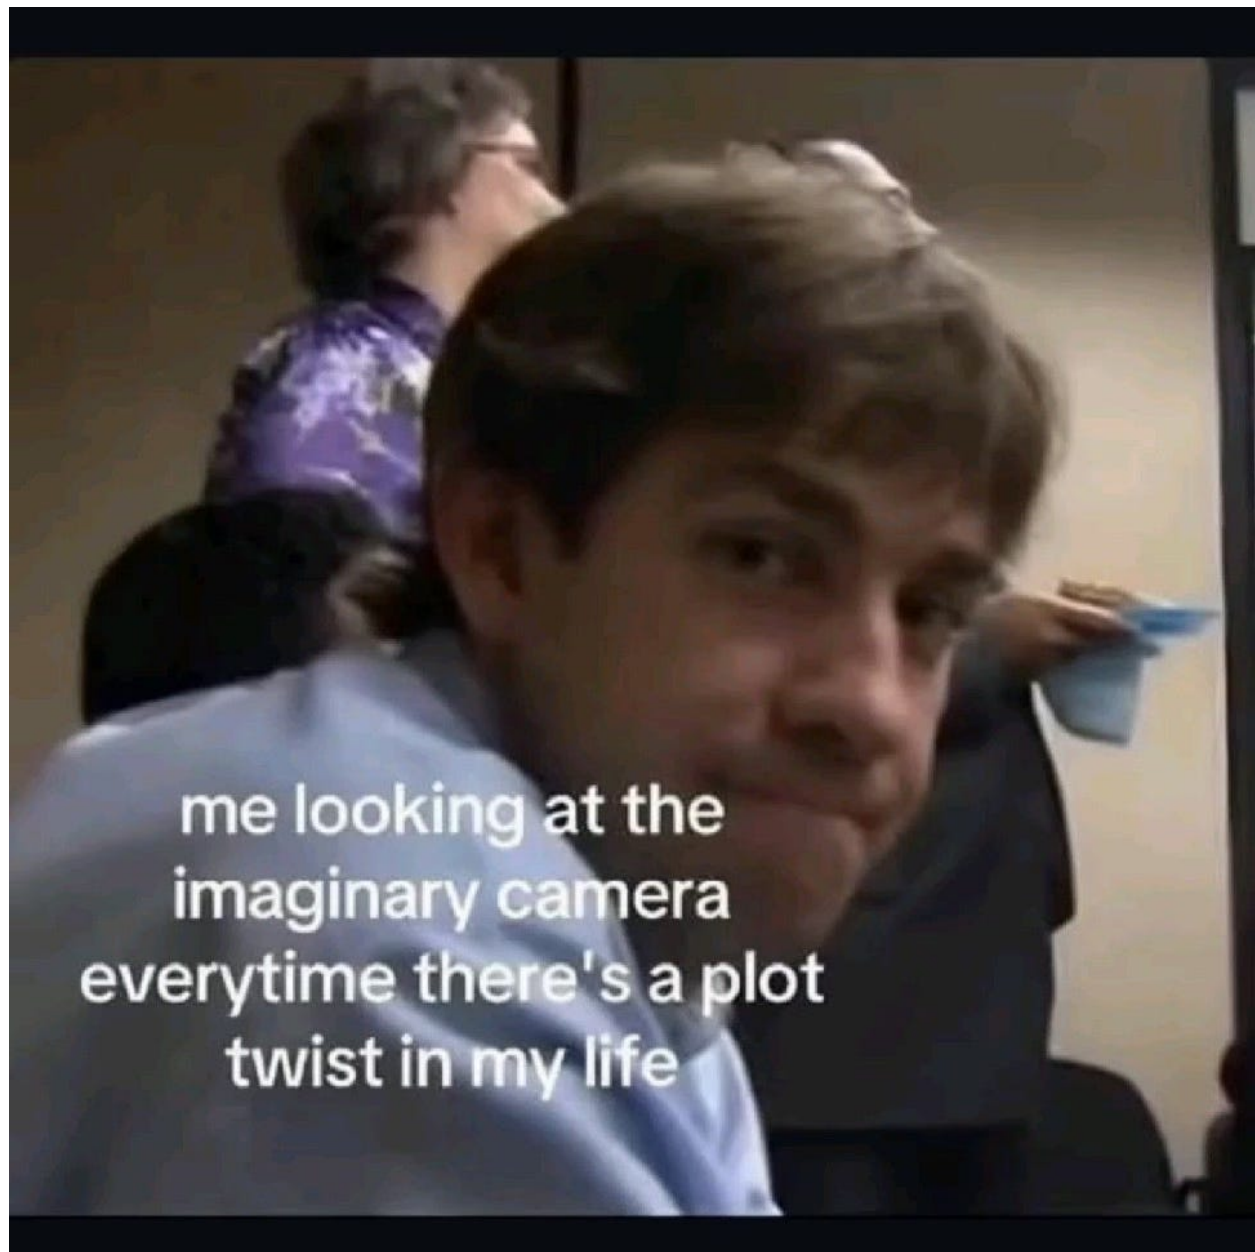

The Gladiator (1992)

In terms of class warfare this constant fixation on eugenics has another unintended secondary effect. The billionaires boys club media conglomerates have managed to convince the sheeple MAGA Right and MAGA-lite that Mamdani's DSA-lite free bus, rent control campaign is simultaneously execution style Maoism and mandatory hijab jihadism. Post-Vietnam War America industrialists learned well to always disguise their class wars behind race wars. The recent parasocial TikTok MAGA birthed from parasocial Instagram MAGA taught to always identify with the rich and scorn the poor. Even if they were actually the poor or closer to the poor in income and class than the rich. Working on the fringes of the rich does not make one rich. Somehow Gen Z and Millennials were led to believe otherwise.

Crypto and tech MAGA are the main exponents of this ideology. Being on the fringes of rich people led them to identify with the riches they may one day have. Perhaps they come from a solid middle class background. Not sure the safety net for the middle class is looking all that great in this economy. What was once the working class is now economically the working poor. The middle class have become the working class, and the upper middle class are the middle class. The disparity between wealth has shifted poverty levels to such an extreme that poverty level in Hawaii annually is an income below $59,000. If you earn below that you are living at poverty level. MAGA and liberals need to look at the poverty level in their states to determine if they are closer to the rich.

Meanwhile the Sheeple Liberal Progressives are being sold yet another DSA candidate to attack AOC-style. Idealistically packaged to appeal to Millennials and Gen Z. He may be unable to implement policies that sound idyllic during the campaign cycle but eventually will be impossible to fully deliver. Only time will tell how far the Democrats will go to destroy his campaign. I hope MAGA are watching to see that liberals hate the actual Left more than they hate the Right. There are a handful of Democratic Socialist candidates on ballots across the States, and with the current low Republican approval rating I would not be surprised if they made a clean sweep.

Hopefully the DSA will be able to deliver on their campaign promises this time. MAGA as always are putting up communist symbols as they call them socialists, obligatory eye roll. Getting them to learn the difference between Communism, Socialism, Maoism and Stalinism is next to impossible. Trying to explain Democratic Socialist like Bernie, AOC, Mamdani at this point is a waste of time.

MAGA have been brainwashed to jump scare every time they even hear the words Communism and Socialism. Instead of building a $200 million dollar ballroom you can take that money and invest it into infrastructure (roads, bridges, schools, electricity, highways), healthcare, seniors, daycare, veterans, disabled programs that is the socialism they have everyone programmed to hate.

The socialism everyone is programmed to accept is paying congress during a shutdown when they are not working and continuing to pay them for socialized free food, free healthcare, free housing and letting them invest in stock while the common man is denied these items by the same politicians who tell them socialism is evil.

Where are contingency SNAP funds? Are they gone? $5 billion has vanished due to the Executive Branch. Maybe we can melt down some of this gold to buy food. Imelda Marcos and Eva Peron fucked around and found out but Americans don't want to upset the status quo. Rioting against injustice is bad m'kay only blacks do that it's bad m'kay. Here take your brainwashing pill and keep scrolling until your eyeballs explode.

What the heck is DSA Anyway?

In America what people label "socialism" is usually social democracy. That means market economies with stronger safety nets and labor standards, not state ownership of everything. Democratic Socialism aims to replace capitalism; social democracy regulates it. U.S. debates often blur this, but they're not the same.

Growth vs redistribution is nuanced. Recent empirical work finds well-designed, targeted redistribution can support growth (eg. via human capital and demand stability). It's not a binary of "free markets grow, redistribution kills growth."

Democracies change policy slowly; institutions constrain bad ideas and help good ones stick. Let's track outcomes for a year - unemployment, inflation, real wages, child poverty- then decide if things are "ruined."

From what I could gather it looks like the current NYC mayor is putting stop guards into place that will make it difficult for this mayor to put his policies into place. Also, the types of programs he is promising are not the domain one normally sees being ruled over by a mayor. Without knowing how NYC municipal government operates it is hard for anyone outside of that region to know how their political machine works.

Universal Healthcare: Medicare For All

Since "the subsidies for ACA have to get bigger and bigger to keep the ACA affordable," let's scrap it all and offer Universal Healthcare and Medicare for All. Healthcare is a basic human right. We the people, deserve to be healthy, to be able to see competent doctors in a timely manner. We deserve access to reproductive health, to pharmacy, dental, vision and other healthcare benefits without a copay. Other advanced western nations have healthcare for its citizens. America is constantly making fun of third-world countries. Maybe stop acting like a 3rd world country and offer Universal Healthcare. Instead of dumping millions of dollars in the Department of War and the Pentagon. Invest the money into social nets that support the health of its citizens.

Universal Free Childcare

New Mexico has officially become the first U.S. state to implement universal free childcare, saving families an average of about $12,000 per child annually.

New Mexico is one of the poorest states in the country. They are offering Universal Free Childcare to everyone regardless of income.

🌟 Key Details About New Mexico's Universal Free Childcare Program

Historic First: Starting November 1, 2025, New Mexico guarantees free childcare for all families, regardless of income — the first state in the nation to do so.

Savings for Families: The program is expected to save families around $12,000 per child per year (some estimates put it at $12,800 depending on provider costs).

- Funding Model:

- Paid largely through the Early Childhood Education and Care Fund, which has grown to nearly $10 billion from oil and gas revenues.
- Annual costs are projected at $600 million, covered by fund interest, trust funds, and legislative appropriations.
- Access & Enrollment: Families must still register with the Early Childhood Education and Care Department and secure a spot at a licensed provider. The state reimburses providers directly.
- System Expansion:
- New Mexico plans to add 12,000–14,000 childcare slots and recruit 5,000 educators.
- Providers are incentivized with higher reimbursement rates if they pay staff at least $18/hour (above the $12 state minimum wage).
- A $12.7 million loan fund supports construction and expansion of childcare centers.
- Social Impact: The program aims to improve child well-being, workforce participation, and educational outcomes. Currently, 60% of children ages 3–4 in New Mexico are not enrolled in school, a gap this initiative seeks to close.

Why This Matters

- Economic Relief: Families can redirect thousands of dollars toward housing, healthcare, or savings. One parent noted they'll no longer have to choose between paying for propane or their mortgage.
- Workforce Boost: Parents who previously stayed home due to childcare costs can now rejoin the workforce, strengthening the state's economy.
- National Model: Other states like Connecticut and New York are exploring similar policies, but New Mexico is the first to achieve full universality.

New Mexico's universal childcare program is a game-changing social investment: it relieves families of crushing costs, strengthens the workforce, and sets a precedent for the rest of the country. This isn't just about saving $12,000 a year — it's about proving that universal childcare is possible in America, and that it can reshape both family life and economic opportunity.

The French Working Class Have Perfected Protest Since The Bastille

Whenever I visit Paris the friendly French always ask me where I am staying in Paris. When I tell them the address they all look me in the eye with a homicidal glint. Shaking their heads slowly, they reply, "Okay so you are not staying in Paris, you are staying in Versailles," and smile. I often see the reflection of the guillotine in their eyes. I smile back. Touché'. The French have really long memories.

These are French farmers spraying manure on government offices in protest of high taxes!

Farmers Lives Matter

Am I saying Americans should do this? I am not saying they should not do it. The French farmers do not see any problem with doing it. The logistics when farmers in France protest are insane. But they all ban together to get it done. It is certainly something to think about. The Boston Tea Party did not sit around wondering about the optics of dumping tea into the harbor. But Americans have been neutered to believe that exercising their constitutional rights to assembly and peaceful protest is off the table. Doing this is called direct action. It is the most effective form of protest. I am sure the French farmers are just like raise our taxes we spray your government offices with manure. Voila taxes are lowered again. It is their tax dollars not the politicians money. Sitting online complaining is not as effective as driving your tractor to city hall and spraying it with Lé Manure.

U.S. Protest History 2015-2025

- Americans have been conditioned to believe for the last 10 years that only leftists go on the streets and demand justice unless of course you go on the street to fight against antifascist or to fight for Trump to overthrow the election.
- Other than for these two reasons it is totally unacceptable to go on the streets and riot against what the government is doing against the working and middle class.
- Looking at BLM all they said was instead of killing black people the cops should just arrest them and take them for trial like everyone else.
- The cops and everyone else said no they should not resist arrest. The black people said they do not resist you just shoot them from the back.
- And everyone got mad and said that's racist. And white people said you calling us racist makes us want to be racist.

Guerilla Warfare Against Billionaire Class

Working class with unions...apply within and get ready to rise up against capitalism and demand to be paid fairly for your labor.

The notion that arrogance and underestimation of an opponent contribute to military outcomes is a common observation in military history and strategic analysis, drawing on examples such as the Vietnam War. In such scenarios, a perceived intellectual or genetic superiority can lead to flawed assumptions, insufficient preparation, and an inability to adapt to an opponent's tactics.

Key contributing factors where an underestimation of the opponent was observed in conflicts involving the U.S. in Southeast Asia included:

- Guerrilla Tactics: U.S. forces encountered opponents in Vietnam, Korea, Laos, and Cambodia who effectively utilized guerrilla warfare, tunnel systems, and an intimate knowledge of the local terrain [1]. The reliance on conventional warfare strategies sometimes struggled against these asymmetric tactics.
- Misunderstanding Motivation: The U.S. military leadership sometimes failed to fully grasp the depth of the enemy's resolve, nationalism, and willingness to endure immense casualties for their cause [1].
- Terrain Challenges: The dense jungles and unfamiliar terrain presented significant logistical and tactical challenges that the U.S. military had to adapt to.
- Political Factors: The wars were fought with significant political constraints and shifting public opinion in the U.S., which ultimately impacted the long-term sustainability of the military effort.

The success of a military campaign is determined by a complex interplay of factors, including strategy, logistics, political will, and the human element. The idea that an opponent's arrogance can be a strategic weakness is a recurring theme in military theory.

It's easier to win a war if your opponent arrogantly thinks they are genetically superior and that you're their intellectual inferior. It also helps if they assume you have no weapons and have never been in a war: Like Americans fighting in Vietnam, Korea, Laos, Cambodia; running through the jungle.

“Victorious warriors win first and then go to war, while defeated warriors go to war first and then seek to win.”

Pumpkin Spice Latte? How about a union strike?

