Secrets and lies rang through the night The Butterfly took wing and flew out of sight Ragged and torn, she ghosted along Unable to love, she danced a new song Wrapped up in flames to keep all away They try and convince her to come back and play Battling fire with fire, they do all they can But Savy's a master and won't fall for their plan The flames grow higher the harder they fight Until all their love, burns everything in sight What's a Butterfly to do when she gets too close to the flames? Fly, fly away and start her own... The book demonstrates how effective storytelling can be achieved without relying on dramatic extremes. Subtle developments and realistic scenarios provide a compelling and credible narrative.