Let's take Starbuck Workers United as a TEXTBOOK example of a positive sum protest.

I worked at Starbucks back in the day. It is a lot of hard work. The pay is not that good. The benefits are minimal if non-existent. You rely mainly upon tips. Working class solidarity is a simple union strike. It does not have to be a socialist communist hippie with piercings and tattoos. It is just a worker who wants equal pay and benefits.

IF BARISTAS GO ON STRIKE...

DON'T BUY
STARBUCKS!

Starbucks workers in 40+ cities, November 2025 began a historic ULP strike. Starbucks baristas have done everything right — organized, bargained, and stood together. But the CEO still refused to offer a fair contract or end union busting. If baristas go on ULP strike, the response was: “DON’T BUY STARBUCKS. SEIU NO CONTRACT !!!”

“We’re prepared to escalate with more stores striking if we don’t see substantial progress toward finalizing contracts that address pay, hours/staffing, and the resolution of 100s of ULPs.” - Starbucks Workers United

Thousands of unionized baristas with Starbucks Workers United begun their ULP strike, as they continued to fight for a fair contract.

The company has made tens of billions off the backs of their baristas just in 2025, and now it’s time to pay up. So many baristas rely on SNAP and Medicaid. “Why does a multibillion-dollar company have employees subsidized by the government?” asks Starbucks Workers United national spokesperson Michelle Eisen.

Starbucks baristas launched the largest unfair-labor-practice strike in the company’s history on Thursday, November 13, 2025. More than a thousand workers in over 40 cities picketed outside their stores, protesting Starbucks’ refusal to return to the bargaining table with real proposals. The union says it’s prepared to escalate if the company doesn’t respond.

Being a Starbucks barista every day for minimum wage while housing cost increase and healthcare skyrocketing is stressful. Starbucks earns millions of dollars every day while the wage slave goes home on a bicycle to live in an apartment share with three other people. The employees are subsidized by the government (Socialism) with SNAP and Medicare because Starbucks refuses to pay a living wage or offer healthcare.

November 13, 2025 Starbucks United Workers Strike

SURVEY 2025-2026

How many Americans feel like they have more in common with millionaires than striking Starbuck baristas?

According to responses from the internet mostly everyone feels like a millionaire.

3. Are you more in need of a $200 million dollar ballroom and gold plated gilding in the White House with your hard earned tax dollars?
4. Or are you thinking that maybe your tax dollars would be better spent for farmers, ranchers, healthcare, clean water and air, infrastructure, and other such normal funding which they have brainwashed Americans into believing are socialist or communist views.

How long are you going to let billionaires and millionaires pay minimal amounts of taxes while the working classes and middle class pay large amounts of taxes?

When politicians lecture you that wanting healthcare is socialist so you should just get sick and die like a good American.

- The same politician: “Now look at these swatches for my new ballroom, what do you think eggshell or beige for the floors? Are you listening? What do you mean you are too malnourished to pay attention? I just gave you your daily nutrition pallet that should fill you up for 24-hours. The data centers never complain about food, and yes we gave them all of your drinking water.” This is a symptom of class warfare.
- Once the dust settles on America’s relentless class war which began with Trump’s first presidency. The brainwashed Right will realize they had more in common with the free buses and rent control than the billionaires boys club.

- The brainwashed Liberals will realize that they actually had more in common with the working class Right than either of them realized but were just unable to reach outside of their political bubbles and echo chambers.

A Tale of Two Criminals

Headline from The Great Gatsby Era or Today?

- A tale of two criminals is a good litmus test in removing race from class warfare.
- After 10 years straight of brainwashing by legacy media and social media algorithms separating race from class almost impossible in the USA.

Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for $3B fraud headline juxtaposition with Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing $100 headline that lead to heated discussions online.

This could have been written in 1929 or it could have been written today. The race and political party of these people is totally irrelevant. Yet very few people can discuss this issue in terms of class warfare which is exactly what it is.

Everyone has been conditioned to only see class issues in terms of race, and to turn on each other and completely ignore the elephant in the room.

This is intentional and if you look who benefits from it you can see why. Make both men the same race and that is still called classism. It is called classism with different races but it is harder for people to see.

Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for $3B fraud

The CEO of what had been one of the nation's largest privately held mortgage lenders was sentenced Tuesday to more than three years in prison for his role in a $3 billion scheme that officials called one of the biggest corporate frauds in U.S. history.

The 40-month sentence for Paul R. Allen, 55, of Oakton, Va., is slightly less than the six-year term sought by federal prosecutors.

Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing $100

A homeless man robbed a Louisiana bank and took a $100 bill. After feeling remorseful, he surrendered to police the next day. The judge sentenced him to 15 years in prison.

Class Warfare: The political party and race of neither of these two people is important. One is a CEO and the other person is homeless.

7. Ex-mortgage CEO sentenced to prison for \$3B fraud gets 40-month sentence. Homeless man gets 15 years for stealing \$100. Social media (Thiel) was designed to completely polarize the masses so that instead of people uniting and fighting CEO's who only get a 40-month sentence for fraud. The internet will efficiently facilitate both sides fighting incessantly about the race of each person and focus only on that.

8. Others will try to interject about the wealth disparity but eventually it will circle back to race and the lesson about class will be lost. And this methodology works—every single time without fail. Instead of being angry at the wealth distribution and inequality. People actually believe that they have more in common with a millionaire than a homeless person. Or that if they were in this situation they would be treated like a millionaire and not like the homeless person.

10. The Right will wake up and realize they probably went to more parties with women who looked like Mamdani's wife (pictured above) than Melania Trump who is far out of their pay grade and class system.
11. Timed perfectly for the NY Mayoral elections, Mar-A-Lago threw a The Great Gatsby themed party that none of the sheeple Right were invited to because classism is a form of white-on-white racism obfuscated because the upper class continuously distract the lower classes with racism against other races who take the bait like rabid dogs.
12. This concept is a recurring theme which F. Scott Fitzgerald would have told them was a lesson in his "Roaring 20's" books that they idolize and often got him called racist. He said he wasn't racist just a realist who wrote what he saw in the era that he lived which he said was his job as an author.

Which promotes white supremacist ideas. The novel also depicts the narrator Nick Carraway's own racist and prejudiced assumptions, such as making derogatory comments about the appearance of Jewish and Black individuals.

F. Scott Fitzgerald was adamant that he was not racist and insisted he was trying to write about classism in America. He wrote about how the black jazz musicians could play in the club but not eat or stay in the club. He wrote about how the rich Jewish couples could embed themselves in the white community but still not join the WASP Country Club and would be called racial slurs behind their back while others did business with them.

Fitzgerald said what he really wanted to resonate was how all of the working class white people who were serving the upper class white people were actually invisible to them. In England, and throughout Europe, servants are expected to be invisible as they work for the upper classes. In The Great Gatsby, a scene features a car with a white chauffeur and three wealthy, stylish black passengers.

The Great Gatsby

Nick Carraway observes: “a limousine passed us, driven by a white chauffeur, in which sat three modish Negroes, two bucks and a girl. I laughed aloud as the yolks of their eyeballs rolled toward us in haughty rivalry."

Say what you will about the noted commentary of racism and antisemitism inherent in Fitzgerald's characters, this passage is making a very particular assertion. Regardless of the character that Fitzgerald has given Nick in his reaction to the African-Americans he observes, Fitzgerald has represented them as people exhibiting arrogance and superiority, glancing over in competition, in rivalry. The rich have created a Hunger Games style arena since the beginning of time, and hunt the working class for sport.

Competition is the crux of The Great Gatsby's narrative, the rivalry in aspiration of the working classes to establish themselves within the bourgeoisie, as well as the rivalry of the wealthy to maintain their dominance amidst social mobility and opportunism. The implicit position of these chauffeured African-Americans is a foreshadow of Gatsby's own efforts to manufacture and maintain his nobility, composure and valor, depicted in his 'going to Oxford' and his travels as a renaissance man. It all plays to the offense and hegemony within a strata that has already hidden its workings in generations past and is always making note of those who 'don't belong.'

This detail is significant because it represents a power inversion which depicts a role reversal of sorts, with black passengers being driven by a white chauffeur, this would have been an unusual sight given the racial hierarchy of the 1920s and highlights the racial tensions of the era, with the white characters like working class Tom Buchanan reacting with hostility and making racist remarks as he sees it as the "decline of the white race".

Social Hierarchy

The scene represents the changing social order but also shows how racial anxieties and stereotypes were present even in the wealthy circles of the time. The image of a white chauffeur driving black passengers was used by Fitzgerald to portray not only racial anxieties but the shifting social landscape.

You also have the scene with the “a pale well dressed Negro” when Myrtle is hit by Gatsby’s speeding car, driven we later find out by Daisy. The scene is to signify a well-off professional such as a doctor or a lawyer trained at a colored college. Since a black mans testimony would not normally fly.

This man of another class system is to be identified as someone of higher rank than an average colored person who witnessed the accident. Many have called this casual racism, but against whom? The lower class white man who also witnessed the accident? Or the college educated black man? Fitzgerald leaves this up to the audience to decide.

The working class white men who are in The Great Gatsby, as much as other races, thought they belonged in the clubhouse because of their skin color. But the rich knew the working and middle class whites didn’t belong with the upper class whites either and they never would because of the hierarchy dominant in the socioeconomic class system specific to market-based capitalism. It may sound repetitive but what seems like a race war is merely a class war manufactured by billionaires.

In The Great Gatsby, the servants at Gatsby’s mansion are largely voiceless, existing to facilitate his lifestyle and parties. Gatsby fires his original servants to prevent gossip about his affair with Daisy and replaces them with associates of Meyer Wolfsheim. This is done so that Gatsby can have the married Daisy visit his home during the day without fear of the staff spreading rumors.

AI Automates Working Class?

With British shows like Downton Abbey, and Upstairs Downstairs and others, the servants have a varied social life and the focus of the show is often on them. Americans offer no such charm.

Some say this is because of slavery but there are tons of movies and shows about slavery. There are no shows about white people like Downton Abbey where they are portrayed as servants in the United States and there is a reason for that. There are no American shows where the underclasses are shown in an appealing light. A show about garbage men, postal workers, plumbers, mechanics, refrigerator repairman.

This is also the reason the rich are rushing to automate those jobs using AI as quickly as possible. This will of course backfire since one AWS outage and you will pay an actual human to fix your Smart Toilet any amount of money. Blue collar shows in the United States are often given more awards when they are appreciated mainly for this reason. Taxi being just one example. A show about Taxi Drivers or any working class occupation or even a regular man who starts making meth like White will get more awards because it has a working class background. This is considered more relatable to the masses.

A math professor noticed his kitchen sink at home was leaking.

He called a plumber.

The plumber came the next day, tightened a couple of nuts, and the sink worked perfectly again. The professor was delighted. But when, a minute later, the plumber handed him the bill, he was shocked.

“This is a third of my monthly salary!”

“Yeah, I get it...” said the plumber. “Why don’t you come work for our company as a plumber? You’ll make three times more than you do as a professor. Just remember: when you apply, say you only finished seventh grade. They don’t like hiring educated people.”

So the professor got a job as a plumber, and his life really did improve. All he had to do was tighten a nut here and there every so often, and his salary was much higher.

One day, the management of the plumbing company decided that every plumber had to attend evening classes to finish eighth grade. So our professor had to go too.

By chance, the very first class was math.

The evening school teacher, wanting to check what the students knew, asked for the formula for the area of a circle.

They called the professor up to the board, and he suddenly realized he’d forgotten it. He started frantically reasoning it out, covering the board with integrals, differentials, and all sorts of fancy formulas to re-derive the result. In the end, he got:

$$S = -\pi r^2$$

He didn’t like the minus sign, so he started again.

Again he got a minus. No matter what he did, it kept coming out negative.

He cast a panicked look at the class, and all the plumbers were whispering:

“Swap the limits of integration!”

CARICATURE

Suluhu: The lady who contested against and beat her own shadow

There is a saying that "What a man can do, a woman can do better." Tanzania's President Samia Suluhu Hassan seems to have taken that quite literally, including the bits best left undone.

When she rose to power in March 2021 after the sudden death of John Pombe Magufuli, Tanzania and the rest of the world celebrated. Here was a woman soft-spoken, motherly, modestly dressed, with her scarf neatly tied, stepping into one of the region's toughest political seats. She was hailed as a symbol of hope, the woman who would soften the sharp edges of Tanzanian politics.

The assumption was simple: a woman's touch would bring compassion, reconciliation, and democracy.

Then came the plot twist.

What Tanzanians got, instead, was a continuity project. Samia Suluhu did not just inherit Magufuli's presidential seat, she seemed to have inherited his entire manual on repression, only with better PR and softer tone.

Her early days promised reform through her famous "Four Rs", Reconciliation, Resilience, Reform, and Rebuilding. Today, critics joke that she has added a fifth: Repression.

Opposition leader Tundu Lissu, who miraculously survived an assassination attempt during Magufuli's reign, has faced constant persecution under Suluhu. Court cases, arrests, and threats have become part of his political routine. Under Samia, dissent is not just discouraged, it is criminalised.

Tanzania plunged into chaos this week following Wednesday's general election, where President Samia was declared the winner with a jaw-dropping 98 per cent of the vote, a figure so generous it could make even Uganda's Yoweri

During the ceremony, the INEC Chairman reminded citizens that, under Tanzania's Constitution, a winner simply needs more votes than the rest no matter how suspiciously high the margin. He also noted that once INEC declares a result, it is final: no court, no tribunal, no appeal.

Would you like me to extend this section to flow directly into the next part about the protests and rising death toll? It would make the tone transition seamless from sarcasm to serious reportage.

Hundreds of people have been killed in protests that have rocked the nation for three straight days. Opposition leaders claim the government rigged the election and disqualified key candidates, one imprisoned and another conveniently barred on technical grounds, leaving voters with little choice but to endorse Samia's ruling Chama Cha Mapinduzi (CCM) party.

As the streets of Dar es Salaam filled with tear gas and bodies, President Suluhu was reportedly on the phone, not with Tanzanians pleading for peace, but with her fellow "strongmen" in the region.

According to some reports, Suluhu called two of her colleagues from neighbouring states to advise how to "manage" protestors. If true, it is an ironic circle: three leaders whose countries have each been accused of democratic backsliding comparing notes while their citizens cry for justice.

Uganda's Yoweri Museveni, Kenya's William Ruto, and Suluhu form what many East Africans now call the "Coalition of the Unbothered." Each has perfected the SLAMABAD: Commerce Minister Jammal has directed all relevant stakeholders to coordinate with the governments of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Balochistan to achieve a 200 million target in meat exports to Malaysia. The directive, issued during the third meeting to formalise Pakistan's meat exports to the Malaysian market, attended by Food Security Minister Tanvir Hussain and SAPM Haroon Akhtar Khan.

An official statement issued by the minister emphasised strengthening the meat export sector and ensuring competitive pricing. He also instructed the formation of a working group to submit a final report within a week, with input from provincial governments and private-sector participants.

The committee viewed strategies for beef and cow meat exports, focusing on supply-chain logistics, cost competitiveness, and quality standards. Discussions covered CNF & Freight pricing, comparative analysis of Indian exports, and measures to maintain the edge while competing with Malaysian marshes highlighted the importance of select breeds aged 14-18 months to address challenges such as price fluctuations and operational improvements in farms and processing units.

Auto sales rev up in October

Car, van, pickup and SUV sales surge 32pc year-on-year

By Aamir Shafaat Khan

KARACHI: Pakistan's automotive market showed strong growth in October, with sales of cars, vans, pickups and sport utility vehicles (SUVs) rising to 17,333 units, marking a 32 per cent year-on-year (YoY) increase and a modest 1pc month-on-month (MoM) rise.

According to Myesha Sohail of Topline Securities, the YoY growth reflects a stabilising macroeconomic environment, introduction of new variants, lower interest rates, easing inflation, and improving consumer sentiment.

MoM sales remained largely unchanged, mainly due to an 18pc decline in Pakistan Suzuki Motor Company (PSMC) volumes amid a company-wide reset. The discontinuation of models such as Ravi, Bolan, Every VX, and Wagon R led to MoM declines of 17pc, 84pc, and 28pc in Swift, Ravi, and Every, respectively. Bolan, meanwhile, has seen no sales since May 2025.

Cumulative sales in the first four months of FY26 rose 46pc to 59,600 units, compared to 40,693 units in the same period last year.

Indus Motor Company (IMC) posted the highest MoM growth, with sales climbing 44pc to 4,529 units. Corolla, Yaris, and Cross models collectively rose 41pc MoM and 78pc YoY to 3,742 units, while Fortuner and IMVs jumped 58pc MoM and 83pc YoY to 787 units. IMC's four-month sales stood at 14,418 units, up 66pc YoY.

Hyundai Nishat reported the highest YoY growth among automakers, rising 82pc to 1,086 units in October, led by robust demand for Tucson and Elantra models. MoM sales, however, fell eight per cent. Total sales in July-October FY26 reached 4,698 units, up 81 per cent YoY.

Honda Atlas Cars Limited (HACL) recorded a 72pc YoY and 13pc MoM increase in October, with City and Civic models driving growth to 2,247 units. In 4MFY26, HACL sales surged 54 per cent to 7,487 units.

PSMC saw its October sales drop 18pc MoM to 7,403 units, primarily due to declines in Swift, Ravi, and Every. YoY sales increased slightly by 1pc. In 4MFY26, total Pak Suzuki sales rose 33pc YoY to 27,234 units.

Two- and three-wheeler sales surge

Sales of two- and three-wheelers increased 20pc YoY and 4pc MoM, reaching 165,500 units in October, nearing a four-year high. In 4MFY26, total sales climbed 30pc YoY to 597,000 units. Atlas Honda Limited (AHL) set a new record, selling 140,178 CD70 motorcycles in October, surpassing its September 2025 record.

Tractor sales jumped 67pc YoY and 26pc MoM to 2,886 units in October, boosted by the Punjab Green Tractor Scheme. However, 4MFY26 sales fell 15pc to 5,867 units.

Truck and bus sales surged 118pc YoY in October, though they dipped seven per cent MoM to 766 units. In the first four months of FY26, sales had risen 106pc to 2,630 units.

Outlook for FY26

Myesha Sohail expects the positive momentum in Pakistan's auto sector to continue in FY26, driven by lower interest rates and the launch of new models across conventional, hybrid, and plug-in hybrid engines.

Global liquidity masks Pakistan's fragility: Robert

Strategist warns gains may fade as global conditions tighten

By Fatima S. Attarwala

KARACHI: Pakistan can achieve a growth rate of 3.5 to 4 per cent if inflation remains under control and the central bank continues to ease interest rates, though the State Bank of Pakistan may have reached the end of its rate-cutting cycle, said Eric Robertsen, Global Head of Research and Chief Strategist at Standard Chartered, at a media roundtable on Tuesday.

Acknowledging that Pakistan's macroeconomic indicators have improved with single-digit inflation and a rebuilding of foreign exchange reserves, Mr Robertsen noted that the country has been rewarded with credit rating upgrades. However, he warned that much of this progress has been driven by external factors.

"There has been excess liquidity in global markets, with central banks worldwide implementing more than 300 interest rate cuts over the past two years," he said. "As a result, all major asset classes — equities, fixed income, credit, and even Bitcoin — have rallied, with oil being the exception." This global environment, he added, is favourable but if global conditions tighten, the underlying vulnerability could resurface.

Commenting on the shifting global order, Mr Robertsen said that the trade of emerging nations exporting goods to developed markets (DM) is a decade ago, and the trade account cent of global trade that share has nearly 50pc.

"Take China as an example," he said. Chinese exports have been falling by 30pc over the past 12 months, export figures remained stable year. Beijing has declined by 1pc in trade with other countries, highlighting the United States and are no longer engines of global growth.

Even so, he emphasised that the dollar's still reigns supreme in global markets, missing talk of de-dollarisation. "There is some diversification from the dollar," he explained, "but total abandonment is a generation. What's happened is that the central bank has expanded. So the dollar's share has declined in percentage terms, but the absolute value of dollars they have actually increased."

KARACHI: State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) Governor Mehmood Ahmed on Tuesday urged regional cooperation to tackle today's economic and financial challenges, saying no country can address them in isolation. He highlighted regional capital market integration as a key driver of sustainable growth and financial stability.

Mr Ahmed delivered the keynote address at the 10th Annual International Capital Market Conference hosted by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP), which brought together policymakers, regulators, and market participants from across the region. "In an increasingly interconnected world, regional market integration is not an option; it is a necessity," he said.

Two articles in major newspapers that were published with ChatGPT prompt engineering included.

How much of the news that you are reading has been written entirely by AI? Are you okay with that? I guess some people are fine with AI writing their news. AI can think for them, analyze information. AI is perhaps superior to humans in this perspective. Maybe AI is doing a better job at writing the news than the former human reporters who infused the news with bias and slanted it with their own perception.

AI is capable of creating the news that is expected of it. Critical thinking is always an expectation when reading the news. We can always do manual research on our own without always asking Grok if something is inaccurate. Others prefer that the news be written by an actual human being. Even if you use AI to aggregate the facts in the news leaving the prompt engineer tags in the actual article is lazy. Having an editor who also leaves the prompt engineer tags in the article is also lazy.

Gig Culture

We have gig culture now and influencers living from subs who are not just the working class but sometimes the working poor.

Social media has managed to convince the gig economy workers that they are not the working class. Perhaps the income that they generate is in the middle class ranges. Having no safety net such as health insurance, paid time off, and a pension upon retirement would make them independent contractors. There was a huge battle with Uber over this issue. There are no taxi drivers of lore just Uber and Lyft drivers, DoorDashers who deliver food to people who make more money in one day than the driver can sometimes earn in a week.

Instacart drivers who bring food they cannot eat to homes they will never afford to live in. Amazon drivers pee in plastic bottles strapped to their legs to deliver nonsensical items to people who sit and write hit pieces on why these drivers do not deserve lunch breaks, health care or PTO. Why are the masses now identifying with the rich? Instagram and TikTok has opened a window to wealth they cannot possess only emulate.

They are parasocially living the life of a rich person even in the most abject squalor. It is a psychiatric phenomenon which will be studied for centuries to come. Like Pavlov's dog the algorithm has set up a bell that hooks them on a specific race related topic using memetic warfare.

Psychometrics were used by companies like Cambridge Analytica who used the data for political profiling but it goes way deeper than that. Facebook was sued because it failed to protect user data, which was accessed by third parties like the Cambridge Analytica firm and used for political profiling without users' consent. The lawsuits, including a class-action lawsuit that resulted in a settlement, accused Facebook of allowing Cambridge Analytica and other developers to access the data of up to 87 million users, and for not adequately monitoring or controlling that access.

In 2013, Cambridge Analytica, its then-CEO Alexander Nix, and others developed an interest in research suggesting that a person's "likes" of public Facebook pages could be used to predict a host of personality traits – for example, whether someone was an extrovert or introvert. They agreed to work with Aleksandr Kogan, a lecturer at Cambridge University's Psychology Department, who had experience with Facebook-related research. The goal of the Cambridge Analytica-Nix-Kogan collaboration was to use Facebook information to offer voter profiling, microtargeting, and other services to U.S. campaigns and clients.

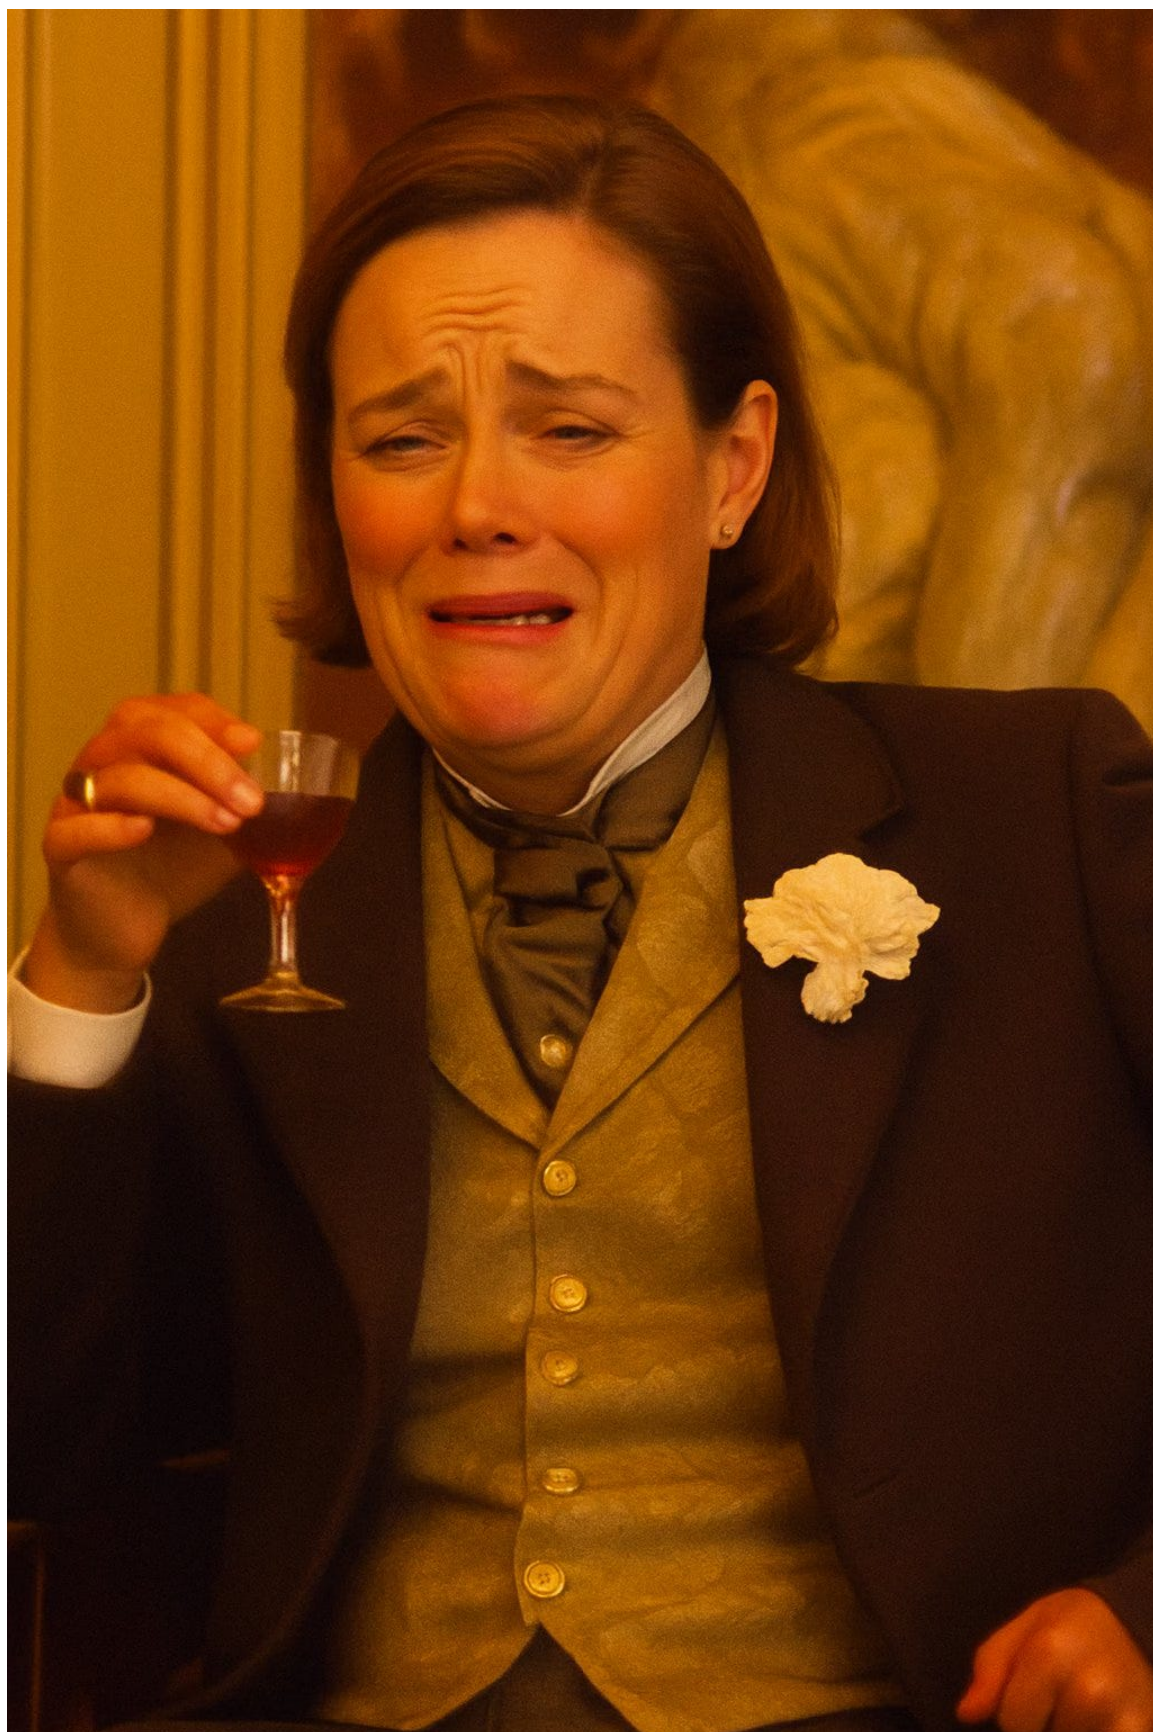

Kogan brought an interesting tool to the table: a Facebook application called the GSRAApp – sometimes known as the "thisisyourdigitallife" app – that was already registered on Facebook. According to the complaints, the respondents used that app to ask users to take a personality survey. They also used it to take advantage of a Facebook developer tool called Graph API (v.1) that allowed them to collect personal information about app users and personal information about those app users' Facebook "friends" – people who had no interaction whatsoever with the GSRAApp.

Facebook had announced in April 2014 that it would no longer allow developers to collect profile data from app users' friends. But Facebook grandfathered existing apps to allow them to continue the surreptitious data collection for an additional year. (That decision is discussed in more detail in the FTC's settlement with Facebook also announced today.) That made Kogan's GSRAApp much more attractive to Cambridge Analytica and CEO Nix. Ultimately, according to the complaints, Kogan, Nix, and Cambridge Analytica used the harvested data to generate personality scores for app users and their friends, match those scores with U.S. voter records, and then use the information for its voter profiling and targeted advertising services.

This was not a bug it was a feature and it was used for presidential elections for Obama, Trump, Biden, Trump, and the next election. The elections are not free or fair or democratic. The elections are Hunger Game style manipulation exercises played out for mind controlled masses. You have been so thoroughly brainwashed by social media you cannot remember a time when you had an independent thought using critical thinking. Every thought you have is a product of group think and mind control. Socials have convinced the working and middle class to side with the rich and forget that they are working class and middle class and negatively affected by the legislation and it continues in a loop.

Hemp isn't controversial because it's dangerous. The Founders were Hemp Farmers.

It's controversial because it's useful, cheap, and hard to monopolize.

Congress just turned a shutdown bill into a hemp ban. If passed, it would wipe out 95% of the $28B U.S. hemp industry and 300K jobs.

1. Hemp is a threat to established industries

Hemp is one of the most versatile crops on Earth — it can replace or reduce dependency on:

- Cotton (textiles) — less water, fewer pesticides, higher yield per acre.
- Paper / Timber — faster growth than trees, fewer chemicals in processing.
- Plastics — biodegradable hemp composites and biopolymers.
- Fossil fuels — can produce biofuel.
- Pharmaceuticals — CBD and hemp extracts cut into profit margins of synthetic drug producers.

When you connect those dots, hemp directly competes with big cotton, oil, lumber, chemical, and pharmaceutical industries — all of which have deep lobbying power in Washington.

2. Historical propaganda & lobbying

The original ban wasn't about drugs — it was about money and influence.

- In the 1930s, newspaper mogul William Randolph Hearst (major timber/paper investor) and DuPont (developing nylon) lobbied hard to outlaw hemp.
- They helped push the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937, using racist and fear-based propaganda that blurred industrial hemp with psychoactive cannabis.
- The U.S. government then lumped hemp into the Controlled Substances Act of 1970, despite it having no psychoactive properties.

That narrative stuck for decades.

3. Modern pushback: “Reefer madness” for profit

Even after hemp's legalization in the 2018 Farm Bill, many states still restrict its cultivation or processing due to:

- Pressure from established agricultural sectors (cotton, soy, timber).
- Pharma lobbying against CBD supplements and natural therapeutics.
- Law enforcement unions resistant to distinguishing hemp from marijuana (because cannabis enforcement budgets = big money).

Basically: hemp represents disruption — and industries don't like change that doesn't benefit them.

4. Fear of decentralization

Politicians also fear hemp's decentralizing potential — anyone can grow it, refine it, and make products locally:

- Less reliance on large supply chains.
- Fewer imports.
- More small-scale, rural, and sustainable businesses.

That kind of distributed economic power doesn't align with the interests of major donors or lobbyists who benefit from centralized, high-profit systems.

In short

Hemp isn't controversial because it's dangerous.
It's controversial because it's useful, cheap, and hard to monopolize.

Senator Rand P...   · 21h  ...

The hemp provision in this appropriations package wipes out nearly 100% of legal hemp products overnight: killing jobs, crushing farmers, and overriding 23 state laws that already regulate hemp responsibly.

Our farmers have turned to hemp as a lifeline when fertilizer, fuel, and equipment costs skyrocketed and crop prices fell. Instead of working with us to crack down on bad actors and synthetic cannabinoids, some in Congress chose prohibition.

Kentucky jobs are not collateral. Our farmers are not bargaining chips.

Meanwhile Back At The MAGA (Indoctrination) Ranch

The upper classes will use a race war to hide class warfare and neither of the races can tell the difference which works to the advantage of the rich. Should the disgruntled become racist as a result and build systems such as National Socialism or white nationalism predicated upon race & hatred of jews and blacks? Sure why not, they always have and they probably always will. Besides most of them are married to and/or dating asian women or have an asian woman/anime fetish despite their adamant cries that white woman procreate and make the white race strong. I have seen an unusual phenomenon in the last ten years where some white nationalist live dual lives and have a liberal forward face and a secret dark web identity. What an unusual turn of events the internet has created.

One of the reasons I did not want Kiwi Farms hacked and torn down is because it would be like turning raw contaminated sewage into the fresh water supply of the internet. I wanted them to have their infected sick place to live and be unwell not come mingle with the healthy. What many people did not realize about 4Chan and Kiwi Farms is that many of those accounts have normal lives some in positions of power in tech and crypto industry.

They complain about the Aryan race waning in numbers while they themselves cuddle a waifu pillow or their Asian girlfriends. It is all performative displays of monetizing the race wars, and I am sure it pays well. The Black Panthers did it and they all married white women or were married to white women at the time. They abused and treated black women like dirt, and to this day the self-hating black man is a vision of pity and disgust by both black woman and white men equally.

In the novel The Godfather there is a passage about how “blacks are animals that the men prostitute their own women.” This line is criticized as gratuitous racism. It is an accurate description of the racist Italian of that time in New York.

The Godfather

The Godfather was self-published and literature needs to be authentic, authors cannot water down the human experience. We know throughout history that white men also prostitute white woman. The author was describing a conversation between two Italian men explaining why they do not do business with black men.

Genetics-Obsessed Internet Racists Don't Understand Particulate Inheritance

- 10th-grade Biology eludes the Übermensch

They did a recent survey which showed that only 0.4% of white men have relationships with black women. This survey must have been for the United States only. Anyone who lives or travels to Paris, Germany, London knows that the interracial couples of white man and black woman is just as high as black man and white woman. This is not reflected in American media who is only shown the white woman with black men. It is shown in overkill, perhaps, but it was never shown before and advertisers seemed to think multiracial people and mixed raced couples are the target demographic and companies are constantly trying to sell products to this couple and/or their extended family and friends. I did notice that some of these commercials come from Europe and have been dubbed. The interracial population abroad consist of black male/white female and black female/white males and are a subsection of European society that consist of a target marketing demographic. Capitalism being what it is, the algorithm has to sell shoes to their kids.

What I waited to hear from the black female white male relationship discourse was the largest era when this coupling occurred which of course what have been American slavery. Since it was a strictly American topic circulating among the race obsessed it was interesting to see them use the unverified survey as a reinforcement that black women are unattractive and not as the foundation for the discussion of when black women were considered sexually favorable by white men during slavery there was a huge population increase in the United States.

The hatred of black men and women by Americans (and by extension other races wishing to be seen favorably by racist) is a genetic feature of caucasian Americans from slavery. The story of Sally Hemings and Thomas Jefferson — Sally Hemings was born in 1773 in Virginia, a slave on the Monticello plantation of President Thomas Jefferson. Sally was a nursemaid to his daughter Mary and traveled with the family to Paris. DNA testing has concluded that Heming's children were fathered by Thomas Jefferson. You're quoting Jefferson's denial that he'd raped and impregnated a girl he kept as property. Which he did, in fact, do.

Ivanka Trump on X quoting Thomas Jefferson

Because she was a slave and underage, any attempt at glamorizing their relationship has been historically rejected. She was his slave and he raped her, she lived in hiding in squalor in a room on the plantation. She was impregnated and gave birth to his children. Ironically enough, this is one relationship that eugenics do try to romanticize and call a mutual attraction. African Slavery was not a mutual attraction. Sally's mother was Betty, an enslaved person of African and European descent. Her father was the mother's owner, John Wayles, a white lawyer and enslaved person trader of English descent who had emigrated to Virginia. Wayles was also the father of Martha Wayles Jefferson, Thomas Jefferson's wife, Hemings and Martha Jefferson were half-sisters.

Tiffany Pollard in Flavor of Love (2017)

The quote, “You should have just sat there and ate your food,” is a famous line from Tiffany “New York” Pollard, often used as a meme or a viral GIF. She said this in the 2017 reality television show Flavor of Love. The phrase is a popular and humorous catchphrase used in various internet contexts to dismiss someone’s unnecessary involvement in a situation. Pollard, upset about a situation, says this to another contestant who she felt was getting involved in drama for no good reason.

Whoever wanted to open up the discussion on the attractiveness of black females to white males really did not take American History in school or just went to a school that did not teach it very well. When having a discussion on the African-Americans woman sexual attractiveness to a white American male let’s not exclude slavery time. The type of black women that white men in the United States find sexually attractive may not be the ones they openly discuss but it does not mean that they do not find black women attractive or believe that everyone finds black women unattractive.

There seems to be a Jeffersonian reflex at play that dates back to the 1600’s when all of these black women were not even pure black they were mixed race black women. Despite all of the drawing showing purely African phenotypes. None of these women were purely African. Sally was only 1/3rd black, her mom only 1/2 black, not sure how that pans out mathematically in quantum blood but most of these women had more white blood than black blood. The incest factor is an entirely different issue and seems to have been common even in non-slave relationships, though half-sisters is cutting it really close.

The particulate inheritance question would be posed when viewing the women as black or as white. This may also explain the compulsion of white women to get a black boyfriend, a spray on tan, lip fillers, cheek fillers, Brazilian butt lifts, and of course have the obligatory mixed baby. No one hates black women in so much as they all would still like to sleep with (mixed) black women and have babies and also look as much like black women as possible while dating black men. Yes, they are very confused and in deep stages of denial with themselves and with the world. This may not be their fault and have its roots in slavery and date back to the 1600's possibly even earlier when the slave trade began in the Americas.

Malcolm X's famously said, "We didn't land on Plymouth Rock, my brothers and sisters—Plymouth Rock landed on us"

Malcolm X that recontextualizes the American origin story from the perspective of African Americans. It highlights that for white Americans, the Pilgrims arriving at Plymouth Rock symbolizes freedom and a new beginning, while for the ancestors of African Americans, it symbolizes the violent and involuntary arrival of slavery and oppression.

The quote reframes the narrative to show that African people were brought to America against their will, rather than arriving as willing settlers seeking opportunity.

When Prince Harry announced his engagement to actress Meghan Markle, the world rejoiced—and immediately began to analyze what it will mean for a biracial woman to take a prominent place as a British royal.

Duchess of Sussex, Meghan Markle

Markle, whose mother is African-American and whose father is white, was celebrated by some as Britain's first "black princess," a milestone for a royal family that had presided over centuries of slavery and colonialism. The self-hatred that black men have for themselves can also be indirectly related to this phenomenon but should be covered under a separate title. Right now let's focus on black female white male dynamics in English speaking countries.

Duke and Duchess of Sussex

When we hear white Americans and (black males) saying that black women are considered universally unattractive. We know this to be untrue and says more about the person saying it than the people that racist are saying it about. I think it is safe to say that Meghan Markle is universally attractive.

Duke and Duchess of Sussex Wedding (2018)

The world was asked to choose between Kate and Meghan. Kate is pure blood white and you were told to choose between. They both could not be attractive and your choice was a signal of your politics. This has been going on since 2010 with Kate's introduction to the royal scene.

Beyonce and Taylor

The same with Beyonce and Taylor, pick one you can't like both of them. This has had enormous strain on culture and the culture of women.

The political signals of not being able to show anything but hatred towards women of African descent but to emulate everything about their appearance, mannerisms and specifically Online Speech.

Asian Blaccents

“Black English” is a term that most commonly refers to African American Vernacular English (AAVE), a dialect of English spoken by many Black Americans that has its own unique grammar and pronunciation rules. It is distinct from standard English, but it is not a “slang” or inferior version; rather, it is a linguistic system that has evolved over centuries, with some features originating from older forms of English, notes The Conversation and EBSCO.

While AAVE has specific rules, it is often stigmatized if used by black people, leading to negative outcomes for speakers in school and the workplace.] All while simultaneously holding on to the persons own racial identification but physically with black affectations (blaccent, spray on tan, Brazilian butt lifts, cheek fillers, lip fillers, hair weaves) and calling it “internet slang” used when they are online but not in person. The slang is not stigmatized if used by white people.

White People Calling Themselves N Word

White Americans also insisted on calling themselves the N word and fought black people and other white people with the argument that, “black people call other black people the N word so why can’t white people call other white people and black people the N word?” — can’t really argue with logic like that. The white adjacent people (minorities who for some reason must do everything racist white Americans do in order to seem relevant or cool in white racist eyes)

The Groyper were the first white nationalist group to embrace rap in their Rumble casts, and Kanye West travelled with their leader Nick Fuentes. Currently we see Fuentes positioning himself to take Charlie Kirk’s position as the leader of the MAGA white supremacist flanks.

Groyper leader Nick Fuentes rally at Insurrection he helped organize.

President Trump with Kanye “Ye” West self-proclaimed black Nazi rapper in Oval Office with his son-in-law.

This all may very well be a deeply rooted form of code switching for white Americans who show an enormous confusion between the line of American culture, white culture, and black American culture. Or is it all the same culture?

“Nick, would you support a literacy test for more informed voting? If we did that, every election would be a Democrat landslide.”

The residents of Buckingham Palace may not be as white as is commonly assumed. Indeed, Markle may not actually be the first black member of the British monarchy.

Charlotte of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who married Britain's George III in 1761, was also black, claims historian Mario Valdes. He says Charlotte was related to Margarita de Castro y Sousa, a black member of the Portuguese royal family.

Black guys who only date white chicks

Media in all of its forms control the English speaking minds of Americans and also the British and to a lesser extent Canadians and Australians. This mind control has an indirect effect on other countries who look towards America to decipher media culture. This has led to a national identity crisis where many people are looking to be black or black adjacent or white or white adjacent or asian or asian adjacent instead of being the race they were assigned at birth: Social media has created what I have coined a transracial society where people act out a race online that is not their birth race. In a separate category: The self-hatred that black males have for themselves has been a saddening byproduct of the racism in America. Whether this is the reason for interracial marriages I would doubt that. I think that they wish to escape the confines of racism in every form. Having self-love and confidence is reinforced at home and in the community. If either of these factors is lacking this can lead to self-hate.

Why Are Minorities Cosplaying as Nazis?

I saw something disturbing on X before the election. A dark-skinned Zoomer Filipina dressed in full Nazi outfit, she had several of them. She said that she collected them and the one she was wearing was her latest. In her mentions were several actual white Nazis calling her slurs and demanding she take off the Nazi outfit. There were also Filipinos begging her to get mental treatment, other Filipinos were dismayed with her. There were no black people in her mentions. This is also kind of related to the topic above.

There were some Filipinos who seemed to be her mutuals who told her she looked great and asked if she was okay. She said yes, but that ne-groids were of course giving her a hard time. You could plainly see this was not the case, but in this common mode of cognitive dissonance that is what she had told herself. It is consistently reported that many of the white nationalist accounts are run by Indian males.

Actually many of the accounts for any culture obsessed phenomenon are later to be discovered to generate back to India. As bot farms or just in terms of manipulating the masses maybe India is displacing Russia for spreading disinformation and misinformation campaigns in the United States and Europe.

It has been observed quite often with the MAGA white supremacist set who believe that black people hate them or find offense by them. In my research I am fully confident that black people are not aware of their existence and that only white liberals and white leftists know they exist and find offense and get them banned from sites.

Black people live in their own bubble and it is rare that those two bubbles mesh on social media sites. What does happen is that the class systems of the two races are mixed but not in the MAGA white supremacist set unfortunately but in the liberal and leftist set. The class warfare that needs to happen for the Republican soldiers for lack of a better word has been crushed by propaganda.

Middle Class vs Working Class

When we analyze The Great Gatsby or The Grapes of Wrath, both Great Depression era novels, we are looking at blue collar vs white collar and also the middle class vs the upper classes. Does looking for a monarchy and a king in present times with allegiance towards a man such as Trump who seems to do the bidding of anyone including the races his soldiers despise but who pays him cash work out well for the working class?

Has it worked out for the last 10 years? That all depends, has any of his policies benefited the rich then the answer is probably yes. If you are seeking to benefit your entire race which one would assume is the point of being a nazi then the answer is no. I think this is what all of the race baiting misses entirely which I think would disappoint both F. Scott Fitzgerald and John Steinbeck.

The Great Gatsby

MAGA pushes the archetype of the dangerous criminal negroes who may be genetically intellectually inferior, as the modern National Socialist eugenicist and Effective Altruist will constantly publish documents out of Cambridge to convince you.

H-1B Visas For Skilled Workers

But their hero and god, Elon Musk also said that white Americans are not per se intellectually inferior to Indians who come on H-1B visas, but perhaps lacking in education, or maybe its a skills issue. Here it is in his own words:

Elon Musk sparked fierce online debate recently when the billionaire said on social media that the U.S. lacks enough top engineers, pointing to immigration as the solution to what he characterized as a dearth of technical expertise.

“There is a dire shortage of extremely talented and motivated engineers in America,” Musk posted on his social media platform, X, comparing tech companies to a pro sports team scouting players. “If you force the world’s best talent to play for the other side, America will LOSE.”

The claims are at the center of a divide between supporters of President-elect Donald Trump, who tend to take a hard line against immigration, and technology entrepreneurs like Musk, who along with X runs exploration company SpaceX and electric vehicle maker Tesla, both of which employ many foreign workers hired with H-1B visas.

Yet labor market data suggests that American tech workers aren’t in short supply, and critics of the H-1B program say it displaces Americans in favor of foreign-born employees hired at lower salaries. Proponents of recruiting skilled workers from abroad say tech jobs aren’t zero-sum, while hiring foreigners with specialized skills can spur innovation and ultimately create more jobs for U.S.-born workers.

Data from the National Center for Education Statistics shows that the number of bachelor’s, master’s and doctoral degrees in computer science and in engineering conferred in the U.S. reached their highest levels in the 2020-21 and 2021-22 academic years since 1970-71.

Meanwhile, tech and engineering jobs in the U.S. are expected to grow by 7% by 2033, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The share of the science and engineering workforce that is foreign-born has grown over the past three decades, according to the National Science Foundation, while STEM workers have experienced some of the highest employment rates of any occupation over the past five years.

Companies with the most H-1B workers

Tech companies are some of the biggest beneficiaries of the H-1B program, which is intended to allow highly skilled foreigners to work in the U.S. Amazon received the most H1-B visas of any company in 2024, Department of Labor data shows. Microsoft, Google and Meta were also in the top 10, while Tesla now ranks No. 16, according to the National Foundation for American Policy, a nonpartisan think tank focused on trade and immigration issues.

More H-1Bs visas were granted to software developers last year than for any other position.

“The H-1B visa is like the Swiss Army knife of visas. It’s used for a lot of different purposes,” said John Skrentny, a sociology professor at U.C. San Diego who wrote a book on why STEM graduates choose careers outside of the fields they studied. “If you hear people say that the H-1B visa is very important for attracting the best and brightest to the United States, they are correct. At the same time, the H-1B visa is used for cheap labor.”

Ah, cheap labor, the “H-1B visa is used for cheap labor.” It was ironic because many of the Democrats who are as terminally online as their Republican and Nazi counterparts laughed and taunted them. Elon Musk called you guys dumb and uneducated.

Democrats sarcastically said, “where did you think highly skilled computer science and engineering degrees would come from, Alabama?” I laughed at that myself, they picked the wrong state for that joke. My father had worked at JPL so I knew the punchline to that one.

Of course, only a certain subsection of the internet knew that is exactly where they came from and the MAGA replied, “yes, that is where they come from,” historically.

It was saddening to see that many Americans of either political faction did not know their own history and allowed people like Elon Musk tell them there are no highly skilled workers in the United States.

For Elon Musk their idol to tell Americans that historically the United States does not have a computer science, engineering or space program that is not organically American. And for them not to be able to counter him intellectually with facts and allow the Democrats to say that there is no Alabama to be proud of and we need the H-1B visa to import those brains in because it can't be grown here is an indictment of the education system.

H1 AND H2 VISAS

Speaking of cheap labor, Migrant Farm workers on H1 and H2 visas are here legally and offer farmers cheap labor. So, why are they being rounded up by armed ICE in masks and no ID's, with unmarked vehicles, who patrol the streets in hordes asking every Latino looking person show them their papers? Maybe ask Mitch McConnell who is currently trashing the Agriculture Appropriations bill and trying to gut the Farm Bill since September when it expired.

On the September list is to fund the government by September 30, when current funding expires for the US Department of Agriculture (USDA) and across the federal government. A failure to fund the government by September 30 would result in a government shutdown, significantly impacting USDA's ability to serve farmers, ranchers, and stakeholders nationwide.

Meanwhile, Congress is now nearly 7 years removed from passing a full farm bill. Earlier this year, President Trump signed the so-called One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBA, P.L. 119-21) into law, which slashed SNAP benefits by nearly $186 billion and directly reinvested more than $50 billion of that to further increase farm subsidies to the largest, wealthiest farmers, while programs that support the vast majority of farmers and rural communities were excluded from the bill entirely. The inclusion of a handful of traditional farm bill programs in budget reconciliation has severely diminished the likelihood that Congress will pass a comprehensive and fair farm bill this year, or at all this Congress. September in Washington, DC: FY26 Appropriations, Shutdown, and Farm Bill

The same white Americans (and Latinos for Trump, my favorites) who put Trump into office seem oblivious to the fact that Trump has veered away from America First to embrace many Arab nations and welcome Socialist countries. He has taken $40 million from American farmers and given that money to Socialist Venezuela. His best friends are communist North Korea and Russia leaders.

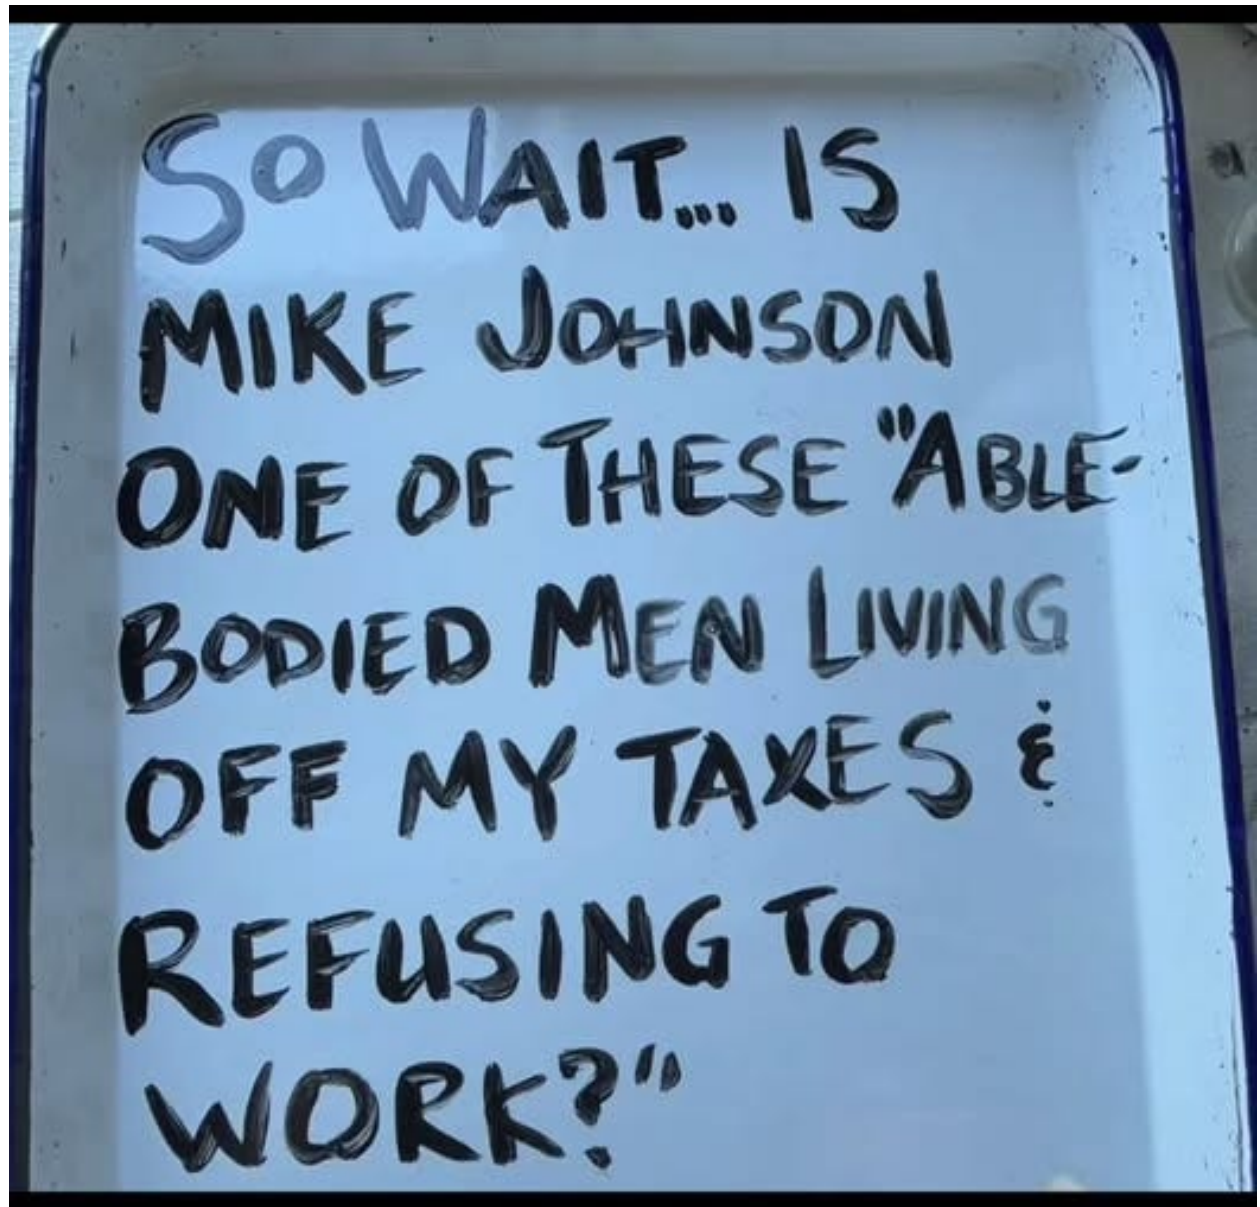

His policies are extrajudicial, unconstitutional, treasonous, anti-family, anti-working class, anti-middle class, anti-American, anti-veteran, pro-billionaire and anything but America First. Nothing like this has ever been seen before in American history.

For the first time in the constitutional republic has the government bought shares in a publicly owned company (Intel) this of course we all know is called Communism. But his rabid supporters who against all reason refuse to learn the definition of the words (Socialist, Democratic Socialist, Communism, Maoism, and Stalinism) did not recognize what happened with Intel as communism.

Mike Johnson is A Welfare Queen

The government has been shutdown and Congress is still getting paid. Somehow a subsegment of society has been convinced to use this time to taunt the underclasses for living off of the government instead of congress who live off of the taxpayers money without working.

Why is Mike Johnson getting free socialized meals and free socialized healthcare and will receive free socialized benefits for the rest of his life once he leaves office? Yet he passes legislation that bans constituents from receiving these exact same benefits? No one on public assistance got paid during the government shutdown except him and the other members of congress.

Class struggle is a real problem. The United States was formed and separated from Great Britain for exactly these reasons. As a former tutor in high school and in college, it is important to learn the meaning of words. Not just for tests but for when an authoritarian takes over your country. If you have members of congress living off of socialism telling you that socialism is bad for you there is a problem and its not socialism.

Operation Paperclip

There is a funny but prescient line in the animated show Archer where the mother says that all of the nazis went to work at NASA and other high paying intellectual government jobs after the war. Archer's mom explains, "Just walk into NASA sometime and yell, 'Heil Hitler.' Whoop. They all jump straight up."

Archer, 2009

She is talking of course about Operation Paperclip a secret United States intelligence program in which more than 1,600 German scientists, engineers, and technicians were taken from former Nazi Germany to the US for government employment after the end of World War II in Europe, between 1945 and 1959; several were confirmed to be former members of the Nazi Party, including the SS or the SA.

Hitler (and Mussolini) said his policies were to benefit the working class and the common folk, that is to he first appealed. The same messages that are used today were his platform. Hitler told the Germans going through economic hardship that the Jews were too rich and haughty, and we all know the rest.

Sociology

Today of course, the competition is a little different. The African-American has access to major universities and can earn advanced degrees (they also could during The Great Gatsby times but at segregated schools) there is also the sports baller who marries the white wife and the rappers, and the film stars without sounding too stereotypical but generalizing statistically wealth growth since The Great Depression.

The Asians span across multiple arenas and consider themselves white adjacent. Whether they are considered white adjacent by others depends upon the geographical location and socioeconomic class of the observer.

Latinos occupy an area of bilingual stratification that Asians also carry out along with the opted into white adjacent moniker depending upon their socioeconomic class. The bilingual stratification allows Latinos to cater to entire populations who only speak Spanish.

Ironically enough it is these populations that Trump's ICE seeks to destroy, including the H1 & H2 Visa Migrant Farm workers who are here legally. What is not happening is the socioeconomic class of blacks having an affect on how they are perceived or how they are stereotyped by whites and other races of any class system. The mass appropriation of black culture could be to blame.

Black Online White In Real Life

All of the above mentioned races have appropriated black culture to such an extent that using black slurs and black slang online (not in real life) has become their internet identity. In order to appropriate black culture they would need blacks to stay in the stereotypical fashion in which they found them. The upward mobility of African-Americans does not benefit their minstrel show physical embodiment of black bodies.

This is true especially among groypers and certain subsets of MAGA which is interesting since they mostly have avowed to despise blacks and their culture.

A white “rapper”, named Jantz (full name Greg Jantz), released a song and music video with a country singer that called for public lynchings in September 2025. The song, titled “Hang ‘Em Up High at Sundown”, sparked widespread outrage. Over a banjo riff, the chorus of “Good vs Evil” from MAGA rapper Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn repeats instructions for hanging people at “sundown,” an apparent reference to “sundown towns” that violently enforce racial segregation.

MAGA rapper Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn in video for “Hang ‘Em Up High at Sundown” September 15, 2025

The song calls for “a big tall tree and a short piece of rope” to “hang ‘em up high at sundown” and “leave ‘em swinging so the folks all know you don’t mess around in our town.” A white “rapper” known for viral anthems supporting Donald Trump and Republican officials has released a music video with a country singer calling for public lynchings.

Over a banjo riff, the chorus of “Good vs Evil” from MAGA “rapper” Forgiato Blow and country singer JJ Lawhorn repeats instructions for hanging people at “sundown,” an apparent reference to “sundown towns” that violently enforce racial segregation.

The release of the song coincided with the discovery of a Black college student, Trey Reed, found hanging from a tree at a Mississippi university (Delta State University). Whether the death is related has yet to be determined.

What people from around the world found equally amusing and disturbing was the fact that: 1. MAGA has a white “rapper”, and 2. MAGA appropriates black culture to talk about hanging black people. It was of course tragic that this college student lost their life in what appears to obviously not to be a suicide at all.

But for the white MAGA “rapper” as he likes to call himself and the other of his kind to constantly appropriate black culture is oddly unsettling considering that they use it to attack the people they stole it from. The hand gestures and body language is not something that comes organically to them and it looks awkward and forced.

Their audience demands this and finds them cool and they are extremely popular. This theme would have to be dissected and discussed on a sociological level and also from a psychological and psychiatric standpoint that cannot be covered in this essay. It is obviously a psychiatric aberration that would need to be analyzed in a medical journal.

This has been an amusing albeit disturbing aspect of MAGA culture. They have completely appropriated black culture online including calling themselves and others the “N” word. Black people continue to ignore them, repulsed at first, but now seeing it as a white peoples issue that is not their concern. Different factions of MAGA seem to be addressing the issue. Seemingly seeking to appoint Nick Fuentes the leader of the groypers as the natural replacement of Charlie Kirk which is interesting since they were always enemies.

Liberals and leftist really have no stake in it and have rightfully removed themselves from the fray. I wish they had removed themselves 10 years ago and never engaged with MAGA. Engaging with MAGA gave them legitimacy to their audience which is something you never want to do with extremist movements. Write one article, which covers everything that needs to be said and never touch the subject again. Giving them attention is the one thing they want to stay relevant.

Farmers Lives Matter

The first order of business for MAGA was destroying USAID which lost U.S. Farmers $350 million dollars immediately. The Republicans told the sheeple that this was necessary because the Democrats were evil and used it for sex trafficking and other nefarious purposes. Unfortunately throughout history the Democrats fight for farmers and the farmers continue to vote Republican.

Sometimes I believe that no one hates working and middle class farmers more than Republicans. I fought for the 2018 U.S. Farm Bill and worked with lobbying groups (Industrial Hemp Crops) and when I say that Republicans hate working class and middle class farmers, I mean they despise them.

Even in the Farm Bill that is being worked on during the Government shut down, you can see that the Republicans have gutted every farmer with the exception of the very wealthy ones. The 2018 Farm Bill expired September 30, 2025. The extension has been working on for that time and things are not going well. The Democrats are making every concession, but the Republicans seem to be going out of their way again to run American farmers.

If you go to farmers.gov and look up information on the Farm Bill extension since it expired September 30, 2025 it says:

“Due to the Radical Left Democrat shutdown, this government website will not be updated during the funding lapse. President Trump has made it clear he wants to keep the government open and support those who feed, fuel, and clothe the American people.”

The Democrats (liberals, neoliberals, progressives, moderates) are neither radical or left nor are they responsible for the shutdown. On Friday, the Democrats went in again asking for another extension to the Farm Bill (the USDA extension is the SNAP extension —this money goes to the farmers, if SNAP gets turned on, the U.S. farmers get paid. SNAP pays the U.S. farmers through the USDA.) Republicans have also posted their same childish and derisive message on the USDA website.

I am fed up with this partisan performative politics. People have farms and we need to keep the farms running. I do not care if Republican or Democrat or Klingon let us get the country open for the sake of the farmers.

I do not care about TikTok influencers or X e-girls in blackface or whatever is happening. I understand that people use sensationalism and racism sells and being a nazi edgelord is cool and being a National Socialist even if you are a Canadian Jew is the rizz. I get it all but the problem right now is not black welfare queens the problem is farmers. We need to get things moving because some of us have farms. Some of us have families to feed and we need to get the Department of Agriculture to hold up their end of subsidies that they owe us.

So if you are any kind of influencer, the farmers of America are begging you to please help us and reach across the aisles of bipartisanship and get the country open for the farmland and ask ICE to stop attacking farms that have legal Migrant Workers here on legal H-1 and H-2 Visas. If they come to farms and want to show papers can they please look at the authentic visas that are given to the migrant farm workers so that we can continue to feed this country.

The United States Farm Bill expired on September 30, 2025 from 2018 and we need to get an extension and also get a new Farm Bill. Right now we have a very special person who is holding it up, you all may know this person

The hold up is the good gentleman of Kentucky, Mitch McConnell who helped to add the Hemp crop to the 2018 Farm Bill. He has decided that he does not want Hemp in the new Farm Bill. And the Kentucky farmers have decided that they do not want him anymore unless he stops his ridiculous antics. He looks like he was bought by big alcohol.

Mitch McConnell Helped Usher in the Hemp Industry; Now He is Working to Effectively Kill It

As Congress moves toward passage of an appropriations bill that includes funding for the USDA and FDA, a fight over whether to regulate or ban products containing cannabinoids derived from hemp is putting Kentucky's two Republican senators at loggerheads and leading hemp advocates to ask: What happened to Mitch McConnell?

Then-Senate Majority Leader, McConnell led the push to federally legalize hemp in the 2018 farm bill, but has since changed his tune. In 2025, the octogenarian solon allied himself with arch-prohibitionist Representative Andy Harris (R-MD), chair of the House Appropriations Agriculture-FDA subcommittee, to champion language that would essentially ban hemp-derived cannabinoids—delta-8 THC, delta-9 THCA, CBD, CBDA, CBC, CBG—whose growth has exploded since 2018, even as the overall hemp market first retrenched and then rebounded after a 2019 “hemp rush” glut.

The legalization of hemp in the 2018 farm bill had “an unintended consequence that has allowed for intoxicating hemp-derived synthetic products to be made and sold,” McConnell said during Senate markup of the appropriations bill. He supported the Harris language, he said, to reflect “the original intent of the 2018 farm bill.”

Largely as a result of that “unintended consequence,” hemp has since burgeoned into a \$28 billion industry employing more than 300,000 people, according to the industry group the U.S. Hemp Roundtable. At the farmgate, the number is much smaller, though still significant. According to the National Agricultural Statistics Service’s 2025 “National Hemp Report,” the value of the national industrial hemp crop was $445 million in 2024. That suggests a lot of value—and jobs—were added between the farmgate and the store shelf.

While there are a number of varieties of industrial hemp production—for seed, for fiber, for oil, and for grain—the production of floral hemp (flowers or buds) is the real cash cow, accounting for $386 million, or more than 80 percent of the farmgate value of all industrial hemp production. And the vast majority of that product goes into hemp-derived cannabinoid products.

“A hemp ban will lead to the collapse of a growing U.S. industry, taking away consumer choices, killing jobs, and punishing farmers,” the Roundtable said in an alert urging members to contact Congress to kill the hemp provision.

Facing a threat from fellow Kentucky Republican Senator Rand Paul to block the entire appropriations bill if the provision was not killed, McConnell and Senate Agriculture Appropriations Committee chair, North Dakota Senator John Hoeven, agreed earlier this fall to remove it from the Senate version of the bill. But the Harris language remains included in the House version of the bill, and McConnell has signaled that he remains determined to see the ban enacted through other legislative vehicles.

While such an action remains a threat to the industry, the main battle right now is over the agriculture appropriations bill, where the fate of hemp hangs in the balance ahead of negotiations between the House and Senate in conference committee.

McConnell has long positioned himself as a champion of Kentucky agriculture, but his switch to a prohibitionist stance on hemp products has the state's hemp farmers worried that he is going to throw them and their businesses under the bus.

It has been boom and bust for Kentucky hemp farmers since the passage of the 2018 farm bill. In 2019, more than 26,000 acres were licensed for hemp production, but by 2021, the number had declined by more than half, to 11,500 acres. Since then, the number of acres licensed for hemp production has hovered around 5,000 acres a year.

The number of acres actually planted with hemp declined in a similar fashion. In 2020, 5,000 acres were planted, but in 2021, 2022, and 2023, fewer than 2,000 acres of hemp bloomed in the Bluegrass State. Only in 2024 did the decline begin to reverse, with the area under cultivation climbing slightly to 2,700 acres. Nearly half (46 percent) of that crop was floral hemp.

That bumpy ride is attributable to three main factors: overproduction and price collapse (the value of CBD-rich hemp biomass declined by 80 percent between 2019 and 2020), lack of processing capacity to turn raw hemp into CBD oil, and regulatory confusion (the FDA never provided a clear legal framework for the sales of hemp-derived CBD products). Now, the industry faces an even more dire future if Congress bans hemp-derived cannabinoids.

In a late September letter to McConnell written by the Kentucky Hemp Association, dozens of hemp farmers warned that recriminalizing hemp derivatives would crush them. These farmers represent a hefty percentage of the state's 138 hemp farmers licensed this year.

"If Congress moves to eliminate the end markets that make our crop viable, we will suffer immediate and catastrophic consequences," the farmers wrote. "We have taken out loans, hired the necessary help, planted the crop, and contracted with processors and/or brands. Any legislative change that pulls the rug out from under this market—especially mid-season—is a direct blow to our farms, families, and rural communities."

The 58 farmers, who have contracted hemp crops this year, told McConnell that "hemp is the foundation of our diversified, sustainable farm operations that helps us weather tough commodity cycles, diversify away from tobacco and empower profit in an uncertain economy." The 2018 farm bill legalizing hemp provided them with a new crop with "real economic opportunity" for the "first time in decades."

And that opportunity comes precisely from hemp-derived consumer products—not the rope and fiber previously associated with industrial hemp production. The U.S. Hemp Roundtable general counsel, Jonathan Miller, told Marijuana Moment after the farmers' letter was released that hemp cannabinoid farming accounted for 87 percent of the hemp grown in the state. "We are very hopeful that Senator McConnell will listen to these farmers—who are relying on the language he inserted in the 2018 Farm Bill for their livelihoods," Miller added.

"There's been a huge influx of hemp beverages that's become a really exciting new market for hemp farmers to share their wares and so we've seen, all across the country," he said in a separate interview. "You go to liquor stores, or sometimes convenience stores, and purchase these hemp beverages, and this legislation out there, the McConnell legislation, or over

Instead of recriminalizing hemp cannabinoid products, which would “empower the illicit market and destroy American farm income in the process,” the farmers called for “responsible regulation” of the crop.

“We support age restrictions along with uniform testing, labeling and packaging requirements, all of which are reflected in Kentucky’s award-winning laws and regulations. But outright prohibition is not the answer, and it will not make anyone safer,” they wrote.

“We are proud of what we grow. We are proud to be building a domestic supply chain for an American crop, which is catalyzed by the cannabinoid market. At this time we are asking you, respectfully but firmly: Do not criminalize our harvest. Protect our farms. Keep Kentucky’s hemp market legal, safe, and effective. Let us prove once again that Kentucky leadership is the answer to bad actors and unsafe products by enforcing and enriching the robust regulations that have set Kentucky apart and ahead of all others.”

What to do about hemp and its derivatives is a complex and convoluted conundrum, but right now, the question before Congress is really pretty simple: whether to prohibit or regulate. Mitch McConnell remains a key voice in this debate. Will he heed his farm sector constituents or will he side with the prohibitionists? McConnell has a legacy of protecting state agricultural interests; it would tarnish that legacy if he ended his career in Washington by destroying hemp farmers back home.

Senator Mitch McConnell was one of the few Republicans who supported agricultural issues. He helped solidify the 2018 U.S. Farm Bill and added Industrial Farming Hemp to that bill. Republicans are the majority leaders with the House, Senate, Supreme Court, and the Executive branch. The Democrats have no power over any aspect of government right now yet if the Republicans say its the Democrats fault their base believes them.

MAGA will believe them just like that movie Divergent where you give the masses the injection of brainwashing and they believe whatever you want. For a group of people who did not get the jab, MAGA got something injected in them that makes them reject the truth about government even when it is staring them right in the face and is harming them.

The Great Gatsby

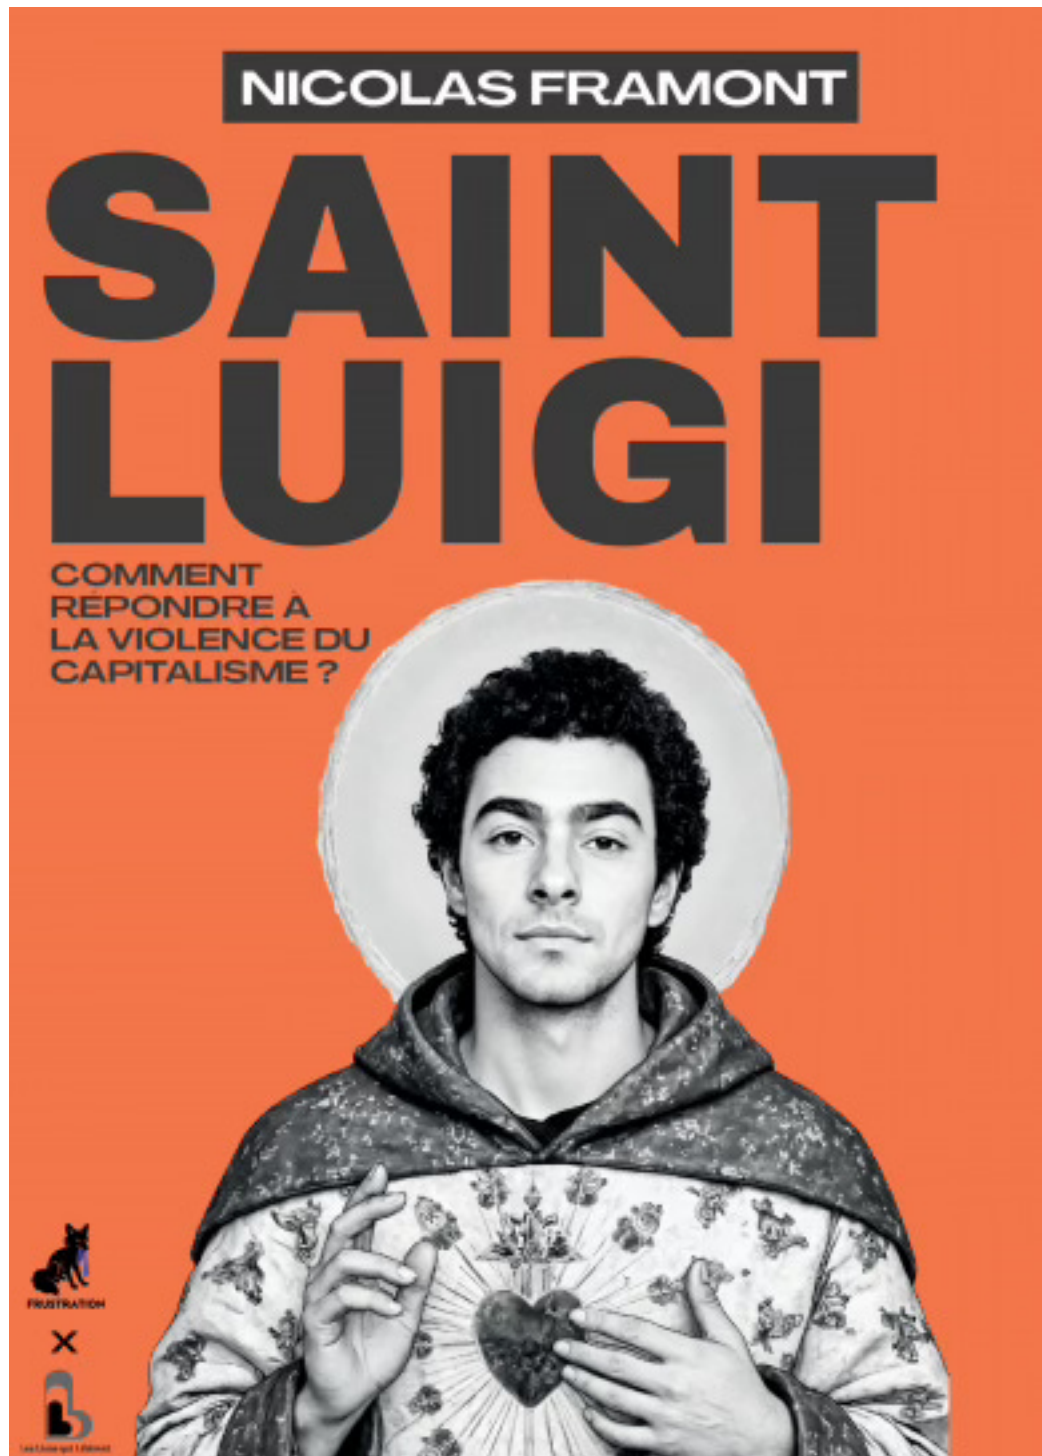

Yet, as I said, farmers almost always vote Republican. Fitzgerald wrote his novels for these farmers and had hoped they would one day form their own political alliances and not bow down to the suits. To this day they bow down to the suits and now we see them worship and idolize the suits. When MAGA play dress up they are the rich in The Great Gatsby and they do not see the poor whites in the book or the movie.

They do not see their own people, working at Starbucks, building cars, as plumbers, farmers, electricians. Socials has it so they are always so busy looking at the dangerous “coloreds” that they do not see their own people. Trump has laid a sledgehammer to the Constitution and to social programs created in the 1930’s designed to benefit veterans, farmers, blue collar workers, and the descendants of the The Great Depression. Yet somehow his voter base has been convinced these programs are being abused by welfare queens and illegal Mexicans. Nothing could be further from the truth but propaganda being what it is these days, truth is not allowed into the narrative.

Is Healthcare Worth Dying For?

Will healthcare be worth fighting for? Once the French were tired of being taken advantage of by the rich they invented the guillotine. How much exactly can Americans take from the rich and corrupt government before they actually rise up and revolt? They revolted against the British and had the Tea Party at Boston for religious freedom and No Taxation without Representation. That is how the country was founded. Yet what is happening today is far worse. The Supreme Court has not had a real vote since Trump took office. They have been using a system called Shadow Dockets which can get them impeached eventually. Shadow Dockets is not a real vote it is extrajudicial.

Power dynamics. Can Luigi Mangione, the alleged perpetrator of the murder of the CEO of United Healthcare, be made a hero? While he is being elevated to the status of a popular culture icon, this moment reveals the underlying dynamics at play: while the bourgeoisie has never held such sway, it has also never generated so much hatred.

Before cutting Medicare and Medicaid the regime made sure to get a scapegoat with graphic visual images across all media to make it clear what the penalty would be if you revolted against the system and became violent for losing your health insurance.

Seeks Death Penalty*

Kill a health insurance executive? The death penalty, state terrorism charges, first degree murder. You will have no food, no shelter, no health care and you will like it. $200 million for a new ballroom, gold plated awnings in the White House, another $100 million for a new jet. Cancer research? Zero dollars. Health care? Zero dollars. Housing? Zero dollars. Infrastructure? Zero dollars. Veterans? Zero dollars. Children's Daycare? Zero dollars. Israel? Subsidized healthcare, subsidized daycare, subsidized education in the United States and Israel, subsidized housing. Total dollars sent to Israel this year alone? $987 million dollars. Total money spent on United States citizens this year? Less than zero dollars. Venezuela? $40 million dollars. Amount of money just cut from Medicare and Medicaid healthcare for seniors, children, disabled, and single moms, veterans? In 2019 it was Medicare $845 billion and Medicaid $241 billion. They can insist that the money goes to illegal aliens but it does not it goes to exactly the people above listed: Seniors, children, disabled, single moms, and veterans. The tax cuts that millionaires and billionaires receive exceeds the $845 billion mark. This is what class warfare looks like. I can think of no better example.

USDA In Disarray

Next in line, the regime went to California and deliberately destroyed millions of crops there which make up almost 3% of the GDP of the United States. More farm land destroyed, and of course more legal Migrant Farm Workers hauled off illegally by ICE. Wow, somebody does not like farmers, I wonder why and what the heck does any of this have to do with The Great Gatsby?

Followed by SNAP. Not the SNAP as TikTok white ladies in black face and deep fake AI clips will tell you is for obese black ladies with 8 kids and 12 babies daddies buying lobster. But the SNAP which is ran by the United States Department of Agriculture and has always been a subsidy program for U.S. farmers and earns them upwards to $80 million a year.

Next to go was The Free Lunch Program which surprise! Also a USDA subsidy program for U.S. farmers and earns them close to $40 million a year. And of course USDA WIC (Women Infant Children) a U.S. farmers subsidy program which earns U.S. farmers close to $15 million per year. The U.S. Department of Agriculture created these program to feed among others, rural Appalachians, and those hit hard by the Great Depression and to provide guaranteed income to U.S. Farmers. At the time of the inception of these programs there were no black welfare moms, or Mexican illegal immigrants collecting lobster money. There has been a work requirement since 1964 and you have always had to be a citizen.

1939 – The First Food Stamp Program

The idea for the first Food Stamp Program (FSP) is credited to various people, most notably Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace and the program's first Administrator Milo Perkins. The program operated by permitting people on relief to buy orange stamps equal to their normal food expenditures. For every $1 worth of orange stamps purchased, 50 cents worth of blue stamps were received. Orange stamps could be used to buy any food. Blue stamps could only be used to buy food determined by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be surplus.

The first recipient was Mabel McFiggin of Rochester, New York on May 16, 1939. The first retailer to redeem the stamps was Joseph Mutolo, and the first retailer caught violating the program was Nick Salzano in October 1939. Over the course of nearly 4 years, the first FSP reached approximately 20 million people at one time or another in nearly half of the counties in the United States, peak participation was 4 million, at a total cost of $262 million. The program ended in the spring of 1943 "since the conditions that brought the program into being--unmarketable food surpluses and widespread unemployment--no longer existed."

"We got a picture of a gorge, with farm surpluses on one cliff and under-nourished city folks with outstretched hands on the other. We set out to find a practical way to build a bridge across that chasm."

Milo Perkins

1964 – Food Stamp Act

On Jan. 31, 1964, President Johnson requested Congress to pass legislation making the FSP permanent. Secretary Orville Freeman had submitted proposed legislation to establish a permanent FSP on April 17, 1963. The bill that was eventually passed by Congress was introduced by Congresswoman Sullivan.

Among the official purposes of the Food Stamp Act of 1964 (PL 88-525) were strengthening the agricultural economy and providing improved levels of nutrition among low-income households; however, the practical purpose was to bring the pilot FSP under Congressional control and to enact the regulations into law.

Mitch McConnell holds Farm Bill hostage

2018 Farm Bill compromises not only USDA SNAP and its millions of dollars in subsidies to farmers, but farm programs, food inspection, animal and plant disease protection, rural development, and protecting federal lands. The USDA has always had a safety net during a government shutdown to release funds to the farmers and the SNAP benefits. But at the time of this update, the Supreme Court had blocked the back-up funds to be released.

The story of the farmers that benefit from the USDA SNAP program I do realize would make a boring TikTok. I am sure for any MAGA readers this whole topic would make for a boring TikTok all of this is boring. We all have a shortened attention span and are unable to focus for longer periods of time. I genuinely think AI video should be illegal. The most obviously societally corroding invention maybe ever created. Just an instant tool of widespread distrust and mass psychosis. The actual truth when told calmly, with no political agenda, simply to be informative is actually quite boring for this time we live in.

These campaigns on social media are not meant to inform they are merely sensationalism and props for propaganda in very short clips. This style of clips are used to interrogate and brainwash prisoners at Guantanamo Bay and other black op sites and they work fantastically for the Socials but of course Thiel would know that. The disinformation campaign surrounding these subsidy programs for farmers has very clear sources such as Bannon's Internet Research Agency and The Heritage Foundation which have been name checked ad nauseam for the last decade yet the MAGA masses refuse to make the connection.

Some are saying the reason why the farmers land and water is needed is the data centers. I wish it were a conspiracy theory but unfortunately bankrupting farmers has been such a clear and deliberate act of this regime one can think of no other reason why this government would keep undermining farmers in such a systematic manner.

BREAKING: OpenAI is requesting US government support to help guarantee financing for the massive investments in AI chips and data centers it needs for expansion, per Bloomberg.

Now we see that instead of the U.S. Farmers being subsidized the data centers need to be subsidized. I guess it wasn't a conspiracy theory after all. Socialism and government handouts are okay if it is OpenAI and Tesla but not for actual poor people, seniors, children, the disabled, veterans, or rural farmers.

For all the tech people complaining about Mamdani I would like to point out that a Federal Backstop for unfettered risk capital deployment into data centers for the benefit of OpenAI shareholders is actually a much worse form of socialism than free buses. OpenAI has been asking for a bailout for quite some time and it is a dangerous precedent.

Most have been so busy crying over the free buses and commenting on how ugly Mamdani's wife is that they are missing the OpenAI corruption and how it correlates to ENRON and the 2008 Great Depression that left everyone (blacks and whites equally) homeless, jobless with only the banks bailed out.

Below is Peter Thiel's email to Zuckerberg and Andreessen in January 2020 predicting socialism.

Tl;dr too much student debt and lack of affordable housing keeps young people with negative capital for too long. And without a stake in the capitalist system, they will turn against it. the rich get richer. the poor get poorer. eventually the poor vote for socialism. what don't we understand about this?

The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck centers on the Joad family, hardworking farmers who have lost everything in the Oklahoma Dust Bowl in the 1930s. Seeking better opportunities, they decide to make the arduous trek to California. Their situation, however, fails to improve as the Joads struggle to find work. At one point, Tom Joad (played by Henry Fonda), the eldest son and an ex-convict, attends a meeting about unions. The event is raided, and Tom accidentally kills a guard while trying unsuccessfully to protect his friend Casy. Wanted by the authorities, Tom is forced to leave the family to escape arrest.

Pocket Watch The Poor

They pocket watch the poor and cart count a mother of three on SNAP. The Pentagon fails another audit and the same people do not care. Here is another TikTok by a groyper, a nazi or Republican influencer in blackface showing us what a SNAP has in their cart. The country lets the wealthy write off private jets. I genuinely don't care. The Pentagon has failed 7 audits.

The Pentagon “lost” over a trillion dollars in 2025 but you’re pocket watching SNAP recipients which accounts to .04% of possible misuse? There use to be a time when Republicans would pocket watch the Pentagon, where are these Republicans? Can someone bring these Republicans back, we need them.

These new Republicans and Libertarians who blindly trust the government simply because they are on the red team and wear a MAGA hat are creepy and weird. Is this the acceleration plot to destroy the entire country so that it is inhabitable? Well, good job it is all working according to plan.

The Pentagon cannot account for $35 Trillion. Nor can it account for 63% of its 4 Trillion in assets. Apparently the Pentagon is too big to fail Pentagon Cannot Account for \$35 Trillion. But lets focus on the SNAP recipients, not the veterans and the disabled, just you know those other ones. $35 Trillion would buy tons of lobster. I guess dressing up in black face with a black accent would not get as much attention and earn any revenue on X or TikTok if you talk about the Pentagon.

There was a time when the Republicans would talk about the corruption of these agencies. In fact I remember a call to “drain the swamp” but that was merely a polarization weapon and a Us vs Them manipulation tool that led to the “Democrats bad Republicans good, liberals want us all dead” dichotomy that resulted in a brain dead boring anti philosophy and a total lack of free will.

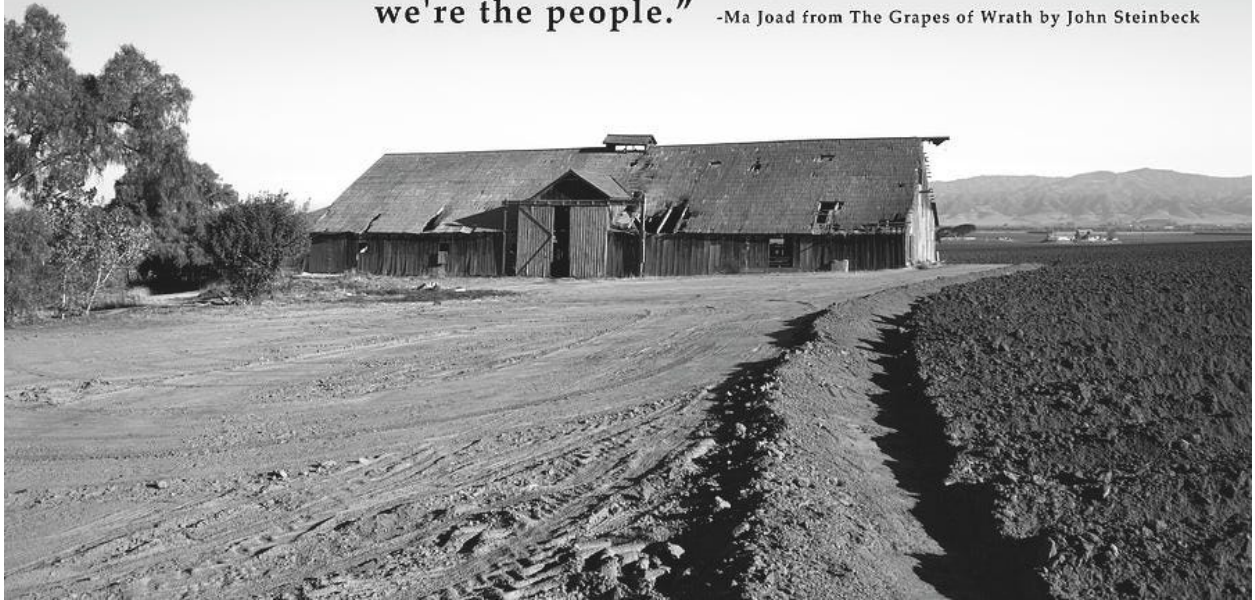

Independent thinking in the Republican party has died and that is so dangerous. MAGA and all of it's members will believe anything they are told up to their own detriment and harm. The working class of the new Republican party are willing to die for the rich members. Libertarians are taking advantage of the disarray and using the confusion to make inroads. The middle class will not be able to buy homes or get jobs but I guess it will all be worth it as long as everyone can use the “N” word on the internets.

Farm land was once vast and plentiful in the United States it was an honest living. With all of the rural hospitals closed (data centers do not need hospitals) and the government shut down dragging on we have very little numbers on the suicide rate of the farmers. The last anyone had heard it was skyrocketing. Hard to confirm exact numbers since the Republicans dismantled all of the government sites that report statistics.

Now let me be clear when I say “farmer” - I do not mean a backwater hayseed wearing dungarees, that is not what farming is any more. It is a huge investment and requires high tech equipment. Labor (Migrant Farm workers here legally on H-1 and H-2 visas) because no one uses illegal farm workers its not worth the risk. The migrant farm program is legal and works just fine. If white laborers wanted to do back breaking work they would have stayed sharecroppers but they matriculated out of that much to their happiness and honest labor after the Great Depression.

"Rich fellas come up an' they die, an' their kids ain't no good an' they die out. But we keep a'comin'.
We're the people that live. They can't wipe us out;
they can't lick us. We'll go on forever, Pa, 'cause
we're the people." -Ma Joad from The Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck

The Grapes Of Wrath by John Steinbeck 1939

The modern system of large-scale migrant farm work has its roots in the 1942 Bracero Program, which brought millions of Mexican laborers to the United States for temporary agricultural work during World War II.

However, migrant farm labor has a much longer history in the U.S., with enslaved Africans being the first major source of agricultural labor. After the Civil War, sharecropping and tenant farming systems continued to rely on a largely impoverished and often migrant agricultural workforce.

Key historical developments

- 1600s:

The foundation of large-scale U.S. agriculture was built on the forced labor of enslaved Africans, beginning in Virginia in 1619.

- Post-Civil War:

Systems like sharecropping and tenant farming continued to rely on a large, often impoverished agricultural workforce, many of whom were mobile and had to find work where they could.

- 1942:

The U.S. and Mexican governments established the Bracero Program to address a WWII labor shortage, formalizing a system of temporary labor contracts for Mexican workers.

- 1943:

The U.S. government also began recruiting West Indian workers from the Caribbean for agricultural work through programs like the War Manpower Commission.

- 1964:

The Bracero Program ended, but employers continued to rely on a migrant workforce, often turning to the H-2 program (now H-2A). This shift, combined with earlier programs, helped solidify the modern migrant farm worker system.

Migrant farm workers are individuals who travel for temporary or seasonal work in agriculture, often following harvests from farm to farm, to support the food supply. They perform tasks from planting and harvesting to packing and are vital to the agricultural industry. Many are foreign-born workers who come on temporary visas through programs like the H-2A visa program, while others are domestic workers who travel within the U.S. for seasonal jobs. They are protected by labor laws such as the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (MSPA), which outlines standards for wages, housing, transportation, and required disclosures.

In the United States, we enjoy abundant, affordable produce year-round. Yet, few realize where that food comes from and who grows it. Each year, around 2.5 million farmworkers and their families labor in fields and factories across the country to bring us fresh fruits, vegetables and other agricultural products that become our food.

Migrant and Seasonal Farm Workers

F*ck Those Farms! Open AI Needs Fresh Drinking Water.

Won't somebody please think of the Data Centers?

OpenAI wanting a federal backstop (government bailout) when the bubble bursts is a huge deal. The farmers need a bailout since Trump took all of their money and even gave $40 million of it to failed Socialist Venezuela (not the same Socialism as Democratic Socialist Mamdani.)

OpenAI are true Silicon Valley welfare queens who started out as a nonprofit offering their services to the government free of charge out of the goodness of their heart; currently they're transitioning to a for profit but with no IPO on the horizon until they can secure some SNAP money.

Or as WSJ put it “OpenAI Would Like To Privatize Profits And Socialize Losses” — Communist profits and Socialist losses! Will you look at that.

Sometimes we accuse our enemies of that very thing of which we ourselves are guilty of.

Gaslighting

The same terminally online people posting vivid imagery of 9/11, and asking, “how the hell does the city that experienced the biggest Islamic terrorist attack in history vote for a Muslim mayor?” will shriek at you not to blame all white men for slavery after posting tons of edgy memes with slurs from their incel fort.

If they have not figured out who is responsible for the 9/11 attack at this point it is probably pointless to try and explain it now. They’ll also assure you black people are responsible for all crime once again the slavery analogy escapes them.

This is a war we are never going to win with these people. They need their racism and hatred and wear it as a badge of honor. They live among us and we have to coexist with them. This essay is covering general topics and is not comprehensive in nature. The sociological and psychiatric aspects would require a deeper dive than my expertise can cover.

But do not let them gaslight you. Looking at statistics, America used to be affordable. Your parents or grandparents could work one job. Not a “side hustle.” Not freelancing at midnight. Not delivering food to people who make more than you. Just one job. And with that one job, they could: Buy a home, support a family, save money, take a vacation once in a while, retire without panic.

If you worked more than 40 hours, people thought something was wrong. Now if you work only 40 hours, people think something is wrong with you.

Housing used to cost 2x your annual income. Now it is 8x to 12x, depending on your city.

And that is if you can even find a home that has not been swallowed by private equity. You could support a family on a single income. Today two incomes barely keep the lights on. A hospital visit did not bankrupt you. Food was not a luxury purchase.

You did not need a financing plan for dental work. Back then, overtime meant you were saving for a boat or a vacation. Now overtime means you are trying not to fall behind. The story we are told is that “people today just don’t want to work.” No. People today are working harder than ever. They are juggling multiple jobs.

They are answering emails at night. They are hustling on weekends. They are selling their time, their energy, their peace. And what do they get in return? Rent that goes up faster than wages. Groceries priced like luxury goods. Healthcare that feels like a hostage negotiation. Retirement that looks more like a fantasy than a plan. The American Dream did not die.

It was priced out, extracted, and sold off to the highest bidder. We are living in the wealthiest country in human history. Yet millions cannot afford a home, a family, or a future. That is not progress. That is failure. Systemic, deliberate failure.

The Resistance

I have lived with friends in France, Germany, Switzerland, England, and Austria. I visited Turkey and Greece. I went to school in Switzerland for two semesters. I have been around real Nazi’s and they are all 100% pure aryans without exceptions. To see British, Americans and Canadians larping online as National Socialists the last decade is almost surreal for me. Seeing Filipinos, Latinos, Jewish people, and Middle Eastern people, even Kanye West calling himself a black Nazi is a real culture shock.

Having lived among actual European Nazis knowing that they would call all of these people subhuman and demand their deaths. I try to appeal to the reasoning of the Americans among these groups and those who are in the MAGA movement to try and focus on the class warfare that we have been fighting for the last 10 years.

I could have titled this The Resistance and talked about how the machines want us all dead, but that would not have caught anyones eye or been as fun. I saw The Great Gatsby and the clothes of the wife of Mamdani that were just like mine in the news and that caught my eye.

Parasite vs Get Out

In a sense Fitzgerald's work is similar to one of my favorite films Parasite (2019) which tackled the same theme brilliantly. I had actually given up on cinema when this film came out. The 2017 dark comedy film Get Out where the racism of the Democrats is exposed this time in a masterpiece that has them wanting to be better at being black people than actual black people which is a problem that Republicans online seem to face today. That being the last noteworthy cinematic achievement which garnered any attention from me. No other film has interested me since Parasite, hopefully something will be released worth watching again.

Despite winning Golden Globe award for Best Motion Picture—Foreign Language, Palmed'Or at Cannes, Oscars for Best Picture, Best Director, Best Original Screenplay, and Best International Feature Film, many Americans had a hard time grappling with why Parasite was an important film. They understood Get Out (race) but they could not understand Parasite (class) and it was not the language barrier. Americans have a hard time understanding class warfare because they have been taught that with the American Dream they can transcend class and move up the social ladder.

The themes of class conflict, social inequality, and wealth disparity are difficult to teach in the United States especially since a regime has been installed that labels such concepts as “woke” at a time when late-stage capitalism has created high rates of unemployment, the crisis of home affordability, and the increasing socioeconomic gap between the wealthy and the poor.

The lack of working-class solidarity in the South Korean film between the two poor families only becomes evident at the end of the film when the rich man expresses his disgust at the smell of the poor family. It is only then that the main character becomes aware of his class identity.

Jay Gatsby and Class Warfare

Fitzgerald felt that the white class system in The Great Gatsby was so strong that no one dared cross that invisible line and every white man knew their place. The black jazz musicians could not eat in a white restaurant or drink in a water fountain but they would travel around the world and marry European women and settle in Paris. This was not an option for the white servers in the club who brought drinks to the upper class patrons. This may explain the rivalry in the car with the jazz musicians and the white chauffeur.

These men were stuck in their class, even though they were white and had the privilege to call the jazz musicians the “N” word, those same black musicians would be on a plane to Italy and Spain the next day and enjoy a freedom and standard of living that was completely inaccessible to the lower and even middle class white men and women of the 1920’s and 1930’s.

Later in life, Fitzgerald complained that unlike Europeans who understood his books, American white people always missed the themes in his book and only focused on the perceived white glamor of The Great Gatsby. The author was often surprised that American white people no matter their socioeconomic class always identified with the billionaires, it puzzled him up to his death.

Classism is central to The Great Gatsby, depicting a rigid social hierarchy that divides characters into old money, new money, and working class. The novel illustrates how classism prevents social mobility, as seen in Gatsby's failure to win Daisy due to his "new money" status despite his wealth. Old money characters like the Buchanans are entitled and careless, while the working class, like the Wilsons, struggle in a life of poverty and are treated with contempt by the upper class.

The Great Gatsby

The novel uses settings like East Egg (old money), West Egg (new money), and the Valley of Ashes (working class) to physically represent this division. Ultimately, the novel suggests that class background, not wealth, determines one's social standing, and that the wealthy elite's carelessness and privilege lead to tragedy for those below them.

Understanding The Great Gatsby and why New York's millionaire owner of Mar-a-Lago used that as the theme for their party while the uninvited lower classes spent their time online seething over a Democratic Socialist in New York running for mayor and his art school wife who want to make buses free and have rent control instead of being angry at the millionaire who spent the last 10 years telling them that he was “one of them” just a regular guy like them. Which is the farthest thing from the truth, as the author F. Scott Fitzgerald went out of his way to try and expound on in his books.

Characters and Class

- Old Money (East Egg): Tom and Daisy Buchanan represent the established elite who have inherited their wealth and status. They are careless, entitled, and feel superior to others, using their money to retreat from the consequences of their actions.
- New Money (West Egg): Jay Gatsby is the “nouveau riche,” having acquired his fortune through questionable means. Despite his immense wealth, he is never fully accepted by the old money elite, who view him with scorn and suspicion.

- Working Class: The Wilsons, George and Myrtle, represent the lower class struggling to survive. Myrtle attempts to escape her class through an affair with Tom, but is ultimately trapped and destroyed by the class system.

Classism in Action

- Spatial Divide: The contrasting settings of East Egg, West Egg, and the Valley of Ashes physically manifest the class divisions and the power dynamics between them.

- The American Dream: Gatsby's pursuit of wealth to win Daisy illustrates a corrupted American Dream. Fitzgerald suggests that social climbing through wealth alone is a foolish and dangerous pursuit because it cannot erase one's past or buy acceptance into the elite.

- Destructive Privilege: The old money elite's sense of superiority and entitlement is destructive. Tom's disdain for Wilson, for example, is fueled by his class-based arrogance. When the Wilsons are destroyed, Tom and Daisy retreat behind their money, leaving others to "clean up the mess".

- Social Exclusion: Gatsby's parties are filled with people who don't even know him, and who abandon him completely after his death. This shows that for the old money elite, Gatsby was just a spectacle, and not a person worthy of genuine connection.

The pool is in Gatsby's backyard and he was laying out on a raft when Wilson shot him. Nick, the chauffeur, butler, and gardener all found Gatsby dead in the pool. The irony was not unnoticed that this was the first time he had decided to use the pool since he bought the house. His servants found him dead. Not family or friends. He did not have any left. Not the married Daisy he was infatuated with. It was her husband who got Gatsby killed to protect his wife, Daisy. None of the party guests really knew who he was. They came for the free food and alcohol and extravagant parties at his wealthy mansion.

Jay Gatsby

Jay Gatsby is shot and killed by George Wilson while relaxing in his swimming pool and waiting for Daisy Buchanan in F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel *The Great Gatsby. Wilson, wrongly believing Gatsby was responsible for killing his wife Myrtle in a car accident. Wilson kills himself after shooting Gatsby. The car was actually driven by wealthy socialite, Daisy who is Tom Buchanan's wife and the man who points George to Gatsby. Gatsby's body is later found floating face down in the water by Nick Carraway, the narrator.

The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald 1925

If F. Scott Fitzgerald were alive today, his working class characters would ride the free buses and welcome rent control. They would not rely on the intellectual analysis of the media class regurgitating hit pieces written by AI conflating Communism, Maoism, and Socialism to prevent them from enjoying the benefits of a social system built to help those who lived from paycheck to paycheck. The Great Gatsby was written in 1925.

The stock market crash was in 1929, the Great Depression was 1929-1933. American white people in The Great Gatsby all knew they would not die as billionaires despite having white skin. Maybe they would be racist in the 1920's and 1930's and it would be expected but they would not be delusional enough to believe that they had more in common with billionaires than working class people of another race just because the billionaires who ran the world were white.

Many verbal battles that night during the Mar-a-Lago Gatsby soiree. Political pundits curious if MAGA if felt they would have been among the rich elite during the 1920-1930's. The way to answer that question is really easy. It was not that long ago, are you among the rich elite now? Your family would not have lost its fortune in that short amount of time.

In Hawaii, as Native Hawaiians we are required to know our genealogy for up to four generations to make sure we are not marrying first or second cousins. Since MAGA take such pride in being white they would know their genealogy up to the 1930's and if they would have been a rich elite. Either way there has to be people in their families or extended families who depend upon medicare or other government benefits or at the very least farmers in their family who need The Farm Bill to be passed out of congress with the Hemp portion intact.

Like clockwork MAGA took to the internet to defend the robber barons and their right to celebrate The Great Gatsby with United States tax dollars in opulent fashion. It showed a pattern of cognitive dissonance that reflects a form of Stockholm syndrome and brainwashing that I attribute to constant scrolling of social media which implants images directly into the brains of these people. There can be no other explanation.

Tax dollars for The Great Gatsby themed soirees at an exclusive country club that they could never earn membership at warms MAGA's hearts. Tax dollars for free buses and rent control that working class MAGA would benefit from is equivalent to a Maoist death camp.

That is the difference between the characters in The Great Gatsby and the MAGA we see today who for some bizarre reason have spent the last decade of political unrest identifying with millionaires and billionaires just because they too are white.

Jay Gatsby in The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald (1925)

I doubt Fitzgerald would be surprised how easy it is to manipulate an entire population by always using race wars to hide class wars in plain sight.
